fired it; but will you please to tell us by what authority or right you state that this was a signal?—A. I stated from the facts I have already stated, and from the additional fact that it was fired into the air, and then from the further fact that it was immediately followed by a large body of negro men coming out of the swamp, armed. I did not state this in my direct testimony, because I did not see it and know it of my own knowledge; but as it is generally known, and as you ask me my reasons for believing it a signal, I state it. Just as soon as that pistol was fired, these young men of the Butler Guards saw coming out of the swamp a number of men with their guns presented. The instant that shot was fired they rushed for the guns, and that moment began a general firing. So from all I heard and from all I saw, I state that the firing of that pistol in the air was a signal.

Q. It is from the fact that a large body of armed men rushed out of the swamp when this pistol shot was fired that you state that it was the signal for these armed men to appear?—A. From that, and from the other facts connected with it.

Q. What other facts?—A. From the manner in which they appeared to act throughout, and all the occurrences which followed.

Q. The occurrences of this day led you to believe that the discharge of the pistol became of momentous importance, because it was the signal for the movement of these men who had arranged this conspiracy and massacre?—A. I think so; that is the ground upon which I base it. A further reason for my believing it to be a conspiracy is that I made the deliberate charge against Cyrus Guillard of murdering Mr. Simmonds, and presented the charge before a trial-justice, who told me it was useless to attempt to arrest Cyrus Guillard, because in the first place the sheriff had already refused to execute warrants for him, and because, also, if arrested, the republican leaders (this was an appointee of Governor Chamberlain who told me this) would not permit the trial to be other than an abortion. Cyrus Guillard was carried around by Mr. Bowen to every political meeting that I ever attended. Mr. Bowen would always get up and make a very conciliatory speech and Guillard would always follow him with a very incendiary one; he would do all he could to stir up the negroes.

Q. [Referring to diagram.] This was the platform where the speakers were? This was the house, and this was the portion occupied by the republican negroes? This pistol was fired in the front here, [indicating a place on the diagram?]?—A. I could not swear as to the exact spot where it was fired.

Q. How far were you from the crowd, two hundred yards or two hundred feet?—A. I have a very bad eye for distances.

Q. Well, what should you think?—A. I will say about two hundred feet from the meeting. I was in front of the church.

Q. What occasion had you to go to that point and stay there?—A. Because I was terribly bored by political speeches and did not want to be bothered with them.

Q. Well, now, the republican negroes, when this shot was fired, began immediately to fall back here [indicating a spot on diagram] into line, assuming a skirmish line, and in an instant were armed?—A. They fell back within about four feet of each other, with their arms, generally convenient to a tree—the trees grow about that distance from each other—and they formed as perfectly straight a line as the trees would render it convenient with their arms.

Q. What number were armed in that way, should you suppose?—A. I was in front of them and under fire, and the number may have looked larger to me than they were, but they looked like a pretty big crowd.

Q. What were the democrats doing at that time?—A. Getting out of the way at the time, with the exception of a few like myself who were fools enough to stand up and get shot.

Q. You say Mr. Bowen said, "Will somebody make peace?" and you called upon the democrats to stop firing?—A. The few democrats that had pistols were endeavoring to reply to the other side who had guns, and I called to them to stop firing.

Q. What was the peril of Mr. Bowen here [indicating a spot on the diagram] from these smallest kind of pocket-pistols, as you call them, which the democratic men or boys were firing?—A. A very small ball ten feet from this point [indicating a spot on the diagram] would have dropped one of us. I walked from the church very deliberately across here [indicating the spot on the diagram] in front of the vestry. A small body of white men had rallied behind this vestry, and I walked in front of the vestry and had this confab with Smith. I came around the vestry, and as I came around I saw Mr. Bowen standing in the crowd with the democrats. He was in great danger, because the democrats had a most despicable opinion of him; but whether it was a mere ruse to get over to the negroes or not, I cannot say. When I went with Mr. Bowen from the democratic ranks to the republican ranks, the negroes were over among the pine-trees, three hundred yards, I should calculate, from the democrats, and they were firing at long range, entirely out of our reach.

Q. Who were these men from Hell-hole Swamp that you spoke of?—A. Farmers, planters. They raised a great deal of stock there.

Q. Colored people?—A. White men, sir.

Q. Were they democrats?—A. I suppose so.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. COCHRANE:)

Q. Why is that called Hell-hole Swamp?—A. It has been called so as long as South Carolina has been in existence, I believe.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. How far did you go when you heard some one say "Shoot the son of a bitch?"—A. I suppose I had to run about three hundred yards, dodging from tree to tree.

Q. How was it you said that Mr. Simmonds got killed?—A. He was shot through the body, as I have reason to believe, when lying on the ground, and was cut in the head with an ax, and his bones broken.

Q. And you sent a buggy to have him brought down?—A. Not particularly him, but others.

Q. In what part of the ground was he at that time?—A. Well, sir, he lay with his head in the vestry-door, his body lying out of the vestry on the road. I saw the location the next morning, and we saw the holes in the ground where he must have been shot after he was lying on the ground. I did not see his dead body until it was brought to the village.

Q. Were you fired upon while you were with these colored republicans?—A. I was, sir. I was fired upon when I was among them.

Q. And you were wounded in the leg?—A. I was chased by bullets while I was running back to my democratic friends.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. COCHRANE:)

Q. Was that the time when you were wounded?—A. I was so excited I could not tell you when I was wounded. It was not a very severe wound.

Q. At what time and under what circumstances did the firing commence?—A. There was a perfect lull from the time I left the vestry with Mr. Bowen until perhaps two minutes after Mr. Bowen and myself had been among the negroes. He seemed to be trying to appease them, and was apparently successful, but Cyrus Guilliard with a party of negroes ran past and urged the others to commence firing again. I remained in the republican ranks for a few seconds while a volley was fired. My intention was to remain with Mr. Bowen, under his safeguard, but when I heard "Shoot the white son of a bitch," I thought it was time to move.

Q. When the rifle clubs came there the next morning what occurred?—A. When the rifle clubs came the next morning they acted as a guard to protect the village. A body of them also went out to the church, and I went with them. They marched to the church, and they marched back again without troubling anybody.

Q. Were the colored people on the ground?—A. There were none on the ground, but we received intelligence of a large body being under arms on a neighboring plantation, and although myself very anxious to attack them, the gentlemen in charge of the rifle clubs would not permit any act of violence whatsoever unless we were first attacked by the negroes. Here let me say when I use the words rifle clubs that I believe these men belonged to the original rifle clubs, who had been recalled together for the occasion.

Q. They could be re-united whenever there was occasion?—A. I do not doubt it.

Q. In regard to these arms that were under the eye of the Butler Guards, I will ask you where were they?—A. Concealed in the chimney of the old house.

Q. Who had concealed them there?—A. My belief is that the negroes had concealed them there as decoys.

Q. And who gained possession of them when the firing began?—A. I believe that both parties made a rush for them. Some were seized by our own men—perhaps all of them—but the same sources from which I get my information lead me also to believe that they were found unfit for immediate use.

Q. They were not in condition to be used effectively?—A. So I am told. I never saw any of these guns, and I am telling only what I heard.

Q. And is that the reason that you spoke of them as being placed there as decoys?—A. That is chiefly the reason.

Q. Then putting these guns in the reach of the democrats at the moment they were assaulted was a part of the conspiracy contrived by the negroes to make more and more effective this atrocious massacre?—A. I think that the object was to get some foolish white democrat to seize these guns and thereby give an excuse to the negroes for attacking them. That is my belief, sir.

Q. Whose house was it in which the chimney was which contained the arms?—A. I believe it was an old refreshment-house commonly to be found near country churches where people come from long distances.

Q. Was anybody in possession at the moment when this signal was given of which you have spoken?—A. O, nobody especially.

Q. Were not the white men in it?—A. White men and negroes, I suppose; I do not know; I was off at a distance; I cannot tell you.

Q. Inasmuch as Mr. Bowen was ignorant of it, you cannot conceive who it was that conceived this conspiracy?—A. From the incendiary character of the speeches of Cyrus Guilliard and Abram Smith and other negro leaders, I have more than reason to believe that there was a determination, as soon as it was found out how popular Hampton was, to stir up strife, in order to create a race-feeling between black and white.

Q. How long has your father been the British consul?—A. He was vice-consul first, and has been consul for this port since 1858.

Q. When did you commence your residence here?—A. I commenced my permanent residence here when I was just twenty-one; exactly nine years ago. It was in 1867.

Q. How long has your father been here?—A. O, my father has been here thirty-five years.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. Were you aware previous to the Cainhoy meeting that there had been several joint discussions between the democrats and the republicans, headed by Mr. Bowen?—A. There had, sir. I was aware of that.

Q. Were you aware that immediately before this meeting, or a short time before, that an understanding or agreement had taken place between democrats and Mr. Bowen that thereafter no arms should be carried to the meetings on either side?—A. There was a general understand to that effect.

Q. You went to Cainhoy on a boat?—A. We did, sir.

Q. Who engaged that boat?—A. The democratic party, it was generally supposed.

Q. You met Mr. Bowen and a few friends of his—you said "negro bullies"—on that boat?—A. Yes, sir. I would add that Mr. Bowen was at his hotel and sent down word for them to wait for him.

Q. You therefore understood from the facts before you that Mr. Bowen was consenting to the joint meeting at Cainhoy?—A. I cannot believe and do not believe that there is any doubt as to the fact.

Q. You saw no arms on that boat in the hands of democrats, and I mean to say arms otherwise than pocket-weapons?—A. I saw no arms whatsoever, and I am prepared to state that there could not have been arms on board without my seeing them.

Q. You saw no organizations on that boat as such?—A. None as such.

Q. No men in uniform or banded together by any apparent tie or title as an organization?—A. None, whatsoever, as an organization.

Q. At Cainhoy you saw arms?—A. Not until the firing began.

Q. At Cainhoy the arms were in the hands of the negroes?—A. Every negro seemed to spring from the bushes, fully armed.

Q. And among the democrats you saw nothing but pistols of a very inferior quality and character?—A. I believe, sir, that I was the last man to leave that ground, with the exception of Delaney, poor old man Simmonds, and Mr. Venning, and I did not even know they were there when I left; and had any man had arms I would have seen them. With the exception of the few arms which may have been in that chimney, where the men, as it was said, found and seized them, and probably ran around the church, the democrats had no guns. I was with the men that stood fire.

Q. But there were no arms taken there by democrats to that spot?—A. No arms were taken there by democrats. I saw them leave the steamboat, and I saw them in the wagons, and there was not a single gun brought out. We marched three miles without a gun.

Q. Neither did you see there the Butler Guards as Butler Guards?—A. I did not, sir.

Q. Or any portion of them acting as a detachment or as a squad of Butler Guards as such?—A. I only know as to their acting as a squad that Duane, an ex-officer of the Butler Guards, told me that they obeyed him.

Q. That is, that they had been members of the Butler Guards?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that they had disbanded?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many members did they have there?—A. I do not know, sir.

Q. Do you know when the Butler Guards were created as an organization?—A. From what I saw in the paper I believed there was an upper ward's organization for defense known as the Butler Guards.

Q. Have you not heard of an old organization of that name here?—A. O, no, sir. The Butler Guards was not one of the rifle clubs.

Q. Was not its organization anterior to the rifle clubs?—A. No, sir; there was an organization of defense in every ward when these riots began.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. I want to know if you saw upon the boat any arms belonging to the white men on the day of the riot.—A. I not only did not see them, but I went down to the steamboat when we were left there, to do picket and hospital duty, and begged the white men for God's sake if they had any arms to give them to us, and we got only two or three pistols.

GEORGE W. CLARK sworn and examined.

By Mr. BANKS:

Question. Do you reside in Charleston?—Answer. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been here?—A. I have been here since 1865.

Q. What is your profession?—A. I was a wholesale grocer. Since 1865 I have held positions as mayor and collector of the port.

Q. What is your age?—A. My age is forty-four.

Q. Were you employed or appointed by the governor of the State to superintend the census?—A. I was appointed by the governor to superintend the census of this county.

Q. In what year was that?—A. It was last year, 1875.

Q. [Handing witness a copy of the census of 1875.] Will you please to look at that paper and see if it is the copy printed by the authority of the State?—A. [Examining pamphlet.] I observe that as respects Charleston County, the census which I took, it is correct.

Q. Have you the official return for Charleston City and County?—A. Yes, sir. [Producing original and comparing same with pamphlet.] I notice that the figures are the same.

Q. Will you please state if in the enumeration of the people of the State care has been taken to have a proper enumeration?—A. I can only judge from the state of this county as data. If in the rest of the State it was as carefully conducted as in this county the census was carefully taken.

Q. Will you state briefly in what manner it was taken?—A. Well, I employed the most reliable parties possible, and I saw that they took it correctly. In one instance, where I had reason to believe it was incorrectly taken, I obtained another party and had it retaken.

Q. Have you any means of judging as to the correctness of the enumeration under this census of 1875 as compared with that of the United States on the same territory over which you yourself have gone?—A. My judgment is that when it was taken for the United States it was not taken as correctly as when taken this last time. The inducements regarding enumeration came in such a way as would cause a different taking.

Q. In what respect do you make that distinction?—A. Well, when taken by the United States officers—I think it was taken by the marshal—he would sit in his office and send out circulars to be filled out, and in the nature of such matters there would not be a sufficient number sent out to get the correct census.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. COCHRANE:)

Q. I will just ask you how many men you employed to take this census in the county here?—A. I do not remember the exact number; I think about eight.

Q. To what political party did these eight men belong?—A. I made no distinction. I think they were republicans.

Q. Were they white or colored?—A. Part of each.

Q. You only say that this is correct from the fact that you appointed men whom you believed to be reliable, and you base your statement upon the reports which they made to you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I suppose these eight men had different districts to go over in the county?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they would make reports to you of the number of men, women, and children whom they found?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And upon those returns you made up the census?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have no knowledge as to how the census was made up in any other county than Charleston?—A. I so stated.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. I will ask you, Mr. Clark, if there is any peculiarity incidental to the situation of the State or the people that distinguishes it from the population of any of the Eastern States, or our Middle States, which would affect the general total of the population or affect one class of the people; for instance, the voting population, as compared with the total population? Any general considerations upon that matter, if you can state them, I should like to know.—A. Well, yes; there is one material point in which, for instance, in the population of the New England States there would be a difference from the population; that is, as to their voting population. In New England young gentlemen, when arriving at maturity, emigrate from that section of the country—"go West," as Greeley advised—whereas here the whole voting population remains, you may say, through life. In New England young men leave. The voting population here, consequently, would be larger in proportion to the whole population than up in New England.

Q. How is it as regards what may be termed the country parishes of the State as compared with the city?—A. That same characteristic which pervades New Hampshire and New England generally as respects the South would prevail in the country portion of Charleston County as respects the city. The young men in the county will come to the city, leaving the county with a less number of young men than in the city. Those who are born in the city remain here; the men who are born in the county are drawn here.

Q. Are there any considerable number of the young men of the white population that go into other Southern States?—A. I do not know. If they go at all they go as families, and thus keep the proportion the same.

Q. Have you at any time compared the census of this State, or the census of the city and county of Charleston, with that of the United States, taken in 1870, as to its fullness and correctness?—A. Well, yes, I have, passingly.

Q. Was the last census more full and complete?—A. Yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. COCHRANE:)

Q. Has the mortality of the negroes not been much greater since they were emancipated than when they were slaves?—A. I have heard so. Want of attention to the laws of health has caused much greater mortality among them than before the war. I have reason to believe that they do not increase so much since the war as before.

Q. You are not a native of this State?—A. No, sir; I came from New Hampshire.

Q. Did you come in 1865?—A. I came in 1863, from Georgia.

Mr. BANKS. I present a copy of the News and Courier of issue September 23, 1876, containing resolutions of the Workingmen's Democratic Association of Charleston, on the subject of the employment of labor, which I offer in evidence. They are as follows:

“PREFERENCE, NOT PROSCRIPTION.

“The mechanics and workingmen of Charleston are true as steel, and will follow the standard of Hampton wherever it shall lead them. They have an organization of their own, known as the Workingmen's Democratic Association, and are, with the ward clubs, doing good service in the canvass. At the meeting of the association held on Thursday night the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

“Resolved, That we, members of the Workingmen's Democratic Association, do hereby indorse the resolutions adopted at the last meeting of the sixth ward; and, further, that we insist that democrats should no longer patronize republicans in trade or retain them in employment.

“Resolved, That we make it known to the public that we have in the Workingmen's Democratic Association good, true, capable, able-bodied, and willing-hearted men who are ready to answer to the calls of the executive committee to fill places of labor or trust.

“Resolved, That many of these men have been compelled for months to remain unemployed, and are ready and anxious to earn honestly the necessaries of life, and can and will, if the chance is offered, fill positions such as teamsters, truckmen, warehouse men, porters, shipping-clerks, cotton-samplers, railroad-yard men, wharf and vessel men, laborers in factories, &c., and, in fact, any position requiring muscle and brain.

“Resolved, That we believe that these men amongst us, with a fair education, are better capacitated to fill these situations than most of the republicans now thus occupied.”

Also the News and Courier of issue October 4, 1876, containing a copy of the resolutions on the preference policy passed by the Summerville democracy, which I also offer in evidence. They are as follows:

THE PREFERENCE POLICY—STRAIGHT-OUT RESOLUTIONS OF THE SUMMERVILLE DEMOCRACY.

[Correspondence of the News and Courier.]

“SUMMERVILLE, S. C., October 2.

“At a meeting of the Dorchester democratic club, held at town hall on Saturday the 30th ultimo, Major George Tupper presiding, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

“By Hon. J. I. Middleton:

“Resolved, That the members of the club bind themselves in honor to purchase from or deal in future with no one whomsoever in this place who intends to or shall vote against the candidates nominated by the democratic conventions to fill the Federal, State, and county offices in the next election, except in cases where this cannot be done in consequence of prior contracts.

“Resolved, That this agreement among ourselves is meant to extend to all purchases of goods, wares, merchandise, and provisions whatever, and all future contracts for service or employment, either out-door or menial.

“Resolved, That this engagement shall be deemed to be of force until our country is released from the so-called republican domination that threatens to overwhelm all the bulwarks of our social and political life.

"By Dr. Benj. Rhett:

"Resolved, That the secretary do issue, upon application, to the colored members of this democratic club certificates of membership, (countersigned by the president,) in order that they be recognized and receive the support and patronage of employers.

"By Capt. John C. Minott:

"Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed by the Chair to make such arrangements as may be necessary to secure order and obtain speakers at the meeting to be held at Slan's Bridge, on Thursday next, and confer with a like committee, to be appointed by the republican party for same purposes on that occasion.

LOUIS DETREVILLE, Secretary.

THOMAS S. GRIMKE sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. COCHRANE:)

Question. What is your profession?—Answer. I am a physician.

Q. Practicing in Charleston?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. For what length of time have you been practicing?—A. I have been practicing, sir, for sixteen years.

Q. Are you a native of this State?—A. Yes, sir; and of this place.

Q. What is your age?—A. I am forty-two, sir.

Q. You are a democrat?—A. I am, sir. I should hardly say that I ought to be either; but I profess those principles that I believe to be nearest to what the country requires.

Q. Will you state whether you were at Cainhoj on the day of the riot there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you go up on the boat?—A. I did, sir.

Q. Please to give us in your own language what occurred from the time you left the wharf on the boat until the time the riot was over?—A. Well, sir, on the morning of the 16th of October I left the city of Charleston on the steamer Pocosin; nothing occurred of moment until just before leaving the wharf, when a number of negroes attempted to get upon the boat, and we prevented them from doing so, telling them that the boat was chartered by the democrats, and that unless Mr. Bowen said they could get aboard we could not permit it. Mr. Bowen soon came down and he took four or five of those negro roughs on the boat, and we proceeded to Cainhoj. Everything went on pleasantly enough until Mr. McKinly got up to speak. He got up and made the remark that he came there for the benefit of these people. Just at that moment some little disturbance was occasioned, and directly after there was a pistol fired at the left of the stand; the stand was facing east. Immediately upon the firing of the pistol-shot it was answered by a gun in the woods.

Q. Did you see the man that fired the pistol?—A. I did not see the man, but I heard it. I could not see the man on account of the crowd between me and him.

Q. Locate the place that that shot came from.—A. It came from the left of the stand.

Q. Did it come from the old house?—A. No, sir; but the first shot fired was a pistol-shot. I understood from several persons there that it was in the hands of a mulatto. No sooner had this occurred than there was a rush, and upon looking through the windows of this old house I saw a number of white men in there with guns. This surprised me, because I knew we had gone up there entirely unarmed, which was according to the agreement of our executive committee with the radicals. These men ran right out of the house, and it was not over three minutes after this occurrence that every negro in front of the stand had swept right through the road and gone back of the large building and immediately began firing from that location. After this had been going on six or seven minutes an old negro was killed, who fell against me, the blood spurting from his body on me.

Q. Was it the first shot fired that killed that negro?—A. No; I suppose there were twenty shots before that negro was killed.

Q. He was standing near you?—A. He was, but I did not see him. At the time he was shot we were on a line this way, [illustrating.] The negroes were all over here shooting, [illustrating again.] The first intimation I had that he had been hurt, I saw this old man stagger and I put my hand out to steady him, and as I did this he fell right over against me, and a stream of blood spouted from his chest into the white sand.

Q. That was the only negro killed that day?—A. That was the only negro that I knew of. Before that occurred there was a contest going on between a young man and a negro having a gun. I saw the negro stoop down and try to pick up a brick to strike him with, and I saw the young man try to draw his pistol; but I don't know whether he drew it or not.

Q. Was it near the church that this negro you spoke of was shot?—A. O, no; it was some distance off. He fell on the road a hundred feet from the stand.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. Was that between the stand where the speakers were and where the shots came from?—A. Yes, sir; he was between the firing and might have been shot from the woods. As soon as this negro was killed, we fell back to the vestry-room. There we made a stand for a short time, gathered together all of our men, and then moved down the road to Cainhoy. After reaching Cainhoy we concluded to remain there; we found that these men were missing and we sent back and brought them in. There were four or five of them horribly mutilated. One man named Whittaker that was brought in was not only shot, but he was beat all over his head. They had apparently fired their guns into him and taken an ax and chopped his arm. All the men were horribly mutilated and beaten.

Q. Was old Mr. Semarons your father-in-law?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he killed there?—A. Yes, sir; he was killed there. After all of us had come away he had gone into this vestry-room. I thought he had gone away. I saw him and spoke to him there and would have taken care of him in the road, but in the excitement he went into this place out of mistake. I supposed that he had gone on. We went back immediately for him and found him dead. There was a ball in his temple and a load of buckshot in his arm and his leg was horribly mutilated with a stick or something of that kind; and he had cuts all over his head.

Q. What age was he?—A. Nearly sixty-seven.

Q. How many white men were killed?—A. There were five or six.

Q. How many were wounded?—A. Well, I do not know; I think about fifteen or twenty. Those who were wounded at all and could have got off were beaten in such a way by the negroes that they died from the effects of it.

Q. Were you standing near the old building when the first shot was fired?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say it came from the left of the stand?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see these young men getting any guns in the old building?—A. The first thing that drew my attention was a rushing sound, and, upon looking through the windows, I saw these young men in there with guns in their hands. They went in this building and got these guns, which were concealed there in direct violation of the contract which the radicals made with us.

Q. Was this before or after the shooting?—A. This was after the pistol-shot and after the single shot from the woods.

Q. Immediately after this did you observe these negroes appearing from the bushes armed?—A. I did not see the negroes that were appearing from the bushes at all, because the old house and the stand were between me and that place, but they were shooting. Several shots were fired from the other side through the windows. They were evidently lying behind the building itself. I believe some one did have a gun there, but I don't know who. None of us who went from here had a gun. There was not a gun on the boat.

Q. Did you see any white man with a gun there that day except these young men you spoke of?—A. I saw none at all.

Q. Were you wounded?—A. No, sir; I was not.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. You spoke of an agreement; was that agreement about arms?—A. The agreement was that neither of the parties should carry arms to this meeting at all, so as to insure a quiet and peaceful time.

Q. You went up on the boat and you saw no guns on the boat?—A. There were no guns there at all, sir.

Q. No organization or any part of an organization, or military company, or rifle company, or anything of that sort, on the boat?—A. All of them belonged individually to organizations, but none went up there as an organized band at all.

Q. How many guns do you suppose were shot during the riot?—A. I presume there were fifteen or sixteen that were taken in this old house. You could not see the negroes at all; they were hid in the woods.

Q. Did you see guns in the hands of the negroes during the riot at all?—A. No, sir; they were in regular ambush.

Q. But you saw the guns that were taken from the old house?—A. Yes, sir; they were these Enfield muskets, probably belonging to the State.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. This was a republican meeting at Cainhoy?—A. Well, sir, we have not any republican party here at all; it was a radical meeting. You have a republican party at the North, but we have not got it here.

Q. It was called that by the executive committee of that organization, whatever you call it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What occasion was there, for the democratic party to go there?—A. Why, there was this occasion: They were circulating the most infamous lies throughout the country among the negroes and it was necessary for us to go there to disprove them.

Q. Did not the republicans, or the radicals as you call them, have a right to meet of their own accord for the discussion of their own principles?—A. Certainly, sir.

Q. Were you at the Strawberry meeting?—A. No, sir; I never was at any other joint meeting but that.

Q. Do you know anything about the Strawberry meeting?—A. I know nothing at all about it.

Q. Was there an agreement that there should be no arms carried to Cainhoy?—A. There was, sir.

Q. Who made that agreement with you?—A. The executive committee of the democratic party made that agreement with the opposite party.

Q. Were there any conditions specified or any agreement made that certain organizations or the members of a certain organization should not go; say for example the Butler club?—A. No such agreement was ever made to my knowledge.

Q. Do you know that it was not made?—A. I do not know, sir; but I believe that it was not.

Q. Do you know that the democrats were told that the elements which they were taking to that meeting that day would make trouble?—A. No, sir; I was told distinctly to the contrary.

Q. By the leaders of the radical party or the executive committee of the radical party? Was there any such suggestion or intimation given?—A. No, sir; Mr. Bowen went with us.

Q. It was not suggested by him that the elements transported to that meeting would result in trouble?—A. Not to my knowledge, sir.

Q. Are you positive that these democrats that went up in the boat upon which Mr. Bowen was were not armed?—A. Not with guns.

Q. What do you call arms?—A. They had pistols some of them; the agreement was that we should not carry guns.

Q. You stated that the agreement was that neither party should carry arms?—A. I meant guns.

Q. How large a party of democrats was it?—A. I suppose there was a hundred and fifty.

Q. How many of them were armed with pistols?—A. I do not suppose there were over twenty-five or thirty that I knew anything about.

Q. That you knew about; but do you know that others were not armed?—A. I cannot say, sir.

Q. You do not know then how many were armed?—A. No, sir; I do not know how many were armed.

Q. What sort of pistols had they?—A. These little pocket-pistols.

Q. Revolvers?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And nothing else?—A. Nothing else at all.

Q. There were no members of what was called the rifle clubs in sufficient numbers to be considered representatives of these organizations, or detachments of them?—A. O, yes; I suppose so. A number of men were there and all of them belonged to the companies; none of them went up as an organization.

Q. But were they not there in such numbers—from the Butler Guards, for instance—as to be considered a detachment?—A. Well, you may say a detachment from all companies.

Q. Did they go as a protection for all parties?—A. Nothing more than that all went up together as a protection for each other.

Q. Did Mr. Simmons, of whom you have spoken as being killed, come up on the boat?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was not expected that he could protect the company?—A. No, sir; we had no idea of trouble at all.

Q. Have you been acquainted with these meetings in this city and county?—A. I have been to no meetings outside of the city except to Cainhoy.

Q. Do you not know that these rifle clubs in different parts of the State have felt it a privilege to interrupt and interfere with the republican meetings, or the meetings of the radical party, whenever they choose; that bands of armed men have patrolled the county and the neighborhood of these meetings with the view to disturb them?—A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Who was the first man that was killed in this affair at Cainhoy?—A. The first man that was killed was this negro Lachicotte.

Q. Where did he stand?—A. Right in front of me.

Q. At what place did he stand with reference to the stand upon which the speakers stood?—A. Upon the right of the platform, about a hundred feet or so off.

Q. Where was the old building?—A. The old building was immediately to the right, within a few feet of the platform.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. Do you mean the negro was standing on the right of the platform looking toward the platform, or on the right of the speakers as they faced the crowd?—A. There were no speakers; this was after the riot commenced.

Q. He was standing on the right looking from the platform?—A. No, sir; to the left, [illustrating the position of the crowd and the location of the colored men.]

Q. The statement that you made that this man, who was the first one killed, stood on the right of the platform is not correct; it should have been that he stood on the left?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What distance from the house?—A. Pretty much the same as from the platform.

Q. What direction did the shot come from?—A. I don't know; I did not see him shot.

Q. You do not know whence it came?—A. I do not.

Q. You do not know what party may have discharged it?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you hear any outcry or exclamations before that gun was fired?—A. Why, yes; a good deal of firing had gone on before the man was shot.

Q. How long a time had gone by?—A. I suppose five or six minutes.

Q. How many shots could you say were fired?—A. I do not know how many.

Q. Nobody but the negroes were firing out from the woods?—A. No, sir, not at that time. The white men had no guns except what they took from the negroes; and those had been concealed there.

Q. Where were they concealed?—A. I did not see the guns, but I understood that they were taken from the chimney of the old house.

Q. Who could have had an object in concealing them?—A. Nobody, but the negroes at the suggestion of those who controlled them.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. Did the negroes occupy the house?—A. This was what was called the water-house; it was made for occupation in case of bad weather. When I saw them the white men were in it.

Q. How happened it that these guns were concealed there, when the white men were sure to be the first party to see them?—A. You see this house had a door at each end of it, and it was in looking through this that I saw these white men with the guns in their hands.

Q. How happened it that the negroes, who you say concealed them there, should have placed them in a position where they themselves would not naturally be?—A. They were there quite near on the outside of the house where they could easily run in and take up the guns.

Q. Where were the colored people in reference to the platform?—A. They were all around it.

Q. You say the negroes were in front, on the left and the right, and all around it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When the firing began by the negroes you say it was on the left of the platform and in the rear; I mean this five minutes' firing?—A. They were in the woods to the rear.

Q. Where was the house?—A. On the left of the platform, near it.

Q. In an exact line with the platform, or on the left in front?—A. On the left in front.

Q. How much in front of the platform, if you please?—A. One end of it was on a line with the platform.

Q. Where was the boat that brought this party up?—A. At Cainboy village.

Q. But in which direction from the platform?—A. To the right.

Q. This house was occupied by white men, you have said?—A. I saw white men in it. The guns were there, and the negroes were in the rear and they had begun firing from the rear and the young white men went to the guns and took them.

Q. Now, if the negroes concealed their guns there, why did they conceal them in that place when it would be the most natural thing that the white men should occupy that house as they did?—A. But it was not the most natural thing; the negroes were just as near as the white men to the house.

Q. But why should they not have gone in for them if they knew that the guns were there?—A. I cannot tell you why.

Q. How did it happen that the white men, who did not know that the guns were there, happened to be on the spot at the very moment they were needed, and that the colored men, or radicals as you call them, who knew that they would be used against them if they were found, were not on the spot to get them?—A. Simply because the white men were quicker than the negroes.

Q. Would not the negroes naturally have taken possession of the house at the start?—A. No; they had not sense enough for that. They were told to put these guns there by the people who controlled them, probably.

Q. Are the people who controlled them men of sense?—A. O, yes.

Q. Well, would they make such an arrangement as that to cause the negroes to conceal their arms in a place where the white men would be sure to take possession of them, and leave the negroes in another part of the field where they could not get them—why should they leave this house under those circumstances?—A. But they didn't leave it at all; there were some negroes in the house where these guns were at the time. I could only tell you what I saw, and that is the reason why I have not stated that before.

Q. There were negro women there that day?—A. O, yes.

Q. Large numbers of them?—A. I could not tell you that.

Q. How many of them?—A. I could not tell you. I was told that they were in the house.

Q. Were the white people invited there by the radicals?—A. Well, it was a regular agreement. I do not know but you might call it an invitation. The republicans were going to have a meeting, and they agreed that they should come there with them.

Q. You wanted to go because they were telling scandalous falsehoods, and you wanted to correct them; did they want you to come for that purpose?—A. They had often said so.

Q. Were these people, whom you talked with and who were so glad that you came there, among the people that shot you?—A. O, no, sir; I think not.

Q. Were those people that were so much pleased that you came there the ones that concealed the arms?—A. I think not. I make this distinction between the two sets of people: There are some hard-working, honest people; and then there is a class of young men who have been collected together and formed into militia companies, and put in possession of the State arms and ammunition, and these are the ones who were carried there for the purpose of breaking up this meeting in order to stop the negroes from coming over to us.

Q. Did the votes show that these negroes came over to you?—A. I could not state what the votes showed.

Q. Have you such confidence in the veracity of the negroes as to believe them when they told you that they were delighted to see you, and that they would vote the ticket that you have nominated?—A. O, yes; some of them.

Q. Have you been a candidate for office?—A. I have not.

Q. Have you had any experience in politics?—A. None at all.

Q. If you should be nominated for an office and should go through this city of Charleston meeting your own patients, and talk with them about your chances for an election and they should signify that you were going to get a very large number of votes, do you believe that you would be perfectly sure of the votes that you would get?—A. Well, I do not know that I should.

Q. What reasonable excuse, or justification, is it possible, could have been derived by the republican negroes from such a massacre of unarmed men, who had been cajoled into attending that meeting in the expectation that they were going to convert them?—A. What they were after was to stop this meeting. These white men who were running for office on the radical side wanted to stop these joint discussions.

Q. Well, but could they not have stopped it by saying no?—A. But we didn't hear them say no.

Q. That is what I ask you; why did they not say no; what possible excuse or advantage would they have by equivocating?—A. They wanted to keep their votes. There is no responsibility attached to it at all.

Q. Is there no responsibility attaching to a cold-blooded, treacherous murder?—A. I do not believe there is, not if it is of a respectable person.

Q. Does an act like this, proceeding from motives such as you have described, correctly characterize the colored population of this State, or of this city and county?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it to be supposed by the country that they are ready for such atrocious acts as this without any cause, or without any notice, upon people that they have invited there?—A. In the first place, they did not invite us there—I mean these colored people—but I say they are ready to do just this very thing whenever their leaders put them on to it, as they have done in this very city. What redress has ever been had for the riots that have taken place in this city? None at all, sir.

Q. I am now speaking of the character of the colored population of this city; whether with their leaders or without them, are they a people that will deliberately plan an atrocious massacre like this upon unoffending and innocent and unarmed persons, are they of that character?—A. I will not allow you to use the word "they;" I will say a portion of them.

Q. How large a portion?—A. I suppose some five or six hundred.

Q. What is the character of the other portion?—A. They are very conservative.

Q. Are they willing to attend and to be made a party to such acts without any care as to the responsibility of them?—A. They did not attend these meetings generally.

Mr. JONES. I object to so much of the witness's testimony as is mere matter of opinion and a question of morals.

The CHAIRMAN, (Mr. COCHRANE.) I think the objection is well taken, in so far as the witness's opinion is concerned as to what actuated these parties.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. Is it a fact that the respectable portion of the radicals or republicans do not attend these meetings?—A. There are no respectable radicals about here; that is my opinion.

Q. What is your standard of respectability?—A. The good opinion of all who are held as respectable in this city; that is what makes a man respectable here.

Q. You mean the good opinion of all respectable people?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Please state to the committee whose opinion is respectable and whose good opinion it is that makes another man respectable?—A. I mean to say that a man must make himself respectable; no man's good opinion can make him respectable.

Q. What class of people do you refer to?—A. Well, such class as is found in all places, in New York City, or in other places; I mean to say that such people as you respect at your home we respect here.

Q. You have stated as a fact that the respectable portion of the republican party does not attend these meetings; that there are no respectable people that belong to the radical party; that that portion of the people whose respect gives character or social standing does not confer respectability upon the meeting; now I want to know what class of people it is that has this standing; is that the test of respectability?—A. No, sir; it is the opinion of all men who are striving for decency and honesty, no matter to what party they belong, but the people who are making such a struggle here do not happen to belong to the republican party here.

Q. And is it upon such considerations of respectability that you make large parties of men responsible for such massacres as you have described? Has it anything to do with respectability or want of respectability in society?—A. Well, I should say that education, training, and everything else should be connected with it. In reply to your question I would say that no person who had respect for himself or respect for the community would be a party to such a thing as that; that is all I mean to say.

Q. Do you know, or do you not know, that such killing of people at political meetings is a common thing in this State?—A. Only by the republicans, or radicals; they have killed the democrats.

Q. You have no means of knowing, or you do not know that the democrats kill the republicans?—A. No, sir.

Q. Have you given attention to it so far as to form a conclusion in your own mind that democrats do not do these things?—A. I have, sir.

Q. And have you determined in your own mind, upon the best knowledge and consideration of the subject, that radicals do kill their opponents?—A. I know they do, sir.

Q. And for political reasons?—A. Nothing else actuates them. These people know nothing about politics or anything else; they do it simply from the hatred that is engendered by these people that stir them up. They are made to believe that they would be placed in slavery if the democrats should succeed here.

Q. As it is a question of great import to the people of the United States, and to solve which by the direction of one of the Houses of Congress we are sent here to make inquiry from what source these crimes proceed which threaten the destruction of the Government, will you state what a radical is; what is the condition of mind which makes a radical, where a massacre of this kind can be an affair of ordinary experience?—A. It is simply this: that they are willing to sacrifice everything both in the State and in the country to accomplish their ends, which is nothing less than holding office and getting money. That is my definition of a radical.

Q. Is seeking office a necessary part?—A. Well, they seem to do it all the time; they all do it.

Q. What proportion of the people of the city of Charleston and South Carolina entertain this opinion that you entertain with regard to the radicals?—A. That is the general opinion in this community and in all communities.

R. J. MAGILL sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. COCHRANE:)

Question. What is your business?—Answer. Book-keeper.

Q. Do you reside in Charleston?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long?—A. Since boyhood; since 1858.

Q. What is your age?—A. Thirty-three.

Q. Will you state, sir, whether you were at Cainhoj on the day of this riot?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you go up?—A. I went up in the steamer Poosin.

Q. Was Mr. Bowen in your party?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was Mr. Bowen on the boat?—A. He was, sir.

Q. Just state in their order the events that occurred from the time you left the wharf here until after this trouble at Cainhoj was over.—A. We left the city on the steamer with a very large crowd.

Q. About how many?—A. There must have been two or three hundred. We were crowded at the wharf by republicans who wanted to go. We decided to stop it. We extended the courtesy to Mr. Bowen, and we gave him and his party free passes. We went up to Cainroy. Everything was pleasant on the way, and we landed at the village, and most of us rode out to the meeting in wagons.

Q. Who was the first speaker?—A. Mr. Jervey.

Q. A white man and a democrat?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he complete his speech?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who next spoke?—A. McKinley.

Q. Was McKinley a white or a colored man?—A. A colored man.

Q. Democrat or republican?—A. Republican.

Q. Was there a negro went up on the boat by the name of Delaney?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was he?—A. I cannot personally say what his politics were; he has always been classed as a republican.

Q. Had he been speaking for the democratic party in the last campaign?—A. He had.

Q. How many negroes were there at the time McKinley got up?—A. I cannot say positively, but I should judge three or four hundred.

Q. How many white democrats?—A. I should say between a hundred and a hundred and fifty.

Q. What occurred when McKinley got up?—A. He had spoken only a moment or two when I heard a rushing noise, as if a horse had broken loose, and I looked over in the direction of the old building and saw a commotion, and a minute afterward I saw the puff and heard the report of a pistol.

Q. Where was it fired?—A. Between the stand and the old wooden building.

Q. How far was the old building from the stand?—A. I should judge about thirty or forty feet.

Q. Was it directly back of the stand?—A. No, sir; it was almost on a parallel line.

Q. Was it to the right or left of the stand?—A. As the speakers faced, it was to the left of the stand.

Q. Well, sir, were the colored people to the right or left of the stand?—A. They were generally mixed up, white and colored promiscuously, as all assemblies of that character are.

Q. You saw the puff of smoke and heard the report of the pistol?—A. Yes, sir; between the speaker's stand and the old wooden building.

Q. Where were you standing?—A. I was standing to the right front of the speaker's stand. The house would have been to my right front, and the speaker's stand of course would have been also to my right front, because they were on parallel lines.

Q. Where was the old church?—A. The church was in my rear.

Q. And the vestry?—A. To the left and to the front.

Q. How far was the old church?—A. The church was, I suppose, forty or fifty yards.

Q. And the vestry?—A. The vestry was twenty yards to the left. Immediately after the report of the pistol I heard a gun fired, which was followed immediately afterward by others, and a general breaking of the crowd, the whites naturally assembling together and the negroes breaking off entirely from the stand and going to the rear of the building and to the woods. The first firing was immediately around the building—the old wooden building—and the firing being there, I myself endeavored, and so did a number of others, to keep our men from firing; and we moved from the position we were in, by an involuntary movement as all men will in such times, and we moved up to the right sufficiently to get on the right of this building that we were facing. There it was that the old negro man fell, and I saw the man who shot him. They were firing from the bushes, and firing through the windows of this old house upon us. I myself was fired at and struck by a shot.

Q. Will you state, if you please, whether the negroes were in skirmish-lines?—A. At first it was irregular, but when they were in the woods they were strung out in a line. You could see them advancing, some behind trees and some behind bushes, and some out in the open place.

Q. Was it a line?—A. It was a line.

Q. What were they shooting with?—A. Muskets.

Q. Did any white men have guns?—A. There was not a gun carried upon the ground. I saw two or three white men with guns after the fight which they said they had captured. Those were the only arms I saw on the side of the white men except pistols.

Q. How many of these white men were armed with pistols?—A. That I cannot tell you. I can say this: After I returned to Cainroy, I myself appealed to those who were there to come out and "let's protect the women and children of Cainroy," and the majority of them gave as an excuse that they had no pistols to stay with.

Q. Now state what occurred after the firing in the woods.—A. The firing continued. I soon found that the whites were stampeding. We made a rally. I felt that it was cowardly to run off the ground, and we did endeavor to make a stand although I never shot off my pistol; but at last the firing became too severe, and the majority of the men retired to the vestry. The firing when I left was heavier than it had been at first. There is no doubt that these men were organized, for I saw them myself run to the bushes, pick up the guns, and fire upon the whites. In one instance, a man stood at the chimney and fired at me, and upon my leveling my pistol at him he ran. It was apparently an organized thing, so far as I could judge. They seemed to be under some command, because they took a position behind this pine-land bay.

Q. How about the women?—A. The only negro women whom I saw were three whom I passed on the road while I was riding in the wagon.

Q. Was that anything unusual?—A. On John's Island, where I attended the previous Thursday, they were in crowds.

Q. Now I wish you would state, if you please to leave the Cainhoy matter, what occurred, if anything, at the John's Island meeting.—A. Well, sir, there were about twenty or twenty-five of us who went there. It was a joint discussion, and Mr. Bowen went with us. We had a five-mile tramp to the speaking-place. We had been informed by Colonel Simonton that we must carry no rifles, because he had made an agreement to that effect. When we reached the place we found that the republican speakers had gone on with the meeting, and to our surprise we found two companies of militia drawn up in line with their muskets, and at least thirty per cent. armed with old swords and every conceivable weapon. Bowen ordered them to leave, and they marched down to a house twenty or thirty yards away, and there they stood during the whole meeting. The whole time Colonel Young was making his speech a negro sitting in front of him in a cart covered him with his musket.

Q. Who is Colonel Young?—A. He is a democratic speaker. For instance, the Colonel made a remark like this: "Haunton is bound to be elected," and they hushed him up right at once; they would not permit that. We had to use the most extreme patience and forbearance with them, and when we were leaving we left in carts which we hired from them. They marched behind us, firing pistols in the air, and so on, which none of us returned. When we came back I told Colonel Simonton that I did not intend to go to meetings if that sort of thing was to be continued.

Q. Do you know a man named Cyrus Guilliard?—A. No, sir. I have seen Cyrus Guilliard on one or two occasions; one was going to John's Island, and the other going to Cainhoy; he was pointed out to me. I cannot say that I would know him if I should see him; I have confounded him with Johnson here in the city of Charleston.

Q. Did he speak at John's Island?—A. Yes, sir. I did not hear it, because he spoke before I got there. Either he or Johnson got up and said: "My colored friends, let me beg you not to make me blush for my own race. Let us hear what they have to say."

Q. Was Delaney there?—A. No, sir; he was at Cainhoy.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. I do not remember that you stated at what point this pistol-shot occurred.—A. It occurred between the speaker's stand and the old wooden building—as I was standing—to my right front.

Q. Did you see the shot fired?—A. I only saw the puff of smoke; it was fired, as I suppose, in the air.

Q. You did not see in whose hands it was?—A. No, sir; because there was a large crowd between myself and the party who fired.

Q. The party was composed of whites and blacks?—A. We were all mixed up together.

Q. Where did the first musket reports proceed from?—A. From behind the wooden building, apparently towards the right of it from where we were standing.

Q. Did you see the parties shooting?—A. No, sir; but I saw the shooting a moment or so afterwards. I saw this old man fall, but I did not see who shot him. I saw him stagger and the blood gush from him, and saw him fall. Then the firing was very heavy back of the house.

Q. You understood that there were to be no arms at that meeting?—A. Colonel Simonton's words to me were these: "Bowen pledged me his word these men would carry no rifles, and pledged his word that not a hair of your heads should be touched." That was after the John's Island meeting.

Q. You saw no guns on the way or at the grounds in the hands of the whites?—A. No, sir; except, as I have stated, the guns that they found there.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. You spoke of there being something like three hundred persons on the boat, of whom a hundred and fifty were whites.—A. There were from a hundred to a hundred and fifty whites.

Q. Do you mean that there were two hundred to two hundred and fifty republicans?—A. Yes, sir; the boat was crowded. I will say that the boat was being crowded so rapidly that we decided as a matter of safety and as a matter of right that we would allow none others to go on board unless Mr. Bowen expressed a desire that they should go. I was stationed at one of the gang-planks, and Mr. Bowen came down my gang-way and I said to him, "Mr. Bowen, please point out the men you want to go;" and he pointed out five or six, and declined to let several others on that rushed up to go, the boat was so crowded.

Q. Did he not say to the republicans that the meeting was not intended for them, and therefore they ought not to go?—A. I never heard him make any such remark.

Q. And you are certain that there were as large a number of colored men as you have stated?—A. I do not think that any man can be certain as to numbers unless he counts.

Q. Well, I do not mean for you to be certain under those circumstances; but were there a hundred colored men on board?—A. I should certainly say there were that number there. There was a large crowd; the decks both above and below were filled with men.

Q. Did you see, or do you know by any other means, the direction from which the shot came which killed the first man?—A. No, sir. I saw but one man killed; that man was the negro. He was between the fire of the two parties; and I do say this, that at that time the white men around me had not begun firing.

Q. At what time did this crowd, composed of white men and colored men, separate?—A. Immediately after the pistol-shot.

Q. Was the first shot that was fired into the crowd composed promiscuously of white men and colored men, democrats and republicans, standing together?—A. I cannot testify to that.

Q. Do you know at what time in this affair the democrats separated from the republicans, or the white men from the colored men so as to be distinct bodies of men?—A. Immediately upon the firing of the pistol it created this commotion and stir which was followed by shot from the woods, and then the crowd separated, and the scene unfolded itself.

Q. Then when the first shot was fired it was a pistol-shot?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which way did the colored men go?—A. Some of the colored men fell back behind this building and others fell back to the bushes and the firing began from the bushes immediately.

Q. Do you not know that there was a shot from the building itself, or from some point immediately surrounding the building, that killed this man?—A. The first man that I saw killed was a negro. Who killed him or when the shot that killed him was fired, I do not know; you cannot see a bullet when it is fired.

Q. But you can see a puff of smoke?—A. But where there are a number of puffs, you cannot discriminate. I cannot testify in any regard to his killing, except that I saw him fall.

Q. Do you know anything about the Strawberry meeting?—A. No, sir; I was not there.

Q. Do you know anything about any of these meetings?—A. The only two meetings outside of the city that I attended were John's Island and Calnhoy.

Q. Was there any disturbance at John's Island?—A. None except what I have stated. There would have been a disturbance if we had resented the insults put upon us.

Q. In this condition in regard to joint discussions, was the condition limited to rifles?—A. So Colonel Simonton informed us.

Q. You do not know yourself?—A. We consider ourselves in all political campaigns to be guided by our leaders. They said to us, "Gentlemen, we have promised certain things; you must keep our word."

Q. Did Colonel Simonton go?—A. He did not go, sir.

Q. Were there any leading men there?—A. Colonel Young was there, and Hon. N. P. O'Conner was there; he was a candidate for Congress.

Q. Is he one of the leaders of the party?—A. I cannot say that O'Conner is a leader of the party, but he is a very estimable citizen here.

Mr. MILES. He is a member of the executive committee.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. Are you certain that there was not a condition that no arms should be carried at all?—A. It was understood that we should not carry rifles.

Q. Was there any condition as to who should go with the democratic party?—A. No, sir. Bowen appealed to these men at John's Island in this manner: "I have always been your friend. Behave yourselves. You are not bound to do what they tell you to do; but they have come here by invitation; listen to them politely."

Q. Do you know that Mr. Bowen made an agreement with the committee that certain classes of persons should not be with that company?—A. Colonel Simonton stated nothing of the kind; therefore I knew nothing of the kind.

Q. Did the white people on board represent what was formerly called or known as rifle clubs?—A. I do not believe there is a young man in the city of Charleston that does not belong to a rifle club. We never had any particular purpose to serve. Our pleasures have always been of a social nature. Ex-Governor Chamberlain came down and had a spree with us.

Q. What rifle club do you belong to?—A. The Palmetto Guard.

Q. Do you know whether the members of the Butler Guard were on board this boat?—A. I believe that almost every rifle club in Charleston was represented. If you were to get up a public meeting here to-day, the majority of the persons present would be members of rifle clubs, just as if you were to get up a festival in one of your northern cities your young men would turn out in parades. We have never been disturbers. We try to pursue our avocations, but of course, as a matter of self-preservation, we try to take care of ourselves. I have not fired a pistol in the whole campaign.

C. C. WHITE sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Question. Do you reside in Charleston ?—Answer. I do.

Q. How long have you lived here ?—A. With the exception of about eight years, all my life. I am fifty-one years old next July.

Q. Were you at Cainhoy on the day of this riot ?—A. I was.

Q. Did you go up on the boat ?—A. I did.

Q. How many democrats were there on the boat ?—A. Well, I should suppose there were about one hundred and twenty-five.

Q. How many republicans ?—A. Those that I took to be republicans, that went on board with Mr. Bowen, were somewhere in the neighborhood of fifteen or twenty, perhaps thirty.

Q. Just state what occurred from the time you left the wharf until the riot took place.—A. We left the dock (I think it was on the 16th of October) about ten o'clock in the morning, and we arrived at Cainhoy, as near as I can remember, about one o'clock, perhaps. We were going up pretty slow. There was a strong ebb-tide. I do not remember, but I am under the impression that we got there about one o'clock. There were means of conveyance to a certain extent, it appears, prepared for us upon our arrival to carry us out. As I understood it, the conveyance was intended for the democratic party, and Mr. Bowen was invited to go, with his friends. I found, upon getting up to the landing at Cainhoy, that Mr. Bowen had gone on before us with some of his associates. As far as I could learn, he had got perhaps half an hour's start of us. We followed in all sorts of ways—in wagons, buggies, and some on foot. We had a band of music along with us, and they happened to be put in a vehicle with a very light pair of mules, and the road was in some places hilly, and they retarded the progress of our party a great deal. When we got there we found a crowd of colored people at the church.

Q. About how many ?—A. I should suppose at least two hundred. Mr. Bowen mounted the stand and addressed the crowd. I think his remarks were addressed more particularly to the colored people that were assembled there, and he pressed upon them, I think, fairly and squarely the necessity of keeping order and quiet; and begged them not to make any noise or disturbance while the speaking was going on, as an agreement had been made between the two parties to have a friendly discussion, and that neither party should be interrupted through their speaking. After these few remarks Mr. Jervy took the stand.

Q. Who was he ?—A. A democratic speaker; a white man. He spoke about thirty minutes. That was the time allotted by agreement. I think he was called to time by the watch. He withdrew, and a colored man by the name of McKinley followed.

Q. Who was he ?—A. A colored man that belongs to Charleston. He is in the conveyance office in this city.

Q. He was a republican ?—A. Yes, sir; he hardly spoke more than two or three sentences. I was standing with my hand on the table he was speaking from, and in a line beyond him, with the stand to the left. The crowd was divided, the republicans on the left of the stand and the democrats were on the right.

Q. Then the republicans were toward this old building ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The democrats were on the opposite side ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far away was the old building from the stand ?—A. Well, I should judge it was about forty feet, perhaps. The rear of the republicans was almost on a line with the building, and they were almost in front of it, so that I could see behind the republicans. I could see through the opening of the building, the space under the roof. After McKinley had spoken a sentence or two, in fact as he began to speak, I saw a decided commotion among the colored people. I went up closely, to pay marked attention to the effect the speaking would have upon the colored people, and as soon as he got on the stand I saw a decided commotion, like a dissatisfaction, among them; and about the time he had made two or three remarks this commotion began. I think his first remark was, "My colored friends, I have arrived to speak in your interest." That was all the further he got. At that time I saw some of the men that went up on the boat with us; and it appears they discovered some rifles, and they picked them up, and as they held them in their hands I saw a colored man discharge a pistol.

Q. Where was he ?—A. He was near the corner of the old building. I could not tell you exactly whether he was just beyond it or nearer to me, but I saw him distinctly.

Q. In the air ?—A. It was apparently elevated at an angle, say of about thirty-five or forty degrees, and as he fired the pistol he sang out, "Look out, look out!" and in an instant, almost, the rush of the colored people was made to the swamp in the rear, and in a very short time I saw quite a number—I should think forty or fifty people—rushing in that direction, and a great many of them, if not all, armed with guns, which they commenced to fire with. While this rush was being made, these men that had these guns in their hands, as the party attempted to rush to the house, held the position of "ready," and cried, "Stand back, stand back!" almost simultaneous with the firing of the pistol. At the very minute that pistol was fired there was a mutual separation of the political parties, and they separated, as near as I can remember, about a hundred yards or more. I saw at once the disadvantage that we were laboring under, for going up the little boys were firing at chips in the water, and I went around among them requesting them not to do it; and knowing there were no other arms among us except pistols, I thought it was folly to attempt to keep up firing with pop-guns, and I walked between the two parties and held up my arms and pleaded with all the boys for peace and quietness. While in that position, I saw six or eight men rapidly advancing toward me with their guns. In the direction of them, a little to my right, was a cluster of trees. They were in a comparative thicket, and the open ground was behind us. The cluster of trees was a little to the right, between me and them, and I found I would have to retreat, and I made a quick step to these trees, calculating to wheel and run, and as I had about got the trees in line, I wheeled and made a run, and as I did the volley fired, and I was struck by three balls.

Q. Where?—A. One through the back of my coat, the other in the heel of my boot, and the other in my shoulder-blade, and still remains there. The balls were heavy ones. I have been struck four or five times during the war, and I was satisfied within myself, from the direction which it came, that it had come rather obliquely from my left. I did walk down to the landing which was three miles from the place of speaking. On the way up from the river there walked alongside the buggy several colored people, who all had clubs in their hands, and there was one of them whom I heard say whilst they were talking amongst themselves there, that there was a colored man, or nigger, as they called him, going to speak that day by the name of Delaney.

Q. Did Delaney come with you?—A. Yes, sir. And they said if that man spoke there was going to be trouble, and it struck me afterwards that the negroes had got the name of McKinley and Delaney somewhat mingled together, and that that was what caused the commotion at the time McKinley got up on the table.

Q. Did you see that old negro man killed?—A. No, sir; I did not. I saw the flash of a gun, and heard somebody say that there was a black man dead right there. I saw somebody laying on the ground, but I could not say whether it was white or black.

Q. When was that?—A. Almost immediately.

Q. How many shots had been fired?—A. Well, the first volley was six, or eight, or a dozen. The first volley came right from the direction of that house. These shots were more like a bunch of fire-crackers than a volley.

Q. The negroes fired that volley?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, it was after that shot that this negro was killed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see any negro women about there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many?—A. I did not notice any at all except those that ran out of the house just about the time the alarm was given, five, or six, or eight. They ran out, and ran immediately towards where the men went to get their guns—towards the low bottom.

Q. Just as the rush occurred?—A. Yes, sir; just in an instant. At the very flashing of this pistol, and the cry of "Look out, look out," they fled in the direction in which these men went for the guns.

Q. Did you come back that night?—A. I came to the city that night on the boat.

Q. And had your wounds attended to?—A. I did. While on the way back, I asked this Major Delaney, whom I had known a good while, and I knew he had some knowledge of medicine, to come in and look at my wounds, and he went in and looked at them, and told me that the wound in the shoulder was packed with my clothing; that the hole was comparatively plugged up with it. It did not bleed a great deal, probably not more than a tumbler full. Some one advised washing it, and he advised not, as it might start bleeding again. I went down to the boat, got aboard, and when the boat landed in Charleston, walked home.

Q. Were you laid up for some time?—A. I was laid up for six weeks.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. Had you attended any other meeting before?—A. Not in the country.

Q. You say that Mr. Bowen brought as his friends on the boat that went up some fifteen or twenty persons?—A. Yes, sir; the boat was detained over an hour waiting for him. That is what they told me. I got there just as the boat started, at 9 o'clock. I only made up my mind to go about half past eight. My friends urged me to go. I happened to be a candidate, and I went. I was a candidate for the legislature. When I got there some one said, "Mr. Bowen has not come;" and then we waited probably an hour, or a half an hour, and he came on with these men.

Q. How many colored men besides these were his friends?—A. I could not tell you.

Q. Were there as many as a hundred or a hundred and fifty of his men and other colored men?—A. I should not think so; I should not think there were more than one hundred and fifty altogether on the boat, and I have some experience in judging of numbers. Fifteen or twenty were there before he came.

Q. You saw the first shot that was fired?—A. Yes, sir; it was by a dark-brown man, hardly a black man.

Q. Suppose you were standing on the stand, and looking this way, [directly facing the crowd,] where did he stand?—A. As the speaker addressed the crowd it was to his left.

Q. Where did you stand?—A. On the right of the platform.

Q. So that you could look across and see him above the chest?—A. Yes, sir; I happened to be on the high hill-side, and I had the advantage of seeing over that way. That shot appeared to me to be a signal.

Q. Well, how long after that was this volley?—A. It could not have been more than half a minute.

Q. From what quarter did that come?—A. It came from the bottom.

Q. When was it that the crowd separated, the whites in one direction and the blacks in another, in relation to these shots; was it before or after the first shot was fired?—A. It was after the first shot. It seemed to be intuitive; both parties apparently withdrew.

Q. The volley of which you spoke was fired into the crowd?—A. It was fired toward the whites.

Q. Were not the whites and blacks, then, so near together that it would be impossible for either party to escape altogether?—A. No; these men approached from behind, as it were, from the rear of the crowd. [The witness here explained the situation of the crowd and the speaker's stand, and the direction from which the firing came.]

Q. Now, sir, after the first shot, what you call the signal, how long was it before this volley?—A. It was so short a time that I could hardly tell it. It was almost immediately.

Q. This crowd separated at the instant that the signal or first shot was fired?—A. As quick as the alarm was given.

Q. Now, sir, would not that volley have been fired as directly into the blacks as into the whites? In that brief interval of time, which you say was hardly long enough to make a distinction between one and the other, is it possible that they could have made up their minds, and could have operated to such an extent as to give the shots to the whites and not to the blacks?—A. Well, the shot was fired in the direction of the whites—our side.

Q. Before the first or signal shot was fired, were these white and black men mixed together promiscuously?—A. No, sir; they were separated.

Q. By what sort of a line?—A. Nearly in the center. If anything the colored people were rather to the right of the stage, more in front; and as the shot was fired, the whites fell off in one direction and the blacks in another.

Q. Was it possible that in this short time they could have separated in this way?—A. Yes, sir; Mr. Bowen fell back with us.

Q. Did you see the people from whom the volley came—the several shots which constituted, as you say, an explosion like fire-crackers?—A. I did.

Q. Were they colored men?—A. Yes, sir; the only one of the republicans that I saw on our side was Mr. Bowen, and he afterward went over among them.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane:)

Q. With whom did he go?—A. With Mr. Walker. I started to go with him, but Mr. Walker got to him first. Mr. Bowen was with us perhaps two or three minutes, or perhaps longer.

Q. When did the first man fall?—A. The first one I saw was this black man.

Q. At what time did that occur?—A. At almost the first fire. There was not a regular continued musketry, but there would come little spurts.

Q. Were there any men on the platform at that time?—A. There was one man got upon the platform and fired his pistol three times.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane:)

Q. Who was that?—A. A man by the name of Smith. I asked afterward, and was told that his name was Smith.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. How long did the firing continue after the first pistol-shots?—A. I don't think it was over eight or ten minutes. Time like that is pretty hard to measure.

Q. At what time was it that the first white man was shot?—A. Well, I was the first one that I knew of being struck.

Q. Were you shot by the early guns that were discharged?—A. No, sir; there had some little firing gone on.

Q. At what place did these white people who had been shot receive their wounds?—A. After they had been separated some little time I saw one of them, a young man that was here to-night. I was somewhat surprised afterward that he had got hurt.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane:)

Q. Do you know whether Mr. O'Connor is a member of the democratic executive committee?—A. I presume he is; I could not assert it, sir.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. Do you know that these rifle-clubs were formed for the purpose of protection to life and property if occasion required it?—A. They have been formed some time, as far as I am able to tell you, before we had any idea of any rumpus of this kind.

Q. Do you know of the Washington Light Infantry?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that an old rifle-club?—A. The Washington Light Infantry was one of the old military companies that we have had here for a good many years.

Q. Have they turned out with arms?—A. All the rifle-clubs turned out with arms. They turned out on the 23th of June. The Washington Light Infantry is one of the oldest companies in the city.

Q. That company was disbanded, so far as an armed organization is concerned, under the proclamation of the President?—A. Yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane:)

Q. What was generally the case; did these rifle-clubs disband generally?—A. That was my impression, sir.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. Did they come out on the 8th of November, in the disturbance that occurred the night after the election?—A. I could not tell you of my own knowledge. I was in bed; or, rather, I had not got out of the house.

Q. Do you think if there should be an occasion, in the judgment of the members of these rifle companies, for their appearance in the streets in military order, that they are in a condition to immediately appear?—A. Well, they could appear as quickly as could be expected from citizen-soldiers.

Q. Would they find their commanders?—A. I think they would. They would be as ready as any citizen-soldiers would be. Their armories were broken up, and they took their guns home; but of course they could be got together if there was an alarm.

Q. Do you think that men who have not been organized in that way, not armed for that purpose, and without any officers, could come out, or would come out, at such a moment, and take their places in line?—A. I hardly think so.

Q. Then, as I understand you, their operations are suspended, but they are not disbanded; their organization is maintained.—A. They are disbanded so far as their officers are concerned; have no armories, and no regular attendance at the meetings as rifle-clubs.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. Do you understand that they have obeyed the proclamation of the President?—A. I think they did as much as any citizens should do.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. But they are ready to come out if there should be a call for them?—A. I think if there were a call for them they could be found.

Q. Then their breaking up did not consist in the disbandment of their organization?—A. Well, the officers never had any control.

Q. Are rifle-clubs recognized by the laws of the State?—A. Not to my knowledge, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. If I understand you, if there should be a riot among the negroes in this city of Charleston, and a thousand or so of them commenced burning houses and killing people on the street, you think these gentlemen who formerly belonged to the rifle-clubs would very speedily turn out for the purpose of putting down that riot if the police force were insufficient to do so?—A. I could answer for myself. If such a case should happen, I should take a rifle and go to the old club-hall, and I should expect to find a good many there.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. In speaking of an insurrection, do you still consider that these people are in a condition of slavery—any of them?—A. I do not know why that should follow. I take the word insurrection in the light of a riot.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Saturday, December 30, 1876.

GEORGE I. CUNNINGHAM recalled.

The WITNESS. I wish to state, in reference to a question asked me by the chairman last evening, in regard to the police force employed in this city last election-day, that the total force was composed of fifty-four blacks and forty-seven whites.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane:)

Q. Do you know whether there were that many during the canvass?—A. About that number. They did not vary more than two or three. That included officers and men.

Adjourned to meet on Monday, January 1, 1877, at 10 o'clock a. m.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Monday, January 1, 1877.

The subcommittee met at 10 o'clock a. m. All the members present.

GEORGE GARRETT (colored) sworn and examined.

By Mr. BANKS:

Question. Where do you live?—Answer. I live at number 14 Henrietta street.

Q. How old are you?—A. I suppose about sixty-five; I don't know exactly.

Q. How long have you lived in this city?—A. I was born here, sir, and have always lived here.

Q. Where was the last place that you worked?—A. With Messrs. Carrington and Thomas.

Q. How long did you work there?—A. Eleven years. I've been there ever since the fall of the city.

Q. Do you work there now?—A. No, sir.

Q. Will you please to say to the committee how it happened that you left there?—

A. The Saturday night previous to the election Mr. Thomas came to me in the back part of the store and told me he wanted me to help him out. I asked him how, and he told me he wanted me to vote with them. He wanted to get the governor; he didn't mind so much about the President. I told him I couldn't vote that way. He says, "I'm very sorry to see an old man like you so prejudiced." I told him it wasn't prejudice; that my mind was for one thing, and his was for another; and he told me, "Well, I'll get some one that favors me." After we shut up I came away from the store, and on Monday morning, to be certain, I went back, and I met the clerk opening the store, and I asked him, "What's the news this morning?" He says, "Mr. Thomas told me to open and clean up, and to tend to your part of the business;" that they had no use for me; so I came away, certain that I was discharged.

Q. What was the business of Mr. Thomas?—A. He was keeping a jewelry store; and my business was to clean out and make the fires, and so on.

Q. Had any complaint ever been made against you at any time?—A. No, sir; none at all. I was pleased with them and they was pleased with me, I believe, until that time.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane:)

Q. Have you worked any place since then?—A. No, sir. I had several other places to work at the same time; I didn't stay at Mr. Thomas's all day. But I suppose they must have been of the same opinion, as I was discharged from all the other places.

Q. And you have not had any jobs of work since you were discharged?—A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Thomas did not threaten you at all?—A. O, no, sir.

Q. He did not try to compel you to do anything that you did not want to do?—A. No, sir.

Q. He told you about the bad men in office, how they had stolen all the public money, and destroyed all the business interests of the State?—A. Something similar to that kind.

Q. He told you that it was as much to your interest as to his, and that if the white men and the black men did not stand together they could not live at all?—A. Yes, sir; he told me several instances of a failure.

Q. He left it free to your own option which way you would vote?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was very kind to you?—A. O, yes, sir. They were very nice people; I liked them very well.

Q. Did you ever go back to see Mr. Thomas?—A. No, sir; it was no use.

Q. The clerk told you that he was told by Mr. Thomas to open the store and sweep it out in the morning?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. Mr. Thomas did not discharge you at all himself?—A. Not himself.

Q. You say you went back there and found another man in your place?—A. No, no; I say I found the clerk there cleaning up.

Q. But Mr. Thomas did not tell you, himself, that you were to go away?—A. No, no; he didn't tell me himself. He talked with me about what he wanted me to do.

Q. He just reasoned with you?—A. Yes, sir; that was all.

Q. You only worked there part of the day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he give you?—A. I got a dollar and seventy-five cents a week. I got two dollars and seventy-five cents, altogether, every week, because I was doing something for the clerk and he paid me part and the store paid me the other part.

Q. You parted on good terms?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. You did not see Mr. Thomas when you went back there on Monday morning?—A. No, sir.

Q. But you say that the clerk told you that Mr. Thomas told him to do your work, and that you were not wanted any more?—A. Yes, sir.

ALBERT E. PHILIPPY sworn and examined.

By Mr. BANKS :

Question. Where do you reside ?—Answer. Charleston.

Q. How long have you been here ?—A. Since 1865.

Q. What is your age ?—A. Thirty-eight years.

Q. What is your business ?—A. Deputy coroner, and clerk in the coroner's office.

Q. Do you know if any inquest was held upon the body of any person killed at the riot at Cainhoy ?—A. Yes, sir ; I believe five or six.

Q. On whose dead bodies was it held ?—A. J. Hall King, Mr. Simmonds, Mr. Daley, and others.

Q. Have you the record of this testimony ?—A. Yes, sir. [Producing record.]

Q. Is the coroner required, by law, to keep the testimony ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is the original record ?—A. Yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane) :

Q. Is the coroner a colored man ?—A. No, sir ; a white man, at present ; but the coroner was a colored man at the time this testimony was taken.

Q. Who appeared as prosecutor for the Government before the coroner ?—A. Solicitor Butts.

Q. Is it a common thing for the Government to be represented before a coroner ?—A. Yes, sir ; in this State.

Q. Did you ever know of a prosecutor appearing before a coroner before ?—A. I have seen them in this city in different cases.

Q. In what case did you ever see a prosecutor appear ?—A. If you will allow me to refer to my book—

Q. Do you recollect, of your own knowledge, of any case where a solicitor of the State appeared as a prosecutor before the coroner ?—A. I think the law allows the coroner to call upon the solicitor for advice.

Q. Are you sure of that ?—A. I would swear to it.

Q. Can you name any case ?—A. I have seen them in the case of Mr. Backner.

By Mr. BANKS :

Q. On whose application was the inquest held ?—A. An inquest is held as soon as notice is given.

Mr. BANKS. I offer the record of the coroner in evidence.

The CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane.) The majority of the committee exclude the record as incompetent, there being no allegation or proof that the witness, whose evidence appears in the book, cannot be produced before the committee.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Monday, January 1, 1877.

WILLIAM J. MCKINLEY (colored) sworn and examined.

By Mr. BANKS :

Question. Where do you reside ?—Answer. In Charleston ; I have resided there forty-two years ; I am forty-two years old.

Q. What is your business ?—A. Recorder of deeds for Charleston County.

Q. Were you at the republican meeting held at Cainhoy last autumn, during the canvass ?—A. I was.

Q. Do you remember the date of the meeting ?—A. The 16th of October, sir.

Q. What time did you get there ?—A. The boat landed at about half past eleven, I would say, and we arrived at the ground about twelve o'clock.

Q. How did you go up ?—A. By steamboat.

Q. Was it the boat upon which Mr. Bowen and his friends, and the democrats, went to this meeting ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you with Mr. Bowen's friends ?—A. I was.

Q. How many republicans or personal friends did Mr. Bowen take on board with him ?—A. I do not think there were more than twenty or twenty-five ; I was not careful to note the number.

Q. Were they all republicans, and colored people ?—A. Yes, sir ; there were other colored men on board the boat in the interest of the democratic party.

Q. How many, should you say ?—A. Not over five ; they were friends of mine. I knew them from the fact that they were interested in the democratic party. It was just at the time of the year when there was very little doing, and a great many persons went aboard the boat just for a pleasuring party, and some were in the interest of the democratic party ; but whether they went there under invitation from the democratic party is more than I can say.

Q. How many colored men were there altogether on the boat, including those friends of Mr. Bowen?—A. I do not think there were over thirty or thirty-five altogether.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane :)

Q. Was Delaney, the colored democratic speaker, one of the five you have spoken of?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. BANKS :

Q. Was Delaney a democrat, or acting with the democrats?—A. He was, sir; that is, he was in the interest of General Hampton.

Q. Do you know whether or not anything was said by Mr. Bowen or his friends as to the democrats who were to go or who should not go?—A. When I arrived at the boat Mr. Bowen was not there. There were several colored men who were anxious to get aboard, and Mr. George L. Buist asked me to see that the men did not get aboard, stating that there were just as many aboard as the boat could conveniently hold. In the mean time Mr. Bowen arrived.

Q. Well, sir, what occurred then?—A. The same request was made by Mr. Buist to him, I think.

Q. Was there anything occurred on the way up to the steamboat-landing?—A. Nothing unusual. We were all pleasantly engaged.

Q. Was anybody armed on board the boat?—A. They were.

Q. Who were they, and what sort of arms did they have?—A. They had pocket-pistols, and I saw men firing in the water, amusing themselves as they went along.

Q. Who were they; white or colored?—A. White and colored both, sir.

Q. What sort of pistols did they have?—A. I am not a judge of pistols, but they were pocket-pistols.

Q. What was the length of them, if you saw them?—A. I saw some of them; they were of a pretty good size.

Q. Were they a foot long?—A. Not a foot; I would say about eight inches, probably; some had larger and some smaller ones.

Q. How large was the largest of them?—A. To the best of my knowledge and belief about eight inches.

Q. You arrived at the landing about half past eleven?—A. Yes, sir; it was about that time.

Q. How far was it from the boat-landing to the meeting-place?—A. About three miles, I should say.

Q. What did you see when you got there?—A. I saw a concourse of men.

Q. How many, should you think?—A. About four hundred, colored and white; about equally divided. I am speaking of the time I arrived.

Q. What happened when you got there?—A. The meeting was called to order by Mr. Bowen, the county chairman of the republican party. He stated that we met for the purpose of a joint discussion, and requested that particular attention should be paid to the speakers, so that, after hearing the argument on both sides, they could decide for themselves. Mr. Sanders was chosen to represent the democrats as their chairman. They had a chairman on the republican side, but I do not know the name of the man. The meeting was then organized, and Mr. W. Saint Julian Jervy was the first democratic speaker. He spoke thirty minutes, which was the time allotted him. After he concluded the band commenced playing, and I was announced as the speaker on the republican side to reply. I mounted the platform.

Q. Did you see this rough sketch I have of the ground this morning? [Pointing to a diagram of the ground where the Cainhoj meeting was held.]—A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was made at your suggestion?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you stand on the platform?—A. I stood about the center of the platform in front. [Indicating upon diagram.]

Q. Where were the people at that time?—A. Mr. Sanders, the chairman for the democrats, was on my right, and the republican chairman was about the center.

Q. How many people were there at the time you arose to speak?—A. I should say about four hundred and fifty.

Q. What number of whites and blacks?—A. The proportion was about equal.

Q. Were they all men, or were there any women?—A. They were all men, but there might have been a few women among them.

Q. Where did the democrats stand?—A. The democrats stood to my right.

Q. Were they generally by themselves, or scattered promiscuously through the crowd?—A. Generally by themselves.

Q. And the republicans were generally to the left?—A. To the left, and by themselves.

Q. Were all these people mainly in front of the building?—A. Yes, sir; on my left, as I stood facing the people, there was an old house called the weather-house.

Q. Were there doors at each end of this house?—A. They were not doors, but just openings large enough for a carriage to pass through, I should say.

Q. How far from the platform, where you stood, do you think it was?—A. About thirty feet. But I am a very poor judge of distances.

Q. Will you state to the committee what occurred after you got upon the platform and stood in this place that you have pointed out?—A. After I mounted the platform and proceeded to speak, I had spoken but one or two minutes, when I heard a commotion to my left. I requested the men then to be silent—those to the left—the colored people—saying, at the same time, that I was there in their interest. I said that because they had given the previous speaker their undivided attention, and I thought they should accord the same to me. I then heard some one exclaim, "Look out, McKinley, they are going to shoot." I turned to the left, in the direction of the voice, and I saw several young white men, with guns in their hands, directly turned towards the stand.

Q. Where were they, if you please?—A. They were in this old weather-house, on the left of the platform.

Q. Whereabouts did they stand?—A. They stood in the doorway nearest to the platform.

Q. How many were there, or about how many?—A. I should say about ten or twelve. I jumped off the stand, and drew the attention of either Mr. Jervey, J. F. Fickin, Hon. M. P. O'Connor, or Mr. W. Saint Julian Jervey, or all of them, to the excitement that was going on.

Q. In what way did you draw their attention?—A. By asking them to look, saying, "Look, these are your men with guns in their hands, and it will be heralded throughout the country (I think I used the word to-morrow) that we," meaning the republicans "started this row."

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane:)

Q. Were these men off the stand at the time?—A. They were off the stand at the right rear corner, on the ground.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. State how many men were on the platform.—A. All that were on the platform, that I can recollect, were Mr. Sanders, the democratic chairman, the republican chairman, and myself.

By Mr. COCHRANE:

Q. At what point of time was this?—A. Just after Mr. Jervey had got through speaking, and I had commenced. I jumped on the platform again and asked the men to hear me.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. Not particularly one side?—A. No, sir. At that time I heard a discharge from some fire-arm, and shortly afterward the firing became general.

Q. From whence did this first shot that you had heard from some fire-arm come?—A. It came from the left; from the direction of this old weather-house, but whether it was in the building or outside, I could not say.

Q. Did you see the persons from whom it came?—A. I did not, sir; I do not know who they were.

Q. What happened afterward, so far as you saw and know; did you take any further part?—A. I endeavored to quell the row as much as I possibly could.

Q. Did you see any person killed?—A. I did not, sir.

Q. When did you leave the ground?—A. I left the ground about ten minutes after I heard these shots.

Q. Do you know anything further to state to the committee in regard to the row itself?—A. Nothing further, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane:)

Q. Who was the first speaker at the meeting?—A. Mr. W. Saint Julian Jervey.

Q. Mr. Jervey is a white man, I believe?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And a respectable member of the bar?—A. Yes, sir; a gentleman, and very respectable.

Q. Is he in the city now?—A. I do not know, but rather expect he is.

Q. Mr. O'Connor was a very reputable gentleman?—A. Yes, sir; he was a member of the bar, and a candidate for a member of Congress, and also a member of the democratic executive committee of the county.

Q. On the way up in the boat you came to observe the fact that there were pistols there from seeing the colored and white men shooting in sport?—A. When I said white and colored men, I mean to say I did not see but one colored man fire his pistol.

Q. They were firing at things in the river?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. There was no bad blood or ill feeling?—A. None whatever, sir. As I said before, they were firing, going along, at marks in the water.

Q. Did you go up with the democrats to the meeting?—A. Yes, sir; I walked part of the way, and rode part of the way.

Q. Did you see any guns in the hands of any white men?—A. I did not, sir.

Q. And when you got to the ground you saw no guns in the hands of either white or colored?—A. I saw no guns in the hands of either party.

Q. No guns were taken up on the boat?—A. None to my knowledge; in fact I could say there were none taken up on the boat.

Q. After Mr. Jervey had concluded the band commenced playing and you were announced by the chairman?—A. I was, sir.

Q. Did the chairman say anything special, or did he just announce you as Mr. McKinley, who would now address the meeting?—A. Yes, sir; he just announced me in the usual manner, and I stepped forward and commenced to speak.

Q. You had spoken but a few sentences, when you observed a commotion in the crowd, to the left, among the colored men?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And felt somewhat annoyed at it from the fact that great quiet had been observed during the previous speeches, and you thought they might pay you the same compliment?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you remonstrated with them and told them that you were friendly to them?—A. Yes, sir; that I was there in their interests, and as their friend.

Q. When you say that you saw ten or twelve men with guns pointed, do you wish to be understood as swearing positively as to the number?—A. I do not, sir. I have given that as the best of my knowledge and belief as to the number.

Q. But you do not give it with that degree of certainty which would enable you to swear to it?—A. No, sir.

Q. When you heard the voice saying, "look out," it came from the left of the stand among the colored people?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far was the old building from the rear of the colored people who had assembled on the left?

The WITNESS. The old weather-house?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.—A. Why, they were all around it.

Q. That is, the crowd of people on the left extended from the old house pretty close to the stand?—A. Just here I want to be distinctly understood. They were facing the house in front, all around, but not surrounding the house. There was no one to the rear of the house from what I saw.

Q. And the crowd of colored people to the left of the stand extended from the speakers' stand over toward the old house?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you say that there were no colored men behind the house, you simply wish to be understood as saying that you saw no colored men behind the house.—A. Precisely, sir; I only say what I saw.

Q. You saw these men standing in the house with their guns. What kind of guns?—A. Well, they were smooth-bored guns—single-barrel guns—old-time muskets.

Q. You jumped off the stand. Now, at the time you jumped off the stand, if I understand you, Mr. O'Connor and Mr. Jervey had gotten off, and they were with the white men, to the right?—A. Yes, sir, and near to the end of the platform.

Q. And at that time there had been a withdrawal of the races—these negroes to the left of the stand had drawn back, and the white men to the right of the stand had drawn together?—A. Yes, sir; they kept their positions, just by common consent.

Q. At the time you came down they were all separated?—A. I think so, sir.

Q. When you heard the expression, "look out," was there not a sort of swaying of the masses?—A. Not as I could see.

Q. You were not paying very particular attention to see whether there was a swaying or not?—A. No, sir.

Q. And your attention was particularly directed to the house at that time?—A. Yes, sir; I heard the cry, and I looked there, and I had a talk with these men of whom I have spoken.

Q. Well, now, how long after you jumped up on the stand was it that this shot was fired of which you have spoken?—A. It was instantaneous.

Q. A single shot?—A. Yes, sir; at that time.

Q. And almost immediately thereafter you heard a general firing?—A. Yes, sir; shortly afterward.

Q. You saw no man killed?—A. I saw no one killed, sir; I knew nothing at all about the extent of the casualty until the next morning, and I was perfectly amazed.

Q. When you commenced speaking there were just three persons on the stand?—A. As well as I recollect.

Q. When you got down were you the only one on the stand to talk to these gentlemen?—A. My best recollection is that there was no one on the stand.

Q. Was there any one on the stand when you got up there again?—A. No, sir.

Q. Well, now, where did you go after the firing became general?—A. I got out off between the two. It appeared as if the republicans had gone in the direction of the swamp, and the democrats toward the old church.

Q. How many negroes did you see with guns?—A. I do not want to avoid any question, and I do not want to state what I do not know. I saw a good many with guns but I could not approximate the number; there was such a confusion, and all that.

Q. Did you see them in the edge of the woods with their guns?—A. I did not.

Q. Or by the swamp?—A. I did not. As I was going over toward them they were advancing, and the whites were retreating in the direction of the church.

Q. During this whole time was the firing continued?—A. Every now and then shots would go off; it was continuous.

Q. Well, when you got to where the republicans were, did the men whom you approached have arms in their hands?—A. Not all of them; some few of them had.

Q. And what were they doing with them—firing?—A. They were not firing at that time.

Q. Well, where did you go—further?—A. I went away from the place altogether, and did not stop to follow it up or take any part in it.

Q. You saw that there was going to be trouble, and did not attempt to have anything more to do with it?—A. I saw that there was going to be trouble, and thought it would become more serious; I left the ground.

Q. You were not present at the interview between Walker and the colored people?—A. No, sir; but I saw Mr. Bowen and Mr. Walker go over.

Q. And then you left the ground?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were not aware of the extent of the killing and wounding until the next day, when you were shocked to find it out in the newspapers?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. This commotion and the shot that was fired and the general firing were very rapid, were they not?—A. O, yes; when it first commenced I suppose everybody that had anything to shoot just fired it off.

Q. The events transpired very rapidly?—A. Yes, sir; certainly they did.

Q. You heard the commotion, then the cry, then the shot, then the volley, and then you started off to try to get away as speedily as possible; is that correct?—A. It is, in the main, correct.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. You say you arrived at the boat, previous to leaving the wharf at Charleston before Mr. Bowen?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the boat wait for Mr. Bowen?—A. I understood it waited a while for him.

Q. Did you understand that democrats and republicans were to attend the meeting at Cainhoj for a joint discussion, before you left?—A. Yes, sir; I understood that was the purpose.

Q. That was by the consent of, or arrangement with, Mr. Bowen?—A. Yes, sir; an arrangement had been made between the chairman of the democratic committee and that of the republican committee.

Q. When you arrived on the ground where the meeting was held, you said you found about four hundred whites there; did you arrive at the place of meeting before the main body who went on the boat?—A. I did not, sir.

Q. Did you go up in company with Mr. Bowen?—A. No, sir; he preceded me. I was about the last of the party that got there.

Q. Well, did you see any guns before you saw those in the hands of the ten or twelve men in the old house that day?—A. I did not, sir.

Q. Were those the first guns you saw on that day?—A. The first guns that I saw—the first intimation I had that there were any guns on the ground.

Q. What was the character of Mr. Jervej's speech?—A. It was very pleasant; pacific, as it was generally supposed it would be.

Q. There was nothing in it to excite any bad feeling or commotion?—A. Nothing of the kind, sir.

Q. The first shot you heard that day was this one which you could not tell whence it came or from what kind of an arm?—A. I will not say that was the first shot I heard that day, because, you understand, I heard some firing on the boat.

Q. But I mean the first shot you heard on the ground where the meeting was held?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, did you see any shots fired at all by these men whom you saw with the guns in the first place?—A. I did not.

Q. You said that you saw several guns after that on the ground?—A. Yes, sir. The firing then became general, and I got cut off and was not in a position to see. They had retreated through to the rear of the buildings with the guns.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. The colored people had retreated?—A. No, sir; the young lads that had the guns. They had got around to the other side, and I could not see them. They had gone through this open building and got to the rear.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. The republicans were at your left and the democrats were on your right?—A. Yes, sir; but how these men got into this building I could not say.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane):

Q. But they could not be seen from the stand?—A. No, sir; not at the rear, because the building was between.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. Where were the guns you afterward saw; who had them?—A. I saw several, and I said that they were in the hands of the colored men—those guns that I saw in the rear of the platform.

Q. Were they fired?—A. Some were. I saw one man firing off, and I heard guns firing, but I only say what I saw.

Q. Do you know where they got these guns?—A. I do not.

Q. They were close to the swamp—were emerging from the swamp?—A: I could not say that they were emerging from the swamp.

Q. They were at the edge of the swamp?—A. I could not say that, either. I saw them between the platform and the swamp.

Q. Was Mr. Bowen on the stand?—A. Not at that time; he was on the stand when the meeting was first called to order.

Q. Was he on the stand when the firing began?—A. I think not, sir.

Q. Was he on the stand when you looked to the left and saw the ten or twelve men?—A. I think not.

Q. When you jumped from the stand and appealed to Mr. Jervey, Mr. O'Connor, and Mr. Fickin, how did they reply?—A. I think some one made a reply, but in the midst of the confusion just at that time I could not tell just exactly what it was.

Q. What was the nature of the reply; was it derrecating the disturbance?—A. I would rather think it would be; all good and sensible men would deprecate anything like that.

Q. There was no bad feeling manifested toward you by those gentlemen?—A. None at all, sir.

Q. Did you see the ten or twelve men afterward during the day?—A. I could not recognize any one at the distance and in the excitement of the moment.

Q. Well, you do not know if you saw them?—A. No, sir; I do not know.

Q. You do not know that they fired a single shot?—A. I do not know that they fired a single shot, because the first shot that was fired was in the rear of this building and I could not see.

Q. The first report that you heard?—A. Yes, sir; the first report that I heard.

Q. Let me understand you. You say it was directly from that quarter where the old house was?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the republicans were in that direction?—A. Yes, sir; in that direction, between me and the old house; but still there were men with guns in their hands in this old house.

Q. But the crowd was divided in that way?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The first shot proceeded from the republican side?—A. Yes, sir; in connection with this I say that I saw, these white men with guns in their hands on the republican side.

Q. You did not return to Charleston?—A. I did.

Q. That night?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you return to the village of Cainhoy from the meeting?—A. I did not.

Q. Well, was the fight still going on when you left the ground?—A. Well, no, sir; I would say that there was no fighting going on there, except a state of confusion. Everybody was trying to get out of the way.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane):

Q. I want to ask you this question: Do I understand you to say under oath that the shot came from the rear of the old building?—A. I said that the first shot that I heard came from that direction.

Q. But you do not undertake to say under oath that it was in front of the building, or in the building, or behind the building?—A. No, sir; it simply came from that direction.

Q. And, if I correctly understand you, these men whom you saw at the door]who had the arms backed out at the rear of the old building?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that it was impossible for any one who stood upon the platform to have seen these men when they were outside of the building?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they were entirely excluded from the view of a person on the stand at the time that you heard the first shot fired?—A. Well, I would not like to say that. I will say that I did not see them.

Q. I ask you whether they were excluded from the view of a person on the stand?—A. I could not say that, sir.

Q. Well, did you not look from the stand?—A. I did.

Q. Then you could not see them?—A. No, sir; I did not see them. But as long as they remained behind this portion of it, (indicating a spot on the diagram,) either side of this opening, the height of the building would not prevent anybody from seeing.

Q. Well, were they behind and hidden there so that you could not see them?—A. I could not say.

Q. If they had been visible from the stand at the time the first shot was fired would you not have seen them?—A. If I had looked in that direction.

Q. Did you not look in that direction?—A. I did not look any farther than the door where the men were standing with the guns in their hands. I did not look around, because I did not expect anything of the kind.

Q. Did you immediately upon hearing the shot look in that direction?—A. No, sir; I do not think I did. I looked in the direction when I heard the alarm, "Look out, McKinley, they are going to shoot."

Q. Well, did you, when you heard the shot, look in that direction?—A. I could not say that I did; I could not say that I did not.

Q. When you got on the stand the second time did you look in that direction?—A. I could not say positively whether I did or not.

Q. Did you hear Mr. Bowen saying anything there at all from the time you heard the cry, "Look out?"—A. No, sir; I think not. I think I heard him say, "For God's sake, can't we stop this fight?" or words to that effect.

Q. Where was he at that time?—A. There was an awful state of confusion at that time, and I could not place anything.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. Was Bowen on the stand at the time the cry of "Look out!" was called?—A. No, sir; not to the best of my knowledge.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. Do you say that you did not look particularly to see them, or did you make any effort to find out where these men were at the time you heard this shot?—A. I was not looking particularly as to who fired the shot, because it came so very quick that I did not have time to expect any fight.

Q. You have said that this was a sudden outbreak; had you arms yourself?—A. No, sir.

Q. If it had been a premeditated affair on the part of the colored people, would it have been within your knowledge?—A. If there was anything like a premeditated—
The CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane.) I object. We do not want any expression of opinion.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. Had you a knife, a pistol, or a weapon of any kind?—A. No, sir; nothing at all.

Q. When you spoke to Mr. O'Connor and Mr. Jervy at the time you saw the white men with these guns in the building, did any other person speak to them upon the subject?—A. Not as I am aware of.

Q. Did you see the inside of this weather building at any time?—A. Yes, sir; I was inside at one time. I was to reply to Mr. Jervy, and I was anxious to hear what he had to say, and I was inside a portion of the time when he was speaking.

Q. Do you remember whether or not there was a chimney in the building anywhere?—A. It is my impression there was a chimney there.

Q. In what part of the building do you think it was?—A. Over on the back part.

Q. Was it open?—A. Yes, sir; it was an open chimney.

Q. How large?—A. I did not pay particular attention to the localities, but whatever it was it was open.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane:)

Q. You did not pay any special attention to this chimney, to ascertain if there were arms in it?—A. No, sir; I did not see any.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. It was open?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You saw no guns or muskets there?—A. I saw none, sir.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. Did you see the boat-crowd arrive on the ground?—A. O, yes, sir.

Q. Did you go in company with them?—A. I went partly with them.

Q. Did you see any guns in their hands going up?—A. I did not, sir.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Monday, January 1, 1877.

ROBERT M. WALLACE sworn and examined.

By Mr. BANKS :

Question. You are a United States marshal for the district of South Carolina ?—

Answer. I am, sir.

Q. Where do you reside ?—A. I reside in Charleston.

Q. How long have you resided in Charleston ?—A. Four years and a half.

Q. How long have you lived in the State ?—A. All my life, sir ; I was born here.

Q. Have you lived out of the State at any time ?—A. No, sir ; I have not.

Q. What part of the State did you live in chiefly ?—A. I used to reside in the northern part of the State.

Q. What is your age ?—A. Thirty-nine years.

Q. What is your profession apart from your office ?—A. I am a lawyer by profession and practice, in the northern part of the State.

Q. Were you requested to take any action in regard to the Cainhoy affair ; and, if so, what was it, and by whom was the request made ?—A. I was. I was called upon by the deputy sheriff of the county immediately after the news of the riot reached the city. He requested that I would take some immediate action, by the use of United States troops, to prevent further fighting at Cainhoy, where this riot had occurred.

Q. What did you do, if anything, in regard to that request ; was it a request, or did he make an official call upon you that required you to do it ?—A. I regarded it as a semi-official call to aid in preserving the peace of the county, which the sheriff was unable to do.

Q. And you felt under obligation to do that ?—A. I felt it a part of my duty to do so.

Q. Will you state to the committee what you did, if anything ?—A. I at once telegraphed to the officer commanding troops at Summerville for a company to go to Cainhoy.

Q. How far is Summerville from here ?—A. About twenty-five miles.

Q. And from Cainhoy what distance ?—A. It is about fifteen miles to Cainhoy.

Q. Well, what then ?—A. That was at night. The next morning the commanding officer at Summerville replied that he had but one company of light artillery, which had no small-arms, and he could not fill my requisition for troops.

Q. Your telegram to him was the night of the riot ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the reply from him came the morning after ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, what occurred then ; what did you do in the matter ?—A. I made further inquiries in relation to the riot.

Q. I will ask you to state what you did further in relation to this matter, after you received the telegram from the officer.—A. I telegraphed to the governor at Columbia, asking where I could get a company of United States troops. He referred me to General Ruger at Atlanta.

Q. He telegraphed you ?—A. Yes. General Ruger telegraphed me that he had ordered a company of troops from Columbia to proceed at once to Cainhoy, telling me when they would be here. The troops arrived here on the morning of Thursday. The riot occurred on Monday. I proceeded with the company of troops to Cainhoy.

Q. Did you post them or place them or instruct them what it was their duty to do ?—A. I did, sir.

Q. What were your instructions ?—A. To preserve the peace, and prevent any armed parties from passing through the country or making any attack on anybody. At Cainhoy we found some fifty men under arms, citizens of the city.

Q. White men ?—A. Yes, sir. They were detachments from several different clubs of the city, who were there on duty.

Q. Were they all from the city of Charleston, so far as you know ?—A. All of them, I believe, sir.

Q. Will you please to say if you did anything further after posting the troops there ?—A. I required the men who were on duty to withdraw.

Q. Did they do so ?—A. They came back to the city on the boat with me.

By Mr. JONES :

Q. Did the United States troops come back with you ?—A. They remained there until after the election.

By Mr. BANKS :

Q. I will ask you if you made any official report of your doings to anybody ; and, if so, to whom ?—A. I made a report to the Attorney-General at Washington.

Q. Have you a copy of your report ?—A. I have, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane :) )

Q. Were you requested by the Attorney-General, or by any other officer of the United States Government at Washington, or elsewhere, to have those troops sent to Cainhoy?—A. I had no particular request in this particular case.

Q. Did you have any communication from Washington on the subject of Cainhoy prior to your action in the premises?—A. I did not.

Q. Is the report of which you have spoken confined only to the official actions which you have stated in evidence, or does it contain an account of the previous riot?—A. My report contains an account of the riot.

Q. Did you have any personal knowledge of the facts set forth in that report, so far as the riot was concerned?—A. I was not present, but my information was derived from parties who were on the ground.

Q. Was your information derived from any Government officer, detailed by you, who was upon the ground?—A. It was not.

Q. Then you made up your report, of which you have spoken, solely upon inquiries which you made of private individuals who were at Cainhoy during the trouble?—A. It was made up from inquiries of private individuals, and of State officials who were there.

Q. What State officials who were there?—A. The sheriff of the county, Mr. Bowen, was there, and some other State officials.

Q. Who?—A. Mr. McKinley.

Q. What is his position?—A. He is register of mesne conveyances.

Q. Any other State officials?—A. I do not recollect it.

Q. If I correctly understand you, without having any personal knowledge as to this riot; without having been requested by any authority at Washington to forward any statement on the subject, you forwarded a report in regard to this riot, which report was founded upon the facts which you learned from Mr. Bowen, the sheriff; Mr. McKinley, the recorder of deeds; and other private persons who were there at the scene of the riot, is that correct?—A. It is, partially only.

Q. In what respect is it incorrect?—A. If I give you a direct answer to that question, I will not state the fact fully as it should be stated.

Q. Here is the point that I want: I simply want to know whether you had any other knowledge in reference to the facts contained in your report about the Cainhoy riot than such knowledge as you obtained from Mr. Bowen, from the recorder of deeds, and other parties who might have been present at the scene of the riot?—A. My information, as I said, was obtained entirely from conferences with Mr. Bowen, with Mr. McKinley, and with a dozen or twenty others who were private parties.

Q. Had you any power to administer oaths?—A. I had not.

Q. Did you administer oaths to any of those voters who made their statements to you?—A. I did not.

By Mr. JONES:

Q. Were they not all republicans?—A. They were not; the majority of them were democrats.

Q. You have not named one, have you?—A. No, sir; I have not.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. Is it a part of your duty as marshal of the United States to keep the peace in this district?—A. It is my duty.

Q. In case of public disturbances, would you think it necessary to wait for orders from Washington to take any action?—A. I have not waited at any time under such circumstances for orders.

Q. Did you think it your duty upon the call of the deputy sheriff of this county to take the action he required?—A. I regarded it as for the public peace. The condition of the city was such that the authorities of the State were not able for some time to protect the peace of the State, and troops had to be scattered over the State to keep the peace.

Q. Your report sets forth the ground upon which you moved?—A. Yes, sir; my report sets out with the cause which is regarded as leading to the riot, and the facts of the riot, and the result of it.

Q. Did you endeavor to get the exact truth without any regard to its political relations?—A. I did.

Q. And you consulted anybody that you met in regard to it without regard to personal or political feelings?—A. I will state that I got all the information I could get from the democrats, and then from the republicans. Statements were published in the papers by editorials, and reporters, and also by affidavits of men who were present on the occasion. I gathered a very considerable portion of my information from the affidavits of the men who were present.

Q. What you regarded as more important you gathered from democrats?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you made a general report of what you had done to the Attorney-General?—A. Yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane:)

Q. Your duties are prescribed by law?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. They are those of United States marshal?—A. They are.

Q. And there are no other powers conferred upon you than such as are conferred upon all other United States marshals under the law?—A. No other.

Q. If I understood you correctly, you say that you talked with democrats and republicans alike about this Cainhoy affair?—A. I did.

Q. You did not swear any of them?—A. I did not.

Q. You simply had conversations with them?—A. That is all.

Q. You did not take down in writing any part of nor all of what they said?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. But after having talked over the affairs and drawn your inferences from it?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. BANKS. I offer that report as a part of the history of this matter, to be embodied in the testimony. A report has been received here from a military officer in connection with the political affairs of this city and county, and I offer this testimony as upon the same principle.

The CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane.) The evidence is excluded as incompetent, nor could it possibly be admitted upon the same principle as that which justified the admission of the report of General Hunt, who was a military officer, specially charged by the War Department with the conduct of the troops in this section of the State during the election, and was required to make the report which he subsequently made under the rules and regulations of the War Department, and which report was made up from facts within his own knowledge and from the reports of Army officers under his command, intrusted with an official duty, and having official knowledge of the facts which were reported to him in a regular way, he being their commanding officer. The witness has already stated what he did as United States marshal. He has given all the facts within his knowledge; we have taken the testimony of both Mr. Bowen and Mr. McKinley; the witness does not pretend to have any personal knowledge of the facts of the Cainhoy riot, nor were those facts communicated to him by any officer whose duty required him to so act.

Mr. BANKS. I offer this report now, without any reference to the report of General Hunt or the military officer in command here, as a report made up by the marshal of the United States for the district of South Carolina, in the line of his duty, upon the call of the public officers of this city and county, and in obedience to the general instructions of the Government at Washington and of the laws under which he is appointed, and I desire to say that whether or not this might be competent testimony, if a man was on trial to be punished for any crime committed there, it is certainly part of the official history of this affair, as having been made by an officer of the Government of the United States, acting in the line of his duty upon the demand of the public authorities of this city and county, with reference to the disturbance of the public peace, where several persons had been killed, and in which he was assisted by detachments of the United States troops, and of which he was required by his instructions from the General Government, as well as by the laws under which he was appointed, to make report to the proper officers of the Government.

The CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane.) The majority of the committees do not agree with you in your statement of the facts proven. The evidence of the witness will speak for itself, and no discussion upon that question is now necessary. The report offered in evidence is excluded as incompetent. The witness has already stated all facts within his own knowledge to which there was no objection made by the majority. What he may have learned from inquiries from other parties under the circumstances detailed by himself cannot be admitted here.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Monday, January 1, 1877.

ABRAM SMITH (colored) sworn and examined.

By Mr. BANKS:

Question. Where do you reside?—Answer. At Mount Pleasant, Charleston County.

Q. What is your business?—A. I am a trial-justice, sir.

Q. What is your age?—A. Forty-three.

Q. Do you know anything of the affair that happened at Cainhoy at a republican meeting there about the middle of October?—A. I was there, sir.

Q. What time did you get there?—A. I went there on the steamer Pocosin. I arrived at the village of Cainhoy between one and half past one o'clock.

Q. What time did you get to the meeting?—A. We got to the meeting about two o'clock.

Q. Will you please state to the committee what you saw and what you know of your own knowledge as having transpired there?—A. Mr. Bowen and myself drove up in a buggy and got there about ten or fifteen minutes before the rest of the party.

Q. What did you see when you got there?—A. When I got there I met a good deal of colored mens and white mens there on the ground.

Q. Which had the most?—A. More colored mens was there.

Q. About how many altogether?—A. Well, I suppose about two hundred.

Q. Well, sir, what happened?—A. I told the people that we were gwine to have a jint discussion and they must have peace, and not to ask any questions. After that the meeting was called to order by James Stewart, on the republican side.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane:)

Q. This you told the colored people before the people came up from the boat?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. Was the meeting called to order before the whites came?—A. No, sir. Mr. Stewart was chairman on the republican side and Mr. Saunders on the democrat side. Then Mr. St. Julian Jervey was introduced as the first speaker on the democrat side; he spoke his time out.

Q. What was his time?—A. Half an hour. It was to be half an hour to each. As soon as Mr. Jervey got through the band struck up the music. The band stopped and Mr. William McKinley was introduced on the republican side. Mr. McKinley spoke about four or five words. There was three women in an old building to the left that appeared like it was a place some time back to drive carriages in.

Q. Where was the building with reference to the platform?—A. To the left. The women ran out and says, "The democrats has those republicans' guns." I hear, "Look out!" I hear bang, bang from a gun; then I saw a old man fall right in the road, just about ten or fifteen feet from the back part of the building, and looking toward the place from where I hear the firing there was fifteen democrats, each man having a musket in his hand.

Q. Well, sir, what did they do?—A. They were standing with the guns in their hands like to the platform. Mr. Bowen said to Mr. O'Connor, "Those mens with guns in their hands is your mens." Mr. O'Connor says, "Where did you get those guns?" The answer was, "We captured them." Some one say, "Hold on to them." I don't know whether it was Mr. O'Connor who said it. Then the crowd of colored men rushed to this old building to make up to those men and appear like each man lay hold to a man and they commenced tussling with the guns, and some of the white men dropped the guns and run.

Q. Were the men they laid hold of white men?—A. Yes, sir; and while they were tussling with the guns, the guns fired off, but no one didn't get shot at the time. Then I saw colored men coming from different parts of the bushes with guns, and after they came out of the bushes, I think there was ten or fifteen men was coming up with guns toward where the democrats were standing in a crowd together. Some of the democrats said, "Mr. Bowen, for God's sake, protect us." Mr. Bowen then was standing with the democrats. Mr. Bowen says, "I am not going to face those muskets and leave my back in the rear. If some of you democrats will go along with me, I will go and speak to stop those mens." Mr. George Walker stepped from the crowd of democrats right behind Mr. Bowen, and Mr. Bowen and Mr. Walker went and spoke to them, the colored mens with guns in their hands, and the mens with the guns in their hands dispersed, and by the time Mr. Walker returned back to the democrat crowd, the democrat crowd began to run back toward Caluhoy village, and I heard firing of guns. And I heard firing of guns after the crowd leaved the church, but I don't know what was done after that. I staid there until the last.

Q. You only heard?—A. Yes, sir, I only heard; I didn't see them.

Q. Well, sir, how were the people divided there during the speaking, when Jervey was speaking, and when McKinley began to speak?—A. They were all mixed together.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane:)

Q. About the stand?—A. Yes, sir; about the stand.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. Whereabouts?—A. Just surrounding it.

Q. Where were you standing when this colored man who fell was shot?—A. I was standing on the left of the stand, and I could see right through the building.

Q. Where was the colored man standing who fell?—A. The colored man was about ten or fifteen feet the other side of the building.

Q. To the rear or beyond it?—A. Beyond it.

Q. Did you see where that shot came from; if so, tell the committee where it came from?—A. The shot came from just about a little to the right of the rear of the building. This man Cyrus Guillard had been speaking to the man and had just left him standing leaning on his stick.

Q. Did you see the man who shot the gun?—A. Yes; it was a white man.

Q. Where did he stand?—A. At and beyond the building, and fired at the man who stood in the rear of the building.

Q. Did you see anybody else who was shot?—A. No, sir; I didn't know anything about it till the next morning I read it in the paper.

Q. Do you know whether or not there was any expectation or preparation on the part of the colored men in this affair?—A. Not to my knowing. I have been all through the last campaign, but I never knew a quieter meeting. There was no disturbance whatever until it began. There was no arguing of questions at all.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane:)

Q. You are, I believe, a member of the legislature?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you elected at the last election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were a trial-justice before you were elected to the legislature?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been a trial-justice?—A. Nearly two years.

Q. What parish do you live in?—A. Christ Church Parish.

Q. How far did you live away from the Cainhoy meeting?—A. I live one way about fifteen miles.

Q. You served in the legislature this last session at Columbia—that is, in the Mackey legislature?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who sent word to you to come down and appear before this committee?—A. Mr. Bowen.

Q. When did you come down?—A. I came down this morning on the 12 o'clock boat from Mount Pleasant.

Q. Have you seen Mr. Bowen since you came to town?—A. Yes, sir; I saw him.

Q. Did you go to see him when you came in on the boat?—A. No, sir; I met him on the street.

Q. You told him you had come down to appear before the committee?—A. No, sir.

Q. You did not tell him that you had word from him?—A. No, sir. I received a message yesterday that he wanted to see me.

Q. He did not tell you what he wanted to see you for—just told you that he wanted to see you?—A. Yes, sir; that was the message.

Q. And you came down and saw Mr. Bowen in obedience to that message?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, you did see him about it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he say to you?—A. He says, "The investigation committee is here in session about this riot in Cainhoy," and that I had better go and give in my evidence.

Q. What did you say to him?—A. I told him, "I will do so."

Q. What else did he say to you?—A. Nothing more, sir.

Q. How long did you talk together?—A. I got over here about 1 o'clock, I believe. I didn't talk with him not more than about two minutes.

Q. You say that you drove with Mr. Bowen up from Cainhoy to the place of meeting?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you at once sent to the colored people that were gathered there and told them that there was going to be a joint discussion?—A. I did, sir.

Q. And that you wanted them to be quiet, preserve peace and order, and not have any trouble or fight, or anything of that kind?—A. Yes, sir; and not to ask any questions.

Q. How many colored people were there at that time?

The WITNESS. Do you mean when I got there?

The CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane.) Yes.

A. I think there were about two hundred head.

Q. How many were in the crowd when the meeting commenced?—A. I don't think there were any more than three hundred.

Q. How many white men do you think were there?—A. I think about two hundred and fifty.

Q. Did you count the colored people?—A. No; I didn't count them, no more than to make a guess of it.

Q. There was no arrangement of the whites from the blacks at all?—A. They were mixed up all together at the time.

Q. As you looked to the right, to the left, and in front of the stand, they were just all standing together?—A. Yes, sir; only except when I saw the mens with the fifteen guns.

Q. Were you on the platform at any time?—A. No, sir.

Q. Where were you standing when the meeting commenced?—A. I was standing as I afore said, to the left of the platform.

Q. Right close up?—A. Almost close up.

Q. During the speaking, up till the time when the cry was heard that you spoke of, you are positive that there was great order observed by the colored people?—A. Yes, sir; as I afore said I never seed a better-behaved meeting than that.

Q. You have had some experience in this campaign?—A. O, yes, I always went around, and spoke some myself.

Q. And you were struck with the singular good order that was preserved?—A. Yes, sir; I was listening to the speaking myself.

Q. You did not hear any singing, or whistling, or hollowing?—A. Not even talking among themselves—just listening to the speaker.

Q. There seemed to be a perfect silence?—A. A perfect silence. You could a'most hear a pin drop on the floor.

Q. You were struck with that at the time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, what was the first thing that you heard after McKinley got up?—A. After McKinley got up on the stand, and spoke about four or five words—

Q. Then you heard the first thing?—A. The first thing I heard was these three women came out of the building and said, "The democrats have those men's guns."

Q. The republicans' guns?—A. Yes, sir; the republicans' guns.

Q. They ran out, if I correctly understand, and said, "The democrats have the republicans' guns." Then you heard some one say, "Look out!" Then you heard the report of a gun, and then saw an old black man, ten or fifteen feet away from the building, fall?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Just as quick as you heard the women run out and tell about these guns, and heard some voice cry, "look out," you saw the shot and saw the old man fall?—A. I didn't say "saw the shot;" I say heard the report of the gun; then I looked.

Q. Then you looked to where you heard the report and you saw fifteen white men with muskets; each one had a gun; they were looking to the platform, and pointing their guns in that direction? That was the next step in the programme?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you heard Mr. Bowen, who was on the platform—? A. I didn't say he was on the platform.

Q. Then he was not on the platform at the time?—A. No, sir.

Q. You heard him say, standing off the platform, to Mr. O'Connor, "Those men with guns in their hands are your men." O'Connor and Bowen were both off when this remark was made?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And were they to the right or the left of the stand?—A. They were to the right of the stand.

Q. They were among the white men?—A. Yes, sir; all mixed up together.

Q. Mr. O'Connor said to the men, "Where did you get those guns?" did he?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they said, "We captured them?"—A. That was the answer.

Q. And all this time, while this conversation was going on, these men were standing with the guns pointed toward the speakers' stand. Is that correct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And somebody said, "Hold on to them!" and at that point a crowd of colored men rushed on to the white men and caught the guns, and they had a struggle for those guns with the white men?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Some of the white men dropped the guns and ran?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Some of the guns went off in the tussle that they had there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the negroes captured some of these guns, did they?—A. Yes, sir; they did.

Q. Then you saw colored men, just at that point, coming from different parts of the bushes with guns?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And some of these men coming toward the crowd where the democrats were standing together?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you heard some democrat say to Mr. Bowen, "For God's sake, protect us?"—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Bowen and Mr. Walker went over to where this band of colored men was?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, now, at that time where did the crowd of white men go?—A. They retreated toward the church.

Q. Where did you go at that time?—A. I staid there.

Q. Well, did you move at all from the stand?—A. O, yes; I moved out of the way of the guns. When I saw these men with the guns pointed toward the stand I fetched up a little more toward the white men.

Q. Well, did you retreat with the white men?—A. When Mr. Bowen and Mr. Walker moved I went to the broadside of them, toward the muskets.

Q. Well, then you went away, and you do not know what occurred after that?—A. No; because these democrats then retreated back from where the stand was. They appeared to be trying to escape toward Cainhoy village.

Q. And the colored men were advancing?—A. The colored men were in the woods.

Q. You saw this scattered line in the woods?—A. Yes, sir; I saw it become a general thing.

Q. You could see them along in the woods with their muskets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you went away. Well, now, Mr. Smith, I want to ask you this question: How many shots did you fire?—A. I never fired one.

Q. Mr. Walker swears that you fired a pistol three times.—A. That was something between Mr. Walker and myself before that.

Q. When did that occur?—A. It occurred two weeks before, at Mount Pleasant.

Q. Mr. Walker said that at Cainhoy you got upon the stand, and that you fired three shots, and that he presented his pistol at you, and would have killed you; that he snapped one cap, and that the pistol missed fire, and then he hallooed at you "If you fired another shot" he would kill you. Now, do you say that that is not true?—A. That is not true; and Mr. Walker never saw me with a pistol in my hand, and never said nothing to me. He said that from prejudice.

Q. Well, how about Mr. Jervay? Is he prejudiced in the same way; do you think?—A. I don't know about Mr. Jervay.

Q. Do you think he is prejudiced enough to swear to what is not true before the committee?—A. I don't know; the man can say as he pleases.

Q. Well, how about Mr. McKiuley? Do you think he would testify falsely before the committee?—A. I don't know.

Q. Well, if all these men say you had a pistol in your hand, they swear to a mistake?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have a pistol with you that day?—A. I did.

Q. What kind of a pistol?—A. About eight or ten inches long.

Q. You say you did not shoot it from the platform?—A. I didn't shoot it at all.

Q. Did you have it in your hand for the purpose of protection if you were assaulted by anybody?—A. I had it in my pocket.

Q. But I say during the fight did you have your pistol in your hand to protect yourself if anybody assaulted you?—A. I had it in my pocket, not in my hand. I didn't take it out at all.

Q. Then you say that, though this firing was going on and this excitement, although you had a pistol loaded in your pocket, you did not have it in your hand that day.—A. No, sir; I didn't take it in my hand that day. I didn't take it out to no one that day.

Q. Did you see the colored men killing anybody?—A. No, sir; I didn't see no other man killed but that old colored man; positively I didn't.

Q. And he was killed in the way you have detailed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say you had a difficulty at Mount Pleasant with Mr. Walker, in which you had a pistol.—A. Yes, sir; some two weeks before that.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Monday, January 1, 1877.

JAMES H. MONTMOLIN (colored) sworn and examined.

By Mr. BANKS:

Question. What is your business?—Answer. At present I am boating on the Santee River, about fifty-one miles from here.

Q. Where do you reside?—A. Well, I have been there for the last fifteen or eighteen days. I belonged to Savannah. Formerly I've lived in Charleston for four years, more or less.

Q. What is your age?—A. I was born the 23d of September, 1844; that makes me thirty-two years old.

Q. Were you at the meeting at Cainhoy in October?—A. I was, sir; on the 16th of October.

Q. What time did you get there?—A. I left the city about nine o'clock in the morning on the boat, and I got there, I suppose, about eleven o'clock.

Q. Do you refer to arriving at the landing?—A. Yes, sir; to the landing at Cainhoy village.

Q. What time did you get to the meeting?—A. I don't think we got there till about a few minutes of twelve.

Q. Well, sir, tell us what you saw or what you know of your own knowledge as to the transactions of that meeting.—A. There was a joint discussion between the republicans and the democrats at Cainhoy on the 16th of October. It was agreed upon here in the city to have a joint discussing. There is where they met. The meeting was called to order shortly after I got there and all parties had arrived by the republican chairman, C. C. Bowen. He then announced to the democratic party that he was ready to open the meeting. They sent forth their chairman to the stand and introduced to the audience Mr. Jervay; I don't know his other name. Mr. Jervay I suppose spoke about half an hour, not interrupted at all by neither party. He was notified by Mr. O'Connor that his time was up. They had limited each speaker to half an hour. When he was notified that his time was up they brought forth a man by the name of McKinley as a republican speaker and introduced him the same, and he mounted the stand, and while he did that the band of music commenced to play. While McKinley was getting ready to speak some one of the colored people said, "Stop the music, and let's hear what our side has to say." The music stopped. McKinley had spoken about a half a minute when some one hollered out, "Look out, McKinley, you're goin' to be killed." I then turned my face toward an old weather-house, or carriage-house, as it is called, which was formerly used to keep horses and carriages out of the wet when they came to the church, and there I saw about fifteen or sixteen white men with old muskets in their hands. I could look right through the doors. There was two doors to it, and it opened right facing to the stand, and you could look right through it. Three of them was on the inside and the balance was in the rear of the door of the building. The three men that were inside looked as though they wanted to shoot some one; they had their pieces in position as if they were wanting to use them. The whole thing was inside of a half a minute. At that moment the crowd broke from the speakers' stand, running both toward the swamp and toward the church—I mean to say that the entire crowd around the speakers' stand. As the crowd broke there was a shot fired from the rear of the building, and it killed an old man about 10 feet from where Bowen stood. He was going toward the swamp. Then there was three or four more shots fired from the rear of the building, which was returned.

Q. Do you know from whence the first shot came?—A. I don't know, sir; I couldn't identify anybody.

Q. Did you see the man that fired?—A. No, sir; I didn't see the man that fired the shot; but I saw the men who had the guns in their hands; and as the crowd broke the old man was shot in my sight. I heard the report and saw the man when he fell, but didn't go to him to see where he was shot and by whom he was shot, because I was going up toward the church. On my way to the church I met Mr. Bowen and Mr. O'Connor about 10 feet from the speakers' stand. Mr. Bowen said to Mr. O'Connor, "Those are your men with those guns in their hands; go and stop them." But I didn't stay to hear the reply; I kept on, and I met Mr. Walker, who was standing right in front of the church, who cried out two or three times, "White men, hold the ground!" He had in his hands what looked to be an English navy revolver. He had it right across the barrel, in his right hand. In that time the firing became general. The firing then was from both sides; but I got away from it; I didn't stay to see any more of it.

Q. Did you see the man that fired that first shot?—A. No, sir; I don't know who it was. I only know where the shot came from, because I was at one end of the buildin' myself.

Q. Was there any disturbance in the meeting before this cry was made that they were going to shoot?—A. No, sir; they were just as quiet as they could be.

Q. Are you a republican yourself?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether the colored men expected any trouble that day?—A. No, sir; I don't think so, sir, because heretofore at meetings there had been men coming from ten, fifteen, or twenty miles, bringing their arms, and they stacked them right at the stand; but on this occasion they had been advised not to bring arms. On this occasion there was no arms seen by me at all.

Q. Had you any arms yourself—pistol, knife, club, or anything of that sort?—A. No, sir; nothing of the kind.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane:)

Q. Where do you say you live?—A. I am up in the country; I am cutting wood.

Q. Where?—A. Up at Saint Stephen's, on the Santee River.

Q. How far from Charleston is that?—A. About fifty-one miles.

Q. When did you come to Charleston?—A. Saturday evening.

Q. At whose request?—A. At no one's request.

Q. How did you come to be a witness here?—A. Because I was notified yesterday afternoon.

Q. By whom?—A. A man by the name of Howard.

Q. Who did Howard come from?—A. I don't know.

Q. What did he tell you?—A. He asked me did I make a statement before the coroner's jury in reference to the fight at Cainhoj. I told him I did; and he told me that the committee was down here, and that I would be required here to-day.

Q. Who is Howard?—A. Howard is a man that works across the city here.

Q. What does he do?—A. He is a jailor; assistant jailor.

Q. He keeps the jail. When did you form his acquaintance?—A. Two or three years ago.

Q. Were you in prison?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did he tell you that Mr. Bowen told him to tell you that?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he tell you about Mr. Walker having been examined?—A. No, sir.

Q. Are you sure about that?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did anybody tell you that Mr. Walker had been examined?—A. I heard this morning that Mr. Walker had been examined.

Q. Who told you?—A. I heard it from one or two men.

Q. Did Mr. Stone tell you?—A. No, sir; Mr. Stone didn't tell me. I heard it from one or two of the colored men out in the hall. I don't know the names.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Mr. Stone?—A. Yes, sir; I had a conversation with him.

Q. Well, how did the two colored men out in the hall come to tell you that Mr. Walker had testified here?—A. I asked them who all was before the committee and they told me that Mr. Bowen had been before the committee, and that Mr. Walker and Captain White had been before the committee. Those men were all in that fight.

Q. But you asked them who had been before the committee, and they told you. Well, now, you say that you had a conversation with Mr. Stone. When did you have that conversation?—A. This morning.

Q. What was the conversation?—A. He said nothing in the world about this matter.

Q. And you said nothing to him about testifying in this case?—A. O, yes, sir; we were speaking about a gentleman who had testified in this case who didn't go before the coroner's jury. He made a statement which was published in the News and Courier of this town.

Q. Who was that man?—A. Mr. Fickin.

Q. You and Mr. Stone were talking about this Mr. Fickin's testimony?—A. McKinley and Stone were talking, and he called me into it to ask a question about the firing, and then we sent off to get the paper to see how it was, but I don't think they found it.

Q. They sent off to get the newspaper to find out who had appeared as witnesses before the committee?—A. They sent off to find about a gentleman.

Q. They sent off to get a copy of a newspaper to see if an individual named Fickin had made a statement?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. They sent from the hall outside this room where witnesses were standing awaiting their turn to be called in?—A. I don't know anything about that.

Q. You saw them sending out for the newspaper?—A. We three were together. We didn't have nothing to do at that time with witnesses.

Q. Yes, I know; but you saw them sending out; you saw Mr. McKinley sending for it?—A. Mr. McKinley asked for it, and somebody went and got it.

Q. The paper came and you looked over it to ascertain whether Mr. Fickin had made a statement in reference to this Cainhoy matter?—A. We did.

Q. Was not Mr. Fickin waiting outside at that time?—A. I didn't see him.

Q. Did you not know he was outside waiting?—A. Afterwards; but he wasn't there at that time.

Q. You saw Mr. Jervey about, too?—A. I don't know him.

Q. Well, did you see the deputy coroner who was in here this morning?—A. Yes, sir. That was the way the whole matter came up, the deputy coroner being there with our statements copied on the book. That was the way it came up.

Q. Did you refer to the book of the deputy coroner?—A. Not as I know of.

Q. Did you not see it?—A. I asked him what it was, and he said it was statements, and I asked him if he had mine, and he said he had.

Q. Did you refer to it?—A. I did.

Q. You referred to the book containing the statement which you had made before the coroner? Now, I wish you would state, sir, if you please, whether, when Mr. Bowen made this remark, "Those are your men, and you ought to go and stop them," you saw at that time Mr. Bowen and Mr. O'Connor standing about ten feet from the platform?—A. At that time, yes, sir.

Q. Are you sure of that?—A. Pretty certain.

Q. Are you as certain of that as of any other fact that you have testified to?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, if Mr. Bowen, in his testimony, stated that he made that remark to Mr. O'Connor on the platform, he is incorrect in his statement?—A. He may have made the remark the second time; they might have gone back.

Q. Did they go back on the stand?—A. I didn't stay to see them go back.

Q. At the time you heard this remark there had been considerable firing?—A. There wasn't more than five or six guns shot.

Q. Are you sure of that?—A. I am, because I was right there; but I was unarmed, and I wanted to get away, and I could distinctly hear them.

Q. Are you certain that shots had been fired before you heard this remark made by Bowen?—A. I am.

Q. As sure of that as of any other fact that you have stated here?—A. I am.

Q. Then, if Mr. Bowen testified that he was on the platform with O'Connor, that he walked over from the position where he stood to where O'Connor was sitting, and made a remark of that kind which you have just detailed, Mr. Bowen is mistaken?—

A. He might have been mistaken.

Q. You say these colored people were very quiet before this meeting?—A. Both white and colored were very quiet.

Q. You observed that they were very quiet; that they made no disturbance or interruptions of any kind?—A. The colored people were very silent and peaceable.

Q. Did you ever see any party of negroes rushing onto these men that had the guns, and tussle with them?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did any man do that?—A. Not as I saw, they didn't do it.

Q. Positively?—A. I tell you positively that they didn't do it.

Q. Do you know Mr. Abram Smith, a member of the legislature?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You saw him there that day?—A. I did.

Q. Mr. Smith says the crowd of colored people rushed up to the building and caught hold of the guns in the hands of the white men and commenced tussling, and while they were tussling the guns went off. Some of the white men threw the guns down and ran?—A. I didn't see that.

Q. You say that no such thing as that occurred?—A. I didn't see it.

Q. You have stated that you had your eye on these men all the time; now, how could this have happened without your seeing it?—A. No such thing could have occurred while I was on the ground.

Q. You did not see any colored men kill any white men?—A. I didn't, sir.

Q. You were not present when the colored men were chopping up the wounded with axes?—A. No, sir; and I don't believe it was done.

Q. You were not present when old Mr. Simmonds, the old white man, sixty-five years of age, was murdered?—A. I was not, sir.

Q. You did not see them shoot him through the body, and see him lying there with his head inside the vestry-door and his body outside?—A. I didn't.

Q. You did not see them take an ax and cut the muscle part of the arm, taking part of the bone with it?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see any of the dead bodies of the white men, at all?—A. I saw only one; he wasn't dead; he died afterwards.

Q. Did you see him on the field?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you do anything to him?—A. I did not.

Q. Did you speak to him?—A. I didn't. I saw him leaning up against a tree.

Q. You passed him by?—A. I did; I went right straight forward. I wasn't armed; I didn't even have a pocket-knife upon my person.

Q. If I have correctly understood you, one of the grounds which leads you to believe that this was not a premeditated massacre is that the colored people did not bring their guns and stack them by the stand—that no guns were visible; am I correct in that?—
A. You are; I saw no guns. Everything was perfectly peaceable and quiet.

By Mr. JONES :

Q. You went up on the boat?—A. I did, sir.

Q. Did you see any guns on the boat?—A. I did not.

Q. Did you see any guns before you got to the place of meeting?—A. I didn't, sir.

Q. You said something about the habit of the people coming to these meetings and stacking their guns at the stand?—A. Persons at various other places had been in the habit of coming to attend these meetings from some five or eight or ten miles off, and would always bring their guns.

Q. Did you see any arms at this Cainhoj meeting at all?—A. I saw no arms except what I saw in the hands of these men in the excitement.

Q. Is Cainhoj a pretty thickly settled place?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the number of colored men around there?—A. I suppose there's some five or six hundred voters.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Monday, January 1, 1877.

W. ST. JULIAN JERVEY sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Cochrane):

Question. You are a member of the bar in the city of Charleston and a democrat?—
Answer. I am, sir.

Q. You are the gentleman who made the first speech at the Cainhoj meeting?—A. Yes, sir; and the only speech there.

Q. I want to ask you, sir, whether you saw Mr. Abram Smith, the republican member of the present so-called legislature, with any weapon in his hand during the disturbance which occurred there.—A. I did, sir; I saw him with a pistol.

Q. Where was he?—A. He was standing on the platform from which we had spoken.

Q. Just state what he did.—A. I saw him fire three shots towards a party of white men, about as far as from here to the corner of the room away from him, [about fifteen feet.] By the time he had fired the third shot, I myself placed my hand on my pistol and said to him, "Don't fire again or I will shoot you."

Q. Did you see Mr. Walker in that neighborhood at that time?—A. Yes, sir; he was standing near me, and I heard him make the same threat.

By Mr. BANKS:

Q. What is Mr. Smith's name?—A. Abram Smith.

Q. What colored man is he?—A. Pretty black—coal-black; he wears a mustache that runs down to a point. He is the same man who is in the Bennett House.

The subcommittee adjourned sine die.

RECENT ELECTION IN SOUTH CAROLINA.

TESTIMONY

TAKEN BY THE

SELECT COMMITTEE ON THE RECENT ELECTION IN SOUTH CAROLINA.

JANUARY 12, 1877.—Ordered to be printed.

CHARLESTON, S. C., December 20, 1876.

WILLIAM H. HARD sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Phillips :)

Question. Where do you reside?—Answer. At Sineth's Station, Saint James Goose Creek Parish.

Q. In this county and State?—A. Yes, sir; Charleston County, this State.

Q. What is your age?—A. I am 25 years of age.

Q. Where did you vote at the late election?—A. At Whaley's Church precinct.

Q. Were you at that election in any official capacity? and, if so, state what it was.—A. I was one of the managers of the election, sir.

Q. Who were the other managers at that precinct?—A. The other two were colored men, named Middleton and Grant; it is either Grant or Gant, but I think it is Grant.

Q. Do you remember the vote at that precinct?—A. I do, sir; the whole vote was 600.

Q. What proportion of whites and blacks voted at that precinct?—A. I think between ten and twelve whites voted there. I could count them and tell you every one of them.

Q. And the balance were blacks?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember how many democratic votes were polled at that precinct?—A. Eighteen, sir.

Q. State whether there were any organized companies at that precinct that day; and, if so, state all you know about it.—A. I cannot say that I knew of any organized companies, only as clubs.

Q. Were there organized clubs there; and, if so, of which party?—A. By the republican party, sir; they came to the polls in clubs.

Q. State whether those clubs, or any of them, were armed or not that day?—A. They had their clubs, sir; and I saw guns also.

Q. What sort of clubs did they have?—A. Hickory or oak sticks, sir. They were made square, with six or eight edges—round sticks, made with edges.

Q. Were they old sticks, or did they have the appearance of having been recently made?—A. Some were old, and some of them had just a small-sized bush cut down, or small-sized trees cut down with a knife—just recently made.

Q. How many guns did you see there that day?—A. Well, sir, when they came up to the polls with their guns—I mean in a quantity, when they marched around—I suppose there was thirty-five or forty men, perhaps more, but in that neighborhood, with rifles and double-barreled guns.

Q. Describe what they did when they came there.—A. They marched around the house, singing "Hold the fort for Hayes and Wheeler and Chamberlain," and fired off a salute, and orders were given to them to reload as quickly as possible.

Q. What time of day did that occur?—A. I suppose it was half past four or five o'clock in the afternoon when they fired this salute.

Q. What time did they get there in the morning with those guns?—A. Well, sir, I can't state the time. I saw guns about twelve o'clock, I suppose; perhaps between two and three o'clock. When I saw the bulk of the guns was when they marched about the polls, between four and five o'clock.

Q. Did they have those guns in their hands through the day about the polls?—A. No, sir; not all of them. They were off, I suppose, about seventy-five to one hundred yards, stacked in the bushes. In other words, they were in a group together, where they had them stacked.

Q. State whether you saw or heard any evidences of threats made toward voters there that day; and, if so, what it was, by whom the threats were made, and what acts, if any, you saw.—A. Of course I wasn't outside. From the window, where I could see out, there were men who took every ticket before it was voted and examined it. They had what they called "rallying committees," and when a man came to vote, one of the committee would examine the ticket before he voted it. Every colored man who voted, his ticket was examined before he put it in the box. When he voted his ticket he was made to hold it up in his right hand so they could see what ticket it was.

Q. How could they tell which party his ticket represented?—A. Simply because it was a red and black ticket.

Q. Which party did the red ticket represent?—A. The republican party—the Chamberlain ticket.

Q. The other was the democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir. There was another black ticket that had Hayes and Wheeler on it, and Hampton and C. C. Bowen.

Q. What office was C. C. Bowen running for?—A. Sheriff, sir. I don't know whether his name was on the dark ticket as elector at large, but I know it was on as sheriff.

Q. How near to the ballot-box was this rallying committee, as you call it?—A. About 15 feet, I suppose; from five to fifteen steps; sometimes farther.

Q. Did they require every colored voter who came up to exhibit his ticket?

(Mr. Lapham objects to the question as leading, and as a fact already stated.)

The Witness. I stated this, that every one that voted showed his ticket, as a general rule. They would go up to the voter and make him show his ticket.

Q. Which party did that rallying committee represent?—A. The republican party.

Q. Did any colored men vote the democratic ticket there that day?—A. Yes, sir; some few.

Q. About how many?—A. I suppose about seven or eight, somewhere in that neighborhood.

Q. Did you see any interference with any one of those men while voting that ticket?—A. I saw one, sir. He voted his ticket, and as he walked off I saw the crowd rush after him with their sticks.

Q. Which party did those persons that rushed after him represent?—A. The republican party, sir.

Q. Were there any white men in that party?—A. There was not. They pursued this man, and through the influence of Mr. Smith, who was a democrat, and A. P. Ford, a republican, he was released from the mob.

Q. Did you hear him say anything when they were pursuing him? and if so, state what it was.—A. No, sir. I heard them call him "a son of a bitch," or, "kill him;" something like that.

Q. About what time in the afternoon was it when they fired off these guns that you speak of?—A. Between half past four and five o'clock.

Q. How far was that from the voting-place?—A. It wasn't five steps from the house, sir.

Q. Did they reload after awhile?—A. Yes, sir; they did; at least I saw them going through the action.

Q. Did either one of those managers of the election try to exercise any influence over voters? and, if so, state what they did.—A. All I can state in regard to the managers was that one of them, this man named Grant or Gant—I think it was Grant—you might call it electioneering from the window—he was calling out to them from the window to come up and vote. He was out of the house very often, and I had to speak to Middleton, the other republican manager, to call Grant in; that he was staying out too long. He would stay in a while and go out again.

Q. Did you see or know of any voters at that precinct voting more than once? and, if so, state what you know about it.—A. I do, sir. I saw some of them, and challenged their votes. I said that these men had voted before; and they said, Mr. Hard, you must prove this. This man, I said, had voted, by the shirt he had on—a large blue-plaid shirt by which I recognized him—and his answer was that more than one man could have the same shirt; and they overruled me.

Q. Was that a colored man or a white man?—A. A colored man, sir. Another man attempted to vote the second time, but I stopped him.

Q. Did you see these clubs that you speak of attend any political meetings before the election?—A. I saw none.

Q. Were they armed?—A. They were armed with guns, sir; old muskets, double-barreled guns, and rifles, and their clubs. I suppose you would call them armed.

Q. Where was that?—A. Right at Whaley's Church, on the State road, at a public meeting.

Q. When was that?—A. It was in October or September, I think, sir. I don't remember the day of the month or the month exactly, but it was when they held a meeting to send delegates to the county convention.

Q. State whether you have any knowledge or information that any intimidation was exercised toward negroes to prevent them from voting the democratic ticket; and, if so, state what you know about it?—A. The only thing I know in regard to that is there were two men living on my place who of their own free will and accord told me they were going to vote the democratic ticket.

(Mr. Lapham objects to the witness stating what he heard.)

Q. State whether these men you speak of expressed a desire to you before the election to vote the democratic ticket, and whether they did vote the democratic ticket afterward or not.—A. They did express a desire, and the night before came and said it was their wish to vote the democratic ticket, but that they had been threatened if they did vote the democratic ticket their lives would be taken.

Q. Do you know whether they voted the democratic ticket or not?—A. They did not.

Q. Give us the names of those men.—A. Ephraim Chisholm and Joseph Jenkins.

Q. Did you yourself ever hear any colored men make any threats against other colored men, if they should vote the democratic ticket?—A. I have heard them say, in talking, that any man that did ought to be killed. I have heard them say that.

Q. When and where?—A. At my place of business, in my store.

Q. How many parties were about when they made these statements?—A. I suppose about a dozen or so—twelve or fifteen.

Q. Were there any colored persons present at any of these times, when you heard these remarks made?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. LAPHAM. I object to this item of testimony specifically, as being incompetent.

Q. Was this preceding the election?—A. O, yes; men talked that way; it had nothing to do with the election at all. I don't think it had any bearing upon the election at all.

Q. How long did this sort of talk continue; up to the time of the election?—A. As I told you, I heard it in my store once.

Q. Did you hear it anywhere else?—A. I did not, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. How long have you lived in this precinct?—A. Next May will be three years, sir, that I have been living there permanently.

Q. How long have you been a voter there?—A. The last two years before this.

Q. Were you a voter there in 1874?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your business?—A. I carry on the mercantile department for the Charleston Mining and Manufacturing Company. The store is at their works.

Q. You occupy their store?—A. Yes, sir; I have charge of it.

Q. Are their employes colored people mainly?—A. Yes, sir; except the foremen.

Q. How many colored employes in all are employed there?—A. Well, sir, I suppose from three hundred to five hundred men, as the case requires.

Q. Are all of them electors?—A. Yes, sir; except a very few; perhaps five or six—something like that.

Q. Nearly all republicans?—A. Nearly all. Some of them voted the democratic ticket. The majority of them are republicans.

Q. Are the proprietors of this company republicans or democrats?—A. I think they are republicans. It is a Philadelphia company. My judgment is that they are republicans.

Q. I mean the resident managers here.—A. I think all the stockholders live North. Our superintendent is a democrat, and I think the assistant is a republican.

Q. You have not stated how you voted?—A. I voted the democratic ticket.

Q. Do you remember what the democratic vote at that precinct was in 1874?—A. I do not. I was a manager, too, but I have forgotten.

Q. Think a moment.—A. I do not remember.

Q. Was it more or less than the vote polled this year?—A. It was less. It wasn't exactly a democratic vote; it went as an independent republican ticket—the independent republicans and democrats mixed. Both were republicans; one was independent and the other the regular republican ticket.

Q. There was no democratic ticket as such?—A. No, sir.

Q. Where are these two men, Jenkins and Chisholm, now?—A. They reside within twelve miles of the city, sir. One is on my place; the other one is about two or three miles from me.

Q. Are they in your employ yet?—A. One of them is, sir.

Q. When was the other released from your employment?—A. I can't exactly remember the day of the month. He belonged to us. He lived there ever since the war. He stays awhile and goes off awhile and comes back after a while. Its like an old home to him.

Q. But one is yet in your employ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you employ them, or does the superintendent?—A. That is on my plantation I am now speaking.

Q. These are men who worked on your plantation?—A. Yes, sir; on my plantation.

Q. Do you know anything of a rifle-club in your vicinity?—A. I cannot call it a rifle-club. They are what are called clubs. There are none in my vicinity by that name.

Q. Do you know of any white men there that bear arms?—A. I do not, sir.

Q. How many white voters did you say there were in your precinct?—A. I think from eight to twelve, sir.

Q. Do they all vote the democratic ticket?—A. They all do; yes, sir.

Q. There is not a white republican in your precinct?—A. I don't think there is, sir.

Q. I thought you said one of the superintendents was a republican?—A. That is at the precinct, sir.

Q. You voted where your plantation is?—A. Yes, sir. If you will allow me to make one remark: The republican I spoke of—our assistant superintendent—voted the democratic ticket.

Q. Do you know of any one being injured on election-day by a gun or club?—A. I do not, sir.

Q. Can you of your own knowledge name any person who was prevented by force from voting as he wanted to?—A. I cannot, sir.

Q. Can you of your own knowledge name any person who was prevented from exercising his right of suffrage?—A. Only what was told me.

Q. You do not know of any of your own knowledge?—A. No, sir. I only know what parties told me.

Q. Can you say how many votes were cast after five o'clock at your poll?—A. I cannot, sir.

Q. Hadn't the bulk of the vote been cast before that?—A. I think it had, sir.

Q. At what time did the poll close?—A. At six o'clock, sir.

Q. This remark that you heard a person make in your store, I understand you to say you did not regard it as a threat at the time?—A. No, sir; it was merely his opinion.

Q. A mere expression of his opposition to colored men voting the democratic ticket?—A. Exactly.

Q. A mere hyperbolical expression?—A. I didn't regard it as a threat at the time it was made. He said any man that didn't vote the republican ticket ought to be killed.

Q. You did not regard it as a threat of violence?—A. I didn't consider it to be a threat against any one particularly.

Q. Who was the person that said it?—A. His name was Rush Perry, sir. He is one of our men, one of our miners, merely a common laborer.

Q. Who does he work for?—A. For the Charleston Mining and Manufacturing Company, sir.

Q. Did the excitement run pretty high towards the close of the day at your poll?—A. Yes, sir; there was a good deal of excitement.

Q. There was a good deal of interest in the election, wasn't there?—A. Yes, sir; a good deal of interest on the republican side. As I told you, they had a rallying committee outside, and they were vigilant all day long.

Q. There was more opposition to the mixed ticket, more said about that, than either of the others, wasn't there?—A. There wasn't anything said about either ticket. They were made to change their tickets before putting them in the box.

Q. Don't you know the fact that the opposition ticket provoked more?—A. I do not, sir.

Q. Do you know where the chairman, this gentleman here, got the memorandum upon which he has examined you?—A. I saw the colonel this morning, I think, sir.

Q. And you made a statement to him?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where?—A. At the Charleston Hotel.

Q. Who was present?—A. Well, sir, I don't know all the gentlemen. There were several gentlemen present, but I don't know who they all were.

Q. State those whom you knew.—A. Mr. Chors was there, sir.

Q. Who is Chors?—A. He wasn't in at the time.

Q. I ask you who was there?—A. He was there a part of the time.

Q. Who is Chors? Give his full name.—A. I think his full name is Charles Chors.

Q. Any one else that you remember?—A. There were other gentlemen there, but I don't know who they were.

Q. Chors was the only gentleman you knew?—A. At the time; yes, sir.

Q. Where does Chors live?—A. He lives on Cooper River.

Q. Is he a democrat?—A. I think he is, sir.

Q. Did you go there at his request?—A. I did not, sir.

Q. How came you to go there?—A. I went there through the request of Mr. Miles—C. R. Miles.

Q. Where does he live?—A. He lives in Charleston. I can't say I went there at his request. I was summoned yesterday, at least notified, to be down here, and I was down to his office yesterday, and was asked to remain over till to-day.

Q. Who is Miles?—A. He is a lawyer here in the city, and I was looking for him to find out where I could meet the committee; and Mr. Miles said to me, "You will meet some of the gentlemen at the Charleston Hotel."

Q. Is he a democrat?—A. I think he is, sir.

Q. Is he an active politician?—A. I don't think so, sir.

Q. Had you ever talked with him about this?—A. I hadn't opened my mouth to him about it. Mr. Miles knew I was a manager.

Q. Did you file any protest with your returns as to the conduct of the election where you were a manager?—A. I did not—no, sir.

Q. Did you sign the election returns?—A. I did, sir. At least, I signed a book.

Q. You signed with the other managers, whatever it was?—A. Yes, sir. I counted the votes, and after I got through the count I asked our clerk, who was a colored man, and worked very slowly—I told him to let me have a pen and I would help him make the return out.

Q. I do not care for all these details. I simply want to know whether you united with the other managers in signing whatever return of that election was made?—A. I signed the return; yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Mr. Lapham has asked you what transpired between you and myself in regard to this matter. I asked you what you knew about this matter, did I not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you made a statement?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I made a memorandum of your statement?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. With regard to this threat that you heard made at your store, can you tell anything about what effect it had upon the colored men there who heard it?

Mr. LAPHAM. I object to the question on the ground that it asks for a mere inference of opinion and not for a fact.

Q. Can you state what effect that threat had upon other parties in that store; or can you only speak for yourself?—A. I can only speak for myself.

Q. You do not know whether it had any effect upon other parties there or not, do you?—A. No, sir; I do not know whether it had any effect or not.

Q. This conversation that you heard was not against any white person voting the democratic ticket?—A. No, sir; he said any colored man that didn't vote the republican ticket ought to be killed.

Q. This man you heard make this remark, you say, was a common laborer?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is not that the great majority of the class of men in that community?—A. Yes, sir; they are all common laborers.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Can you name anybody else who was present when that remark was made?—A. Well, my clerk was present, sir.

Q. Any other colored persons?—A. Well, sir, I remember some of them. One was Caesar Bowen, and I think he made the same remark. These men, Caesar Bowen and Rush Perry, go together a great deal. They are chums and friends, both of the same character.

Q. Do you remember any others who were there?—A. I do not. I only heard this remark; that was about all.

Q. Was it a pleasant or an angry conversation?—A. They were disputing about politics and the election. This man was very angry. He said any man that voted the democratic ticket ought to be killed.

PETER C. PORCHER sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Question. Where do you reside?—Answer. Saint John, on Cooper River, Berkeley Parish, Charleston County.

Q. How long have you resided there?—A. Three years, this next January.

Q. Where did you reside previous to that?—A. I resided in the same parish, about eighteen miles higher up.

Q. Where did you vote on the day of the late election?—A. At Biggins church.

Q. How far is that from Strawberry precinct?—A. I don't know exactly, but I think it is about eight miles, sir.

Q. Is Strawberry the nearest precinct?—A. Mount Holly is about the same distance that Biggins is.

Q. State whether you saw any person or persons armed at the polls on that day at Biggins?—A. Yes, sir; I voted at Biggins church, and was there all day, till they finished counting the votes, at ten o'clock.

Q. Of course, you were not at any other precinct on that day?—O, no, sir.

Q. Did you hold any official position at that place?—A. None at all, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. You did not assist in the count; you merely staid to watch it?—A. Yes, sir; I staid to see the votes counted. I had no official position whatever.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. State whether you saw any person or persons there armed that day; and, if so, state how many and who they were.—A. I saw a great many, sir. There was a company that drilled right in front of the polls—a company of thirty-six men. I don't know their names; that is not in my neighborhood.

Q. Were those men you saw armed white or colored?—A. Those were colored men. There was some white men there, too, but they didn't parade.

Q. State how many of these colored men were armed on that day, and the manner in which they were armed.—A. I couldn't toll you how many were armed. Nearly all were armed at the polls, but a company of thirty-six men drilled in front of the polls. Nearly all the negroes there at the polls were armed.

Q. How were they armed?—A. Armed with muskets most of them; some with double-barreled guns. Those that had no guns had sticks.

Q. What sort of sticks?—A. Just common walking-sticks, heavy walking-sticks which they always carry.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Which the colored people always carry?—A. Yes, sir; they nearly always walk with heavy sticks.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Had any of these sticks that you saw that day the appearance of having been recently cut or made?—A. I didn't notice any of them particularly, sir. It is so common to see negroes with sticks, I never noticed that at all.

Q. How near to the voting-place did this drilling take place?—A. Well, I don't think more than thirty yards. The poll was in an old church, and the public road runs in front of the church. I don't think it was over thirty yards.

Q. How long did they drill there?—A. They drilled backward and forward there several times, and one time they drilled about half an hour, I suppose.

Q. They had guns all this time?—A. O, yes; they drilled with guns all the time.

Q. Had they these guns there all day?—A. All day, sir.

Q. Carrying them around in their hands?—A. They didn't carry them up to the box in their hands. When they went up to the box they left their guns with the other negroes.

Q. State how they went up to vote.—A. They voted singly. When they went up to vote they left their guns with some other parties. They were drilling pretty nearly all day, but not in front of the polls all day; farther down; a good distance from the polls.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. How far down?—A. I suppose 150 or 200 yards, sir; right in sight, though.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. How near were they to the polls through the day with these guns?—A. At any time, do you mean?

Q. Yes.—A. Well, they were right up to the building. The polling-place was in the house.

Q. At different times?—A. Yes, sir; at different times.

Q. Did they come there in a body?—A. I didn't see them come in a body. They formed, and all, after they got there. They come separately and singly.

Q. You spoke of having seen some white men with guns; how many white men did you see there with guns?—A. Most of the white men there had guns. There wasn't many white men there; I don't think there was over twenty-five white men.

Q. Where were those guns kept?—A. A part of the time they were in the back of the house, and other times the men had them in their hands out of doors.

Q. In the hack of the house where the voting was?—A. Yes, sir; it was a little church, and the voting was in front and the guns in the back of the building.

Q. How many negroes were there with guns?—A. Well, there was 360 odd republican votes cast; they were all negro votes; and besides that there was a good many negroes that voted the democratic ticket. I suppose there was over 400 negroes there altogether.

Q. How many republican votes were cast?—A. Three hundred and sixty-odd; I am not certain, though; I was not a manager.

Q. You heard the vote announced, I suppose?—A. Yes, sir; it was about that.

Q. State whether you heard any threats made by any of these parties there that day against voters; and, if so, who made them, the character of them, and all that was said and done.—A. I didn't hear any of those negroes make threats that day.

Q. State how they voted when they came up to deposit their tickets in the box.—A. They voted singly. They were obliged to vote singly.

Q. Who obliged them?—A. The managers of the poll.

Q. Any requirement as to how they should hold their ballot when they came up to the poll?—A. None at all.

Q. Did you hear any threats made by any parties previous to the election against persons if they voted a certain ticket; if so, state who and how often and what was said.—A. I never heard any threats made directly, but I have been told of threats.

Mr. LAPHAM. I renew my objection to hearsay testimony.

Q. Did you ever hear any threats made yourself?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever see these negroes, men and women, attend any political meetings there?—A. I never attended a political meeting at Biggins. All the political meetings I attended was at Strawberry, just below Biggins.

Q. State whether you attended any political meetings there during the canvass.—A. I attended a great many there; I suppose five or six.

Q. Did you see any parties there armed? And if so, state whom you saw.

Mr. LAPHAM. Just before the election?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. LAPHAM. I object to what occurred during the canvass on the ground that it is immaterial.

A. Yes, sir; I attended political meetings there.

Q. At what times were these meetings at Strawberry held?—A. They had them at various times during the campaign. We had one, I think, ten days before the election. That meeting had a very small attendance. The negroes didn't attend.

Q. Had you seen them previous to that, and, if so, how long before?—A. The first meeting we had there was called by the democrats, and they went there armed.

Q. When was that?—A. After the campaign opened. I don't know exactly when.

Q. Did the negroes attend these meetings?—A. They attended very well, the first meeting.

Q. Were they armed?—A. Yes, sir; but not all of them.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. You used the expression, "the first meeting we had there was called by the democrats, and they went there armed." Do you mean the democrats went there armed?—A. No, sir; the negroes. The democrats may have had arms, but they didn't show them. I guess they had pistols; the negroes had guns.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did you see any pistols?—A. No, sir.

Q. How were the negroes armed?—A. With muskets, I didn't see any pistols, but I knew of pistols being there.

Q. How do you know there were pistols there, if you didn't see them?—A. I could have been told by parties if I didn't see them myself.

Q. You saw no arms exhibited there by the white men, did you?—A. There was no arms exhibited by white men at all; no, sir.

Q. Did you see any negro women at those political meetings?—A. The negro women were at all the meetings—every one of them.

Q. Were any of them armed, and if so, how?—A. They had sticks. I didn't see them with rice-hooks, but I was told they carried rice-hooks.

Q. How large were these rice-hooks?—A. Bigger than any walking stick.

Q. Is it usual for the negro women to go around with sticks except to political meetings?—A. No, sir; not at all usual. They never carry sticks. They were carried there for a purpose.

Q. State whether these negro women made any demonstrations or declarations there of a threatening character; and, if so, what it was.—A. I don't know that they did. They never intimidated any one personally, but they talked a great deal generally.

Q. Did you hear them talk there on that day?—A. Yes, sir; I did, on that day.

Q. State what was the character of the talk that you heard.—A. Abusing the men for taking the democratic side, and jeering them for becoming democrats, and carrying on generally in that way.

Q. Were they colored men whom they thus abused?—A. Yes, sir; colored men.

Q. Did they use any threat toward them? And, if so, state what it was.—A. They didn't use any threats except to jeer them and abuse them.

Q. Did you hear any negro men at the Strawberry meetings make any threats? And, if so, state what you saw and heard.—A. Well, I don't think what I heard was exactly a threat. There was a republican negro there that we allowed to speak in his turn, and he said if the democrats succeeded he would be willing to wade knee-deep in blood before he would succumb to the democratic rule. He told the negroes they could live in the woods, off of roots; and as to the democrats, the negroes could take off the trunk-doors and flood the rice-fields for them.

Q. What are trunk-doors?—A. A flood-gate, to flow the fields by the ebb and flow of the tide.

Q. Did he have any negroes there with him, armed; and, if so, did they make any demonstration?—A. All the negroes there were under him. He was their leader.

Q. Did they form there?—A. After he spoke, a democratic negro got on the stand and accused him of lying, and he got very much provoked at it, and several of the negroes threatened this democratic negro on the stand for accusing this other fellow of lying, and they drew off their body in the road in a regular line.

Q. Did they have guns?—A. Part of them had guns and the others had sticks.

Q. What proportion of white people were there to the negroes?—A. I suppose there was about five negroes to one white man at that time—not counting the black women.

Q. What part did the black women take at that time?—A. They took the part of the men, sir.

Q. What became of the black man who made this democratic speech?—A. The democrats withdrew him from the stand to pacify the negroes.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. The one who gave the lie, you mean?—A. Yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Was that in response to statements that this colored republican orator had made in his speech?—A. Well, I suppose it was.

Q. You heard it, did you not?—A. I heard him tell him he was a liar. I suppose what he said was a lie. He said that in his speech on the stand when he got up.

Q. Are the negroes in that locality in the large majority? And, if so, state in what proportion to the whites.—A. Well, sir, they are in a very large majority. The river is divided up into plantations. One planter sometimes has from fifty to sixty negroes under him. I do not know exactly what the proportion in the community is, but just on the river it is tremendous; I suppose forty to one.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Where do you live?—A. I reside on Cooper River, Saint John's, Berkeley Parish.

Q. You live, then, in the precinct where you voted?—A. Strawberry is the precinct I live in, but I voted at Biggins.

Q. Where have you voted heretofore?—A. I never voted before. I never was qualified to vote before.

Q. How came you to go to Biggins to vote?—A. Because it was expected the negroes would intimidate democratic negroes, and they wanted as many whites as possible.

Q. At whose request did you go to Biggins?—A. At the request of influential men of the parish.

Q. Name the persons.—A. The gentleman who asked me to go was Calhoun Cain.

Q. Does he live in Strawberry?—A. No, sir; he lives at what is called Pineopolis.

Q. He doesn't live in Biggins?—A. No, sir; he voted there, though.

Q. Was he with you?—A. Yes; he was at the polls. We didn't go there together, though.

Q. He met you there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was there all day, was he?—A. All day, sir.

Q. Were there any other persons there from these precincts, except you two?—A. Mr. Francis Hayward was there.

Q. Where was he from?—A. From Strawberry precinct, where I live. We live together.

Q. Any other persons other than those living in Biggins precinct?—A. I don't know exactly how far the precinct extends.

Q. Give me your best recollection about it.—A. I don't think there were more than five or six white people there.

Q. Were there any colored people there from other precincts?—A. There are a class of people living in the pines who don't rank with the white people or negroes—mulattoes. There was some 15 or 20 of them.

Q. From what precinct?—A. From Pineopolis precinct, I suppose they call it.

Q. Did they all vote at Biggins?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were any of these persons armed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many of them were armed?—A. Most of them had arms.

Q. The white people had arms, too, hadn't they?—A. Some of them had, sir.

Q. Were you armed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What arms did you bear?—A. I had a rifle and a pistol.

Q. How was it with Hayward?—A. He was armed in the same way, sir.

Q. How was it with Cain?—A. Cain didn't have any gun, sir.

Q. Did he have any arms?—A. He had a pistol; I happened to see it.

- Q. What arms did these mulattoes have?—A. Some of them had guns. I don't think they were all armed, sir.
- Q. What kind of a pistol did Cain have?—A. I didn't examine it, sir. I didn't happen to see it so I could tell. I knew he had one, that is all.
- Q. How many white people were there at this precinct on that day?—A. I don't think there were more than 25 white men there.
- Q. Don't you know that others had arms besides those whom you have named?—A. I told you some had arms. I didn't mention any in particular.
- Q. Without mentioning names, do you not know that was the fact?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. What kind of arms had they?—A. They had guns.
- Q. What kind of guns?—A. Double-barreled guns, sir.
- Q. Do you know of any rifle-clubs in that vicinity?—A. There was one before Chamberlain's proclamation, but it was broken up.
- Q. How many members was it composed of?—A. I don't know; I didn't belong to it.
- Q. Do you know of it as to the number?—A. I don't think there was many. It was about formed when they were obliged to disband.
- Q. Do you know of any persons who were prevented from voting at Biggins on the day of the election?—A. No, sir.
- Q. Who were the managers?—A. I know the name of the white man, but I don't know the names of the negroes. William White was the name of the democratic white manager.
- Q. There was a democratic and a republican supervisor, wasn't there?—A. I suppose so. There was a democrat, I know. His name was Weeks. I think his first name was George, but I am not certain.
- Q. He was there all day, was he?—A. O, yes, sir, he was there all day.
- Q. Did you see any violence committed upon any person there?—A. No, sir.
- Q. And heard no threats that day?—A. One man that was going to vote the democratic ticket, I heard some negroes talking at him, but they didn't threaten him.
- Q. My question is, did you hear any threats that day?—A. No, sir; they didn't threaten him.
- Q. You remained until the canvass was completed, did you?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Did the managers all unite in signing the returns?—A. I cannot tell; I wasn't in the office.
- Q. Did you hear of any protest against the fairness of the election?—A. I did not hear of any.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. You said, in answer to a question by Judge Lapham, that you were requested to go to this poll on the day of the election. State by whom you were requested to go there.

Mr. LAPHAM objects to the witness stating what was told him by a third party.

Mr. EDEN. I hold that, a portion of the conversation having been called out upon the cross-examination, it is competent to pursue the inquiry.

A. I was requested to go there because they thought the radicals were going to intimidate the democratic negroes.

Q. State all the facts; all that was said to you.—A. Mr. Cain asked me to go there. That is all he said to me.

Q. For what reason did he request you to go there?—A. Because he thought the democrats would be intimidated.

Q. You were asked if you saw any parading there on that day?—A. I said no.

Q. You say you saw some negroes talking to another negro who wanted to vote the democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State how many were around him at the time?—A. There were a great many. I didn't count them; I suppose there was twenty-five or thirty just in a body talking to him.

Q. Did they all seem to be talking to him about his voting that intended ticket?—A. That seemed to be the idea. They didn't offer any violence. They were talking at him, and some negro said, "Let him alone; let him vote as he chooses."

PETER NELSON sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Question. Where do you reside?—Answer. Three miles from Oakley Station, on Cooper River, this county.

Q. How long have you resided there?—A. This month will be ten years.

Q. What is your age?—A. My age is 37, sir.

Q. Where did you reside before you went there?—A. Indianapolis, in the State of Indiana.

Q. What business are you engaged in where you now live?—A. Planting, sir.

Q. What number of men have you in your employ?—A. It differs; from 50 up to 400.

Q. Colored men?—A. Yes, sir; excepting about four white men.

Q. State whether there is any organization among the negroes in that community, and, if so, what sort of organization it is—whether they are organized into companies, and whether they are armed?—A. Yes, sir; they organized a company on my place and drilled there.

Q. When did that occur?—A. The last part of August, I think, it started. They had it some two or three years ago, but it had pretty well died away.

Q. Did that organization continue up to the time of the election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were they armed? and, if so, state how they were armed.—A. Yes, sir; they were armed with their own muskets. They had no State arms, I don't believe.

Q. Where did you vote on the day of the election?—At Biggin's church, sir.

Q. Did you see any armed men there that day? if so, state who and how many.—A. Yes, sir; how many I couldn't tell; but all the colored people there were armed—every one of them.

Q. About how many colored people were there on that day?—A. I think in the neighborhood of 300.

Q. How many white people were there?—A. Of clear white people I can't tell you how many. I don't think there was over twenty. There was some thirty odd mulattoes—about that, between twenty-five and thirty.

Q. Twenty-five or thirty mulattoes aside from the white men?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were these negroes that were there at the poll on that day organized into companies?—A. Yes, sir. They came in clubs of about twenty; sometimes a little less and sometimes a little more.

Q. How were they armed?—A. They were armed with muskets, and some of them had double-barreled guns, &c.

Q. Did any of them have sticks?—A. They mostly had sticks, besides a kind of club about two feet long, I suppose. I call them clubs. Some of them had nails driven in the ends of them—in the big end of the club.

Q. Did that nail in the end of the club extend through and beyond it?—A. Yes, sir; between a sixpenny and a tenpenny nail. The nail just extended through the end of the stick.

Q. How far beyond the stick?—A. They would generally level it off even with the wood.

Q. Did any of those sticks present the appearance of having been recently out?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were those negroes around the polls with guns? and, if so, state how near.—A. Yes, sir; they never were far out of the way; about thirty yards was the farthest they were away.

Q. What was the nearest they were to the polls at any time?—A. After 12 o'clock they organized into one company, and they were drilling in the neighborhood of about 10 yards from the polls, and they drilled up to between 2 and 3.

Q. Did you ever see these negroes in that neighborhood at political meetings during the late canvass?—A. Yes, sir; I saw them at political meetings.

Q. Were they armed there?—A. Always armed when they go to political meetings.

Q. Were they there in companies?—A. They wouldn't all go together; four or five would go from a plantation to a political meeting.

Q. Did you ever hear them make any threats against any parties if they voted either ticket?—A. Yes, sir; I heard them make threats against their own color. I heard them often say that a colored man who would vote the democratic ticket ought to be shot. Many a time I would hear that.

Q. Did you ever hear them talking to other colored men in that way?—A. Yes, sir; they often talked in that way. They said to vote the democratic ticket would put them back in slavery again.

Q. Did you hear them make any other threats? and if so, state what they were.—A. They said that the colored man was a republican and ought never to be anything else; that the efforts of the democrats was always to make them slaves. They said that was what the white democrats were after. They said they would make such a law as to get tickets to go from one place to another, and they wouldn't have to ask the whites to go to stores or anywhere to trade. And then they said the white democrats were going to put up whipping-posts all over the country, and were going to whip them once or twice a week.

Q. Did you ever hear them say anything about shooting any negro who voted the democratic ticket?—A. Yes; I heard that on my place several times. I generally had a sort of provision-place where I keep the provisions for them, where I give them out to them, and they were often there in the evening discussing matters in that way; that they would shoot any colored man who voted the democratic ticket. They thought always that the white man had a right to vote the democratic ticket, but the colored men hadn't.

Q. These negroes that you saw come to the polls on that day with guns, did they have any knapsacks?—A. Yes, sir; with a strap on their left shoulder hanging down on the right, with ammunition in them; generally buckshot.

Q. What was their conduct at the polls on that day?—A. Well, they behaved pretty fairly at the polls. There was so few democrats, so few white people, of course they had their own way.

Q. Do you know of any colored men who were prevented from voting the democratic ticket on account of these armed negroes?—A. There was one, and he told them distinctly that he came there to vote the democratic ticket, and he meant to do it. And the colored man who was sent to Speaker Mackey's house, in Columbia, he was there electioneering.

Q. What effort did they make to try to prevent him from voting?—A. He came up there with the man he was working for, and the man he was working for said when he left home that he had told him he was going to vote the democratic ticket, and he expected him to stick to his word, and he said he would, and they said he had no business to come there if he was going to vote the democratic ticket.

Q. What did they who were trying to get him not to vote the democratic ticket say to him?—A. They said he had no business to come there if he didn't intend to vote the republican ticket.

Q. How many were around him at that time?—A. Well, there was about fifty or more.

Q. Were they excited or not?—A. They were a little excited, but they soon cooled down again. Of course they had their own way. He said he was not going to vote the republican ticket, but would vote the democratic ticket. Richard Boyu, he was there, electioneering for himself. He told them to let the man have his free will.

Q. Do you know of any repeating there that day by any negroes?—A. No, sir; I didn't see any one that repeated. I heard there was a few repeated.

Mr. LAPHAM. I object to all hearsay evidence going upon the record.

Q. Did you see negroes come there from any other poll on that day?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know where all these negroes lived that were there?—A. I knew a few of them that lived right around the place they call Monk's Corner.

Q. How far is that from the voting-precinct?—A. About two miles from Biggin's church, where the voting was. The settlement of the negroes is mostly around Monk's Corner.

Q. Had you been at this place, Biggin's church, at the previous election two years ago?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know what the usual vote polled at this place is?—A. I do not; no, sir.

Q. Do you know what it was at the recent election?—A. I think it was four hundred and sixty odd altogether. There was about one hundred and eight democrats, I think the managers say.

Q. And how many republican votes?—A. Three hundred and fifty-five or three hundred and fifty-seven; I don't remember distinctly.

Q. Was there a colored man there that day by the name of Tony Scott?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether there was any effort made to prevent him voting the democratic ticket or not?—A. Not that day. Previous to that there had been, while he was living on my place.

Q. What effort was there made to prevent him voting the democratic ticket?

Mr. LAPHAM. If this colored man voted the democratic ticket at the last election, I submit that what was said to him before is wholly immaterial.

Q. Do you know whether it affected him or not?—A. He would not have gone up there that day if he hadn't gone with me, or with some other white man.

Q. He was on your place with all your other negroes at this time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it known among the other negroes that he was going to vote the democratic ticket, and was this effort that was made against him because he proposed to vote the democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir; it was made because he said he was going to vote the democratic ticket.

Q. Tony Scott is living yet, is he not?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. He did vote the democratic ticket, did he not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you voted the democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you try to induce the men laboring for you to vote the democratic ticket?—A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Never talked with one of them about it?—A. I asked him a few days before the election come off—

Q. Asked who?—A. The man who was working for me.

Q. Did you not ask the whole of them?—A. The whole of them; yes, sir.

Q. You addressed them all at once, did you not?—A. Well, not particularly all at once, because they didn't happen together.

Q. You talked with your men at different times to induce them to vote the democratic ticket?—A. I didn't induce them; no, sir.

Q. Did you not talk with them requesting them to do so?—A. No, sir; I didn't request them either.

Q. Did you not advise them to vote the democratic ticket?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you talk to them about how they should vote?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you say?—A. I asked them, "Boys, which way are you going to vote?" Some of them said, "Well, of course we are working for you and we are going to vote with you." That I said was all right. I said, "I am very glad to see that you got along with me so well that you can vote with me." Two days before the election they come back and said, "They couldn't vote with me." They said, "If we do, they are going to shoot us, or do some harm to us." I said, "Well, you are a free people; you can do as you like about it; I can't make you do either one way or the other. I would like, of course, to have you vote the same way that I do; but if you can't, do as you like about it." That is all I said to them about it.

Q. Where did you vote before this year?—A. Well, sir, I never voted but once, and that was in Indianapolis.

Q. What precinct do you live in?—A. Either Strawberry or Biggin's church, I don't know which; I am the same distance from either poll; I live on this side of the Cooper River.

Q. My question is, within the bounds of which precinct do you live?—A. I understand your question; I say, I don't know.

Q. You have never taken any part in politics until this year?—A. No, sir.

Q. Were you considerably interested in politics this year?—A. No, sir; I was not much interested.

Q. Did you see any white men armed at Biggin's on the day of election?—A. No, sir; I didn't see them armed; some of them had pistols.

Q. Did you not see some have guns?—A. I saw two guns; but I didn't see any white men carry them.

Q. Do you not know that white men had them there?—A. I suppose they had.

Q. Did you have any arms?—A. I had a pistol, sir.

Q. What for?—A. Well; because all the negroes went there with their guns. They had said so before that they were going to carry their guns there, and I thought to myself I would be a fool if I didn't carry something.

Q. Did you ever carry an arm before?—A. I have occasionally carried it; I don't carry it every day.

Q. How long have you been in the habit of carrying a weapon?—A. Well, I cannot say; whenever I feel like it.

Q. How long have you had one?—A. I have had one for the last ten years; I suppose I carry it about ten or fifteen times in the year.

Q. When you go from home or about your plantation?—A. When I go from home.

Q. You generally carry your pistol when you go from home?—A. Occasionally I do; not always.

Q. Don't you generally carry your pistol when you go any distance from home?—A. No, sir; I don't always.

Q. Was your pistol loaded when you were at the polls on the day of the election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What kind of a pistol was it?—A. It was one of Colt's army pistols.

Q. How many balls did it shoot?—A. Six.

Q. Where did you carry it on that day?—A. Here, on my side.

Q. Was it concealed?—A. No, sir; everybody could see it.

Q. How was it fastened?—A. It was fastened to a belt here at my side.

Q. Did the other white people carry their pistols in that way?—A. Well, the ones I saw carried them in that way.

Q. Did the mulattoes have arms?—A. Yes, sir; they had arms.

Q. What kind of arms?—A. Generally muskets.

Q. Have you ever known of a rifle-club in your neighborhood?—A. No, sir; no rifle-club there.

Q. Never?—A. No, sir.

Q. At least you never belonged to any. Did you not know of their drilling?—A. I knew of the negroes drilling.

Q. No white men?—A. No, sir.

Q. You never heard of a rifle-club in your vicinity?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you know of any?—A. I did here in the city.

Q. How far is that from where you live?—A. Twenty-five miles.

Q. Do you know of anybody who was prevented from voting at Biggin's on the day of the election?—A. No, sir; there was nobody prevented from voting there except a little boy. He was not a voter. He attempted to vote.

Q. I mean any lawful voter?—A. No, sir.

Q. Nor do you know of anybody who was prevented from voting the ticket he wanted to vote?—A. I have heard of threats being made.

Q. You don't know of any yourself?—A. I did not see any that day at the polls.

Q. Did you stay there till the votes were canvassed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you give the names of the managers?—A. I can give the names of two of the managers. William White was the democratic manager and Thomas Wallace was the republican manager. The other was a republican; I don't know his name. He was a colored man.

Q. Who was the supervisor?—A. The supervisor was a man by the name of Weeks.

Q. Was he a democrat?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the managers unite in signing the election-returns?—A. I didn't go in the room when they made their return. I was outside.

Q. Did you hear any complaint or objection to the fairness of the election; any protest about it?—A. No, sir; nothing.

Q. No complaint of any kind?—A. No, sir; I didn't hear of any there.

Q. Who subpoenaed you to come here as a witness?—A. My friend over here on Broad street, Colonel Sammington.

Q. He asked you to come here to-day?—A. He asked me to come to town to-day.

Q. You were not subpoenaed to come, then?—A. No, sir.

Q. Is Colonel Sammington a democrat?—A. Yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. You stated in your cross-examination that the colored men who were working on your plantation told you before the election that they would vote the democratic ticket. About how many said so?—A. I have, to my remembrance, one day, twenty-four.

Q. What did they state to you was the reason they could not vote it just before the election?—A. They stated as the reason that the other people on the plantation had made such threats to them that they couldn't vote the democratic ticket.

Q. How long was that before the election?—A. That was about a week before the election.

Q. You were asked if you knew of any voter who was prevented from voting the democratic ticket on the day of the election. Was not Moses Brown prevented from voting?—A. I asked him on Sunday—the election was on Tuesday—

Mr. LAPHAM. I object to a conversation with a particular elector three days before the election.

Q. Where is Moses Brown now; do you know?—A. He is in town.

The committee adjourned to meet to-morrow (Thursday, December 21, 1876) at 10 o'clock a. m.

CHARLESTON, S. C., December 21, 1876.

The committee met pursuant to adjournment.

THOMAS E. LEADBETTER sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Question. What is your age?—Answer. I am an old man, sir. I am seventy-seven years of age.

Q. Where do you reside?—A. I reside in Charleston County, sir; by railroad, about twelve miles from the city, but by the private way it is perhaps thirteen or fourteen miles.

Q. How long have you resided in this county?—A. I have resided in this county for the last twenty-five years or upwards.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. Well, a poor minister, and a sort of a farmer.

Q. How long have you been preaching?—A. My dear sir, perhaps before you were born. I do not know that I can definitely tell; since the year 1824.

Q. Have you ever preached to the colored people at any time in your community?—A. O, yes; I have been preaching to them for the last twenty-five years.

Q. What precinct did you attend at the late election?—A. Well, it was called Whalay's Church, sir, in St. James Goose Creek.

Q. Were you at any other precinct on that day?—A. No, sir.

Q. What time in the day did you go to that precinct?—A. I suppose, sir, it was about nine or ten o'clock, somewhere thereabout.

Q. How long did you remain?—A. I remained, sir, until four o'clock that day.

Q. About how many blacks were at that precinct that day?—A. Well, I should suppose there must have been in the neighborhood of four or five hundred. There was a very large assemblage of them.

Q. How many whites?—A. Well, sir, so as to be particular about it, I can count them.

Q. It is not necessary to count them.—A. I think there was about eight, or somewhere thereabout. I can recall all that were there. There were about eight there that day.

Q. Just state what you saw at that precinct that day in reference to the conduct of the election, whether there were any men there in arms; and, if so, who they were, and how many there were.—A. I can simply rehearse just what happened when I went to the ground; that is all. I went to the ground; and as soon as I got there I was met by a large number, I suppose ten or twelve, of the colored people. I was known pretty well among them, and they came up to me and manifested a good deal of pleasure in seeing me, and then begged if I would not go with them. "Well," I said, "yes, I will go with you, and vote as I think is right." And they handed me their ticket. I handed them another ticket, and I said, "Now, suppose you go and vote with me." They said, "Well, Mr. Loadbotter, we have listened to you and followed you a good while, but now you have got to go with us." "Well," I said, "I could not do that." I could not vote with them, and then stated to them, "The man for whom I wish to vote belonged to the State, the same as we do. We are all living here together, and I think we ought to support him." I simply said that the man for whom I wished them to vote belonged to us, but they said no, they would not vote for him; that he was a democrat. I told them that as far as the democrats or republicans were concerned, that made no difference; that was not the object. I then reasoned with them that that was not the object we were after; that we would have, if possible, a pure government, and that the man for whom I wished them to vote was their friend as well as mine and the State's. Well, they said that the republicans had freed them. We had a pretty smart talk. Says I, "They no doubt did help about it, but the democrats in this State had a convention, and in that convention they freed the whole of them. And," said I, "so far as slavery is concerned, it is now dead."

Finding that they were exceedingly anxious that I should vote with them, they surrounded me rather, but nothing rude, only by an imploring and putting their hands on me and standing between me and the box. Well, I talked as well as I could, and finally found that their feelings were becoming somewhat exalted. I rather tried to get away, but just at that time a black man was pushing his way to the box with a ticket. I saw him as he was going, and one of them that was speaking to me arrested him immediately, and said, "What ticket are you going to put in there?" The man made no reply, and I replied to the one that accosted the other one, "He is a free man; let him vote as he wishes." He immediately said, "Yes, you put that ticket in his hand, and he shall not vote it." And I knew nothing at all of the ticket he was going to vote, and immediately left the place, sir. I found that there was such a state of feeling that my talk would not overcome it, and I walked right off from the poll. Well, there was a colored man that I had owned and raised from boyhood, that was living with me, and another one, and they had both voluntarily come forward and said they intended to vote without being solicited on my part at all. They knew my views, and they said that they intended to vote that ticket for Hampton; told me that emphatically. Well, sir, on that day while I was there one of them, a young fellow, I saw a large bullying man that I know, a colored man, pursue him with a stick in his hand, running around the church pursuing this other one. They ran around the church out of my view.

Q. This man that was pursuing this other man around the church, did he have anything in his hand?—A. He had a stick, I say.

Q. What sort of a stick?—A. One of those sticks that you sling around, a small sort of a cudgel, a hickory stick, or something of that kind. It was held in his hand and fastened around his wrist.

Q. How was it fastened around his wrist?—A. You know they have a stick with a string which they fasten around their wrist by which they hold the stick. I do not know that I can speak particularly; it was one of those kind of sticks, bludgeon, or whichever you may please to call it. What transpired behind the church I know not, sir. He pursued him until he ran around the church, and my attention was called to it, for I knew the whole object of it. And after they had got around the church I did not think it was prudent for me to go around and see or interfere in any respect, for it would be dangerous, and therefore I knew nothing of what transpired there. All I did know about it is, that the boy put in a different ticket from what he told me he intended to.

Q. What ticket did he put in?—A. A ticket for Mr. Chamberlain. I did not influence him particularly. He said voluntarily he would put in a ticket for Mr. Hampton.

Q. What was that boy's name?—A. Ephraim Chisholm, and the other was Joseph Jenkins.

Q. What became of Joseph Jenkins?—A. He voted contrary to what he intended. He said he was afraid of his life. He had a step-father who was very bitter against Hampton, and had a great deal to do in influencing that boy, Joseph Jenkins, and he said so. Together with other voters at the polls he could not have voted as he wanted. What I was going to observe about this boy, Ephraim, after the election was over in speaking to my wife—

(Mr. Lapham objects to the witness relating a conversation after the election as incompetent.)

Q. Did you see any arms there that day?—A. I did, sir.

Q. Who had them?—A. A couple of black men.

Q. Where were those arms?—A. About, I suppose, sixty or seventy yards from where the poll was held.

Q. What did they have?—A. They were guns. I could not tell you whether they were muskets, rifles, or shot-guns.

Q. What were they doing with them?—A. They had them there in their hands, sitting down, about fifty yards from the poles.

Q. Did you see any other arms?—A. I saw no other arms. Of course I heard, but I did not see. I did not know there was one on the ground until I saw those two.

Q. Did you see any sticks or clubs there?—A. O, yes; nearly every other man had a club of the kind I told you, clubs with most of them tied around their wrists to hold them in their hands, with a ticket, Mr. Chamberlain's, a red ticket, very plainly fixed on the lappels of their coats.

Q. Did you see parties voting there?—A. O, they voted. I saw some vote there that I fully believe, sir, had voted at another precinct.

(Mr. Lapham objects to the witness stating his belief.)

Q. State why you believed that.—A. There is a colored man I am acquainted with, and have been for the last twenty years, Prince Staples. He belongs down here within five or six miles of Charleston. There is a precinct there, and I was perfectly astonished to see him up there fifteen or sixteen miles from town at this precinct.

Q. What time did you see him at this precinct?—A. I suppose it was about one or two o'clock, and I asked him, says I, "Prince, are you up here?" He says, "Yes, sir." I said, "I thought you would have voted down below." He said, "He thought he would come up here, too," but he didn't tell me he had voted; and he was not the only one.

Q. State how many you saw.—A. I saw a boy that I well knew by the name of George Barnwell that ought to have voted at Saint Andrew's Parish, that lived there—lived over there on the other side of Ashley River, and lives there now.

Q. How far off was that?—A. I suppose, taking the river into consideration, it would be seven or eight miles—no, hardly that. I don't suppose it would be more than six or seven miles.

Q. Was there another precinct near him?—A. Yes, sir; there was another precinct near him.

Q. How far?—A. There was a precinct there they called the Ten-Mile Hill precinct, sir, where I would have expected he would have voted, sir; would be about five or six miles from where I saw him.

Q. Did you see anything else that led you to believe that the parties voting there had voted elsewhere?—A. No, sir; I do not know that I saw anything.

Q. Did you see any parties repeating there?—A. The gentlemen that were there, one of the white men, Mr. Smith, I heard him come in and ask the manager, Mr. Hard. I heard him do that; saw him calling him by name, and the man had just voted. Said he, "Did you not vote before here?" The clerk turned to the list, and, in turning over, called his name where he had voted. That, I heard. I happened to be right present, inside of the church, at the time I heard that.

Q. Did you vote there?—A. I did.

Q. State the circumstances under which you voted.—A. Well, as I went on to remark, when I saw the crowds surrounding the polls and surrounding me, and the objection that they made to this colored man putting in his vote, I thought it prudent on my part not to push through to go to the box, and I waited until, perhaps—I don't know but what it was two or three hours, and when I saw a favorable opportunity by which I could go without being rather pressed—there was some around it—I went; but I saw very plainly that there was a good deal of objection to it, and as I went to the box, I pulled off my hat and held the ticket in my left hand, and the man who was to administer the oath, a black man, one of the managers, I do not know his name, commenced administering the oath, and this man, who was one of the managers—the black man—said, "Put that ticket in your right hand, sir." Well, I took it from my left hand and put it in my right hand. Well, the oath was administered to me, and he said, "Raise up your right hand, sir." The man that was administering the oath, the colored man, said he, "Let Mr. Loadbetter alone; don't talk to him that way." He said, "I will talk to him as any other man. He has got as good a right to do it as any." And Mr. Hard, the white manager, said, "You had better raise up your right hand." I felt, sir, just at that time, a little put out. I had complied with everything that I thought was correct; but I raised up my right hand.

Q. Did you hold your ballot in your right hand?—A. Yes, sir; I held the vote in my right hand. I was ordered to put the ticket in my right hand, and I held it there, and then held up my right hand with the ticket in it.

Q. How many of those men were immediately around the poll at that time?—A. Well,

I suppose there were some ten or fifteen, but, before that, at first there were thirty or forty in a solid ring about the polls. There was no getting to the polls without pushing your way through, showing your ticket, or giving them to understand how you were going to vote.

Q. Was there anything by which the different tickets representing the two political parties could be distinguished?—A. O, very plain, sir.

Q. What was it?—A. Mr. Chamberlain's had, if I mistake not, an eagle printed red, and very conspicuous. Mr. Hampton's ticket was a plain one, just printed, I believe. I did hear, sir, there was a third ticket.

Q. Tell all that you saw.—A. That was all that I saw.

Q. The republican ticket could be distinguished by its being printed red?—A. Very plainly, and worn on the lappel of the surrounding persons—the colored people.

Q. Was that generally done?—A. Pretty generally; particularly with those that were exceedingly conspicuous in governing the polis.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Who subpoenaed you to come here as a witness?—A. I was told that it was my duty to come here, sir.

Q. By whom?—A. I was told—well, there were two or three. Mr. Hard was one who told me.

Q. When?—A. I believe it was day before yesterday or yesterday, I really forget which. It was day before yesterday that I heard from two or three that it was my duty to come here.

Q. Give me the names of the persons who told you to come here. I do not ask what was said.—A. The names of the persons—Mr. Hard, and—well, really I have heard it from so many I can hardly tell. O—well, I cannot recall to mind. I have heard it from half a dozen people. I do not know as I can recall them to mind particularly.

Q. You were a slaveholder when slavery existed, were you not?—A. I was, sir.

Q. And a clergyman also?—A. And a clergyman.

Q. You believed in the right of the institution of slavery, did you not?—A. In principle I did not believe in it, sir.

Q. How long did you hold slaves?—A. I was born with them.

Q. How many years did you own slaves?—A. My father and mother owned slaves, and they grew up with me, and I have owned them.

Q. How long did you own them, is my question?—A. From the time that I was twenty-one years of age, my dear sir.

Q. Until slavery was abolished?—A. Until slavery was abolished. My dear sir, I can tell some things about them. I never separated a man and his wife; and I have married hundreds of them, and baptized their children, and raised them as far as that is concerned, and feel now a tender regard for them.

Q. Did you ever preach to the colored man against the wrong and iniquity of slavery while it existed?—A. I will say, sir, that on one occasion a planter himself—I did not preach against slavery—but a planter once called me to account, that I had gone too far on the subject.

Q. To what denomination do you belong?—A. I belong to the Southern Methodist Episcopal Church, sir.

Q. Did you see a certificate signed by the clergymen of this county before the election to the effect that there was no military clubs or rifle-clubs, or organizations for violence in this county?—A. I do not remember whether I saw it. I heard of it.

Q. Were you one of the signers?—A. No, sir; I was not.

Q. Were you not one of the clergymen who signed—whose names were printed?—A. No, sir. I heard there was—

Q. Which of the colored men you have named were once owned by you as your slaves?—A. That boy Ephraim Chisholm I raised from a boy.

Q. Any others?—A. That boy Joseph Jenkins that I spoke of, sir, his wife was raised by—

Q. I am speaking of him, not of his wife?—A. Well, he belonged to the woman I raised, and lived with me.

Q. I want to know which of the men you have named were once owned by you. Is Chisholm the only one who was a slave of yours at any time?—A. At this election, do you mean?

Q. Yes.—A. O, no.

Q. How many persons that voted at this election had been slaves of yours?—A. I suppose, sir, three or four.

Q. Can you give their names?—A. Yes. John Edwards was one of mine, but he did not come near me, and I cannot say how he voted. I am not prepared to answer that question.

Q. Do you know whether either of these persons you speak of—Prince Staples—do you know whether he voted at this precinct—Whaley's?—A. O, yes, sir; I know that.

Q. Do you know whether he voted anywhere else?—A. I do not know.

Q. Did you see him vote?—A. O, yes; I saw him vote; and he told me he voted there.

Q. George Barnwell, did he vote there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether he voted anywhere else?—A. I do not, sir.

Q. Do you know of any person who voted at this precinct whom you knew had voted anywhere else?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know of any one who was prevented from voting at this precinct during that day?—A. I know positively there were some who didn't vote at all—who were afraid to vote.

Q. Give their names, if you please.—A. I do not remember their names particularly.

Q. Grant or Gant, which was it?—A. Gant, I believe. Really, I cannot say.

Q. Did he vote?—A. He did not vote; he was afraid to vote, and would not vote at all.

Q. You did not stay until the poll closed, did you?—A. No, sir. I staid until it was pretty late; it was three or four or five o'clock.

Q. How do you know but he voted when you went away?—A. He was gone.

Q. How do you know but that he may not have come back and voted?—A. That I cannot tell. He lived rather too far, though, I think, to come back.

Q. You did not follow him home, did you?—A. No; O, no.

Q. You tried to induce colored men to vote the democratic ticket, did you not?—A. Very little.

Q. But you tried to induce them some?—A. They all know how I was going to vote.

Q. I do not doubt that; but you tried to induce them to vote the democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Tried to use your influence as their pastor to induce them to vote the democratic ticket?—A. Let me explain that.

Q. I prefer you to answer the question.—A. I was first accosted by them, and surrounded by them, and begged to vote their ticket.

Q. You have given all that. I want to know whether you made efforts by persuasion to induce colored men to vote the democratic ticket?—A. Immediately after I said, "Vote with me," with the whole of them around me, I felt it to be a conscientious principle not to be interfering with persons when their own minds were made up.

Q. You did not stay until the vote was canvassed?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know how many democratic votes were given at this poll?—A. No; I don't know, sir.

Q. You spoke of your candidate as belonging to the State?—A. I did, sir.

Q. What did you mean by that?—A. That he was one of us, and that he ought to govern us.

Q. Because he was a South Carolinian, because he was a native?—A. Well, I thought he was a pious, good man, and I thought he was a South Carolinian.

Q. And when you spoke of him as belonging to the State, you had reference to the fact that he was a South Carolinian?—A. Yes, sir; of course he belongs to the State.

Q. You did not know that he had recently gone through bankruptcy?—A. Hampton had?

Q. Yes.—A. I do not know him; not personally. I saw him when I was coming from the North, not long ago, at Columbia, but I have no acquaintance with him.

Q. You say you saw him once; was that before the election or since?—A. Before the election.

By the CHAIRMAN, (Mr. Philips:)

Q. Judge Lapham has asked you about your relation to and views touching the institution of slavery. Please state what your relation to the negroes in your community was before the war, and what you did for them.—A. Well, as I remarked to you, I have been laboring with them for the last twenty years; since the war I have not. All through my neighborhood I had regular appointments, and immediately after the war the Methodist church at the North sent on another Methodist minister, Mr. Lewis, at this place, Charleston, to take charge of the Methodist church here, in order that they should not go into a state of regular disorder, as they were. I moved to Charleston with my family, and took protection under the Federal Government. I was living in the country then, and I came to Charleston for protection under the Federal arms, and I was here with Mr. Lewis. We preached together in town. Immediately after things began to quiet down I went back and proposed to Mr. Lewis that I would try to gather the colored people in my neighborhood at the church where we used to worship and establish a Sabbath school, as we had had, and preach to them as we had always done; and he fully agreed.

Q. Did you organize and maintain a Sabbath school among those colored people before the war?—A. O, yes. I had a neighbor, Mr. Dana, who was also a Methodist local preacher. He lived in my neighborhood. He and myself mutually agreed that we would keep up the appointments, but to strengthen our hold upon the colored people. Mr. Lewis coming from the conference at the North, sent on as a missionary here,

I thought it would have the effect or tendency to strengthen their confidence in us, for they had become very much alienated against the South; and he went up to preach to them for me, and we had a pretty good congregation. He then urged on them to listen to Mr. Dana and myself, and try to keep up the cause. Well, Mr. Dana and myself had our appointment there, and we had Sabbath school there, and preached to them. But after awhile, somehow or other, their feelings became alienated. I think they were entirely influenced by unprincipled persons; began to object to our coming together, and finally built their own church. The church for the whites was for the whites only. We had seats for the colored people as well as the whites. They built their church, and they came to me and said, "Look here, Mr. Leadbetter, we want you to let us have those benches out of the church." "Well," said I, "I am only one of the trustees, and so far as I am concerned you are welcome to the benches; but I cannot take them, because I am only one of the trustees." With that they removed them and put them in that same Whaley's church, where they now are. Well, then, they had no more intercourse with me as their minister, nor with Mr. Dana; set up for themselves. They were members of the Methodist church, many of them. At the same time came a colored man, whom I knew, and preached here to the Methodists. During that time he came up and tried to organize churches as the African Methodist church. It continued, but I tell you there was a change came over them again.

Q. At the time of the election you were not acting as minister for the colored people?—A. No; not then; but I have been since. Since the election they asked me to come and be with them. Gentlemen, I have no object in view but what is pure and just. I rise above all party feeling. I have my views as to politics.

Q. You have resumed, then, your ministry among the colored people since the election?—A. They have invited me to come to their church and preach for them since.

Q. And you have gone?—A. I have.

Q. You started to make an explanation of what you meant by asking these people to vote for General Hampton as one of you. Just state what you meant by that.—A. Because, sir, I believe General Hampton to be a good man. I believed he did not seek the office of governor himself. I believed that the people of the State felt that it was absolutely necessary that there should be a change in the government of the State. I have been a strong advocate for Mr. Chamberlain during his administration, until some time before the election. I really was an advocate for him, and Mr. Dana advocated his cause to a great many persons; that he was trying to do right; that the influence of party was not carrying him away; that if he possessed moral courage to stand, that it was best for no opposition to be made against him as governor. That was my individual opinion, sir. When they were talking about a straight-out ticket here, I honestly opposed it, and incurred at the time the displeasure of my friends; but still, I said, "You may upset the whole thing." Governor Chamberlain had been trying to do good, and I knew it. I saw his course in the legislative body, and everything of the kind, and I thought he meant to do good. But they persisted, and had a straight-out ticket. Well, I said nothing more. General Hampton—I saw the views under which he received his nomination. He did not wish it. His character has been known in the State from his boyhood, and I always heard of him as a correct, upright man. Even when he went to school they praised him there. From his general character we thought he was a proper man to govern, and he belonged to South Carolina. He understood the negroes and the white people, and I believed him to be a suitable governor of the State; and it was under those feelings that I would induce them, if possible. If I could have influenced them, I certainly would have influenced them to vote for Mr. Hampton.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. When did you cease to support Mr. Chamberlain and come out for Mr. Hampton?—A. I cannot say. I never came out very strong for General Hampton.

Q. When did you change your views?—A. I do not know as I can tell you, for it was a gradual thing coming on. I began to loosen my hold from some of the representations made about Mr. Chamberlain.

Q. When did you do it?—A. My dear sir, I could not tell you exactly.

Q. Was it a month before the election?—A. Well, I expect it was; probably it might have been more than a month. There were several little circumstances connected with it. I cannot give you a definite answer to that. I had reasons for it. I had reasons for sustaining him, too.

Q. Up to that time you had advised all these colored people to sustain Chamberlain, had you not?—A. I do not understand the question exactly.

Q. Up to that time you had advised all these colored people to support Chamberlain, had you not?—A. I had nothing to do with the election. It was not until General Hampton was a candidate.

Q. Did you ever vote before this year?—A. O, yes.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. State why you gave up Chamberlain; what was it that induced you to change?—

A. Well, there were two or three circumstances. I will tell you one of the strongest reasons. When he went into the convention—up to that time I was favorable to Mr. Chamberlain; but when he went into the convention, when they went to balloting for a candidate for governor, when he walked arm-in-arm with Elliott, and suffered himself to be nominated by men whom I had known him to speak so much against, who went there with him, and whose characters were bad, and he had said so; when he walked into that convention arm-in-arm with Elliott, who said he had things that he could put Mr. Chamberlain in the penitentiary for, and all that kind of thing; and Mr. Chamberlain never vindicated himself, and went in there, and suffered himself to be nominated, and advocated the nomination of Mr. Elliott; my dear sir, that loosened me.

C. H. CHORS sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Question. Where do you reside?—Answer. Palmetto plantation; about ten miles from Charleston, and within about five or six miles of Whaley's Church precinct, where this election was held.

Q. How long have you resided there?—A. Between ten and eleven years.

Q. Where did you reside before that?—A. In the city of Charleston; was born and raised here.

Q. What is your age?—A. Forty-four, sir. I am now pretty nearly forty-five.

Q. Where did you vote on the day of the recent election?—A. Whaley's Church.

Q. Did you hold any official position there on the day of the election? If so, state what it was.—A. Yes, sir; democratic United States supervisor.

Q. Who was the other United States supervisor?—A. A colored man by the name of Singleton. I have my appointment here in my hand now.

Q. Who makes the selection of United States supervisors?—A. The names were handed in by their democratic executive committee, and appointed by the judge of the district court. I was appointed by Judge Bryan.

Q. Who were the managers at that precinct?—A. I have forgotten the names of the colored men now; but Mr. Hard, a white man, was one of them.

Q. The other two were colored men?—A. Yes, sir. I do not recollect their names or know them. They came from the city here.

Q. State whether you saw any evidences of intimidation of voters at that precinct that day. State all you saw and heard.—A. Well, sir, the poll was open when we got there. I suppose about fifteen or twenty had voted; not more than that. It was just about daylight when I got there. There was at least four hundred colored people there that day, swarming around the whole place, and there was no chance to vote at all.

Q. How many white men were there?—A. Four or five; not more than that. There was no place where anybody could come up to the polls and vote except the way they wanted them, and you could hear all sorts of threats about democratic votes. That was early in the morning; and a man by the name of Ford, who was running for the legislature, and who was captain of the militia company there, was going among these negroes all the time and telling them to vote for liberty. He says, "It's the last chance you have got." The request was made once or twice for challenges; but no challenger could have stood outside.

Q. Who made the request for challenges?—A. Devoe did, and Mr. Smith; but there was such a tremendous crowd out there that no challenger could have stood outside; and they couldn't allow a challenger inside, the way the polling was going on. Up to ten o'clock, they could have repeated as they pleased, and nobody could have identified them. You couldn't tell the darkies in a crowd one from another. I know two or three men that repeated. Among others, there was at least ten—I should say between ten and twenty—boys that voted up there who were under age. Several of them I knew from being on my place. Two of them I challenged. I said, "These two you shall not take, for I know them to be under age." And during that time they arrested Devoe on some charge of bribery, which they had no right to do. Devoe was there for the purpose of spotting colored people who ought not to vote at that precinct, and he came up there to see if they voted or not—to keep them from voting at two places; and the United States supervisor arrested him, and he had him started on his way to town under a guard of two men with muskets. I went out and said to him he had no right to make this arrest.

Q. Did you see these two boys whom you say were under age vote?—A. I did not see these two boys vote; but Smith told me that these two boys I challenged voted. I tried to stop some of them, and these two I said they should not take.

Q. What was the name of the man who afterward saw them vote?—A. T. H. Smith. He can give you the names, for he knows the people up in that neighborhood. I forgot to state that there were no people with guns right around the point there. But early in the morning they had their guns all stacked within a hundred yards of the church.

There was two companies. Adam Ford was captain of one of them; he was running for the legislature. They did not come around the polls there with their muskets until the whole thing was pretty nearly over.

Q. The guns of these companies, where were they kept?—A. They were stacked in the State road, about a hundred yards from the polling-precinct. There were two or three men about there where the guns were all the time.

Q. Were these guns visible to the voters?—A. O, yes, sir; everybody could see them; and we all knew that, with the few white people there, we could give no protection.

(Mr. Lapham objects to the witness expressing his opinion.)

Q. State whether you saw any interference on the part of these colored men with other colored men who went up to vote.—A. I saw them take votes out of their hands and give them other votes instead. After this big crowd of voting was over, after these three or four hundred people had voted, then when two or three men would come up to the box to vote, four or five or six of these colored men would rush-up toward them with clubs in their hands and ask them if they had the right ticket, and take the ticket out of their hands and read it over. If it wasn't the right ticket they would give him another one, the one they wanted him to vote. It was as much as his life was worth to do it. I have been living in that country a long time, and there were several men that promised to vote my way, but when they got there they came to me soon after and said, we cannot do it.

Mr. Lapham renews his objection to the witness stating a conversation with a third party.

Q. Was this at the precinct that they came to you and said this?—A. Yes, sir; they came to me and said, "Mr. Chors, I can't vote with you; my life is something to me and my family, and I can't afford to be beaten up here for voting." I told them I could not expect them to do it, that I saw how the thing stood, and to do as they chose.

Q. These parties that went up to vote, how did they hold their ballots?—A. In the big crowd that was there they would swear them in three or four at a time, and when a man would attempt to hold his ticket down—the republican tickets were all printed so they could be seen plainly, which I think was against the law of the State; they were printed red, so anybody could see them very plainly—these managers would not allow them to vote unless they held their ticket up in their right hand.

Q. The hand that was held up to be sworn by?—A. Yes, sir; so the whole crowd could see how the man voted. And while they were doing this there were negroes outside telling all sorts of things, how they used to be whipped in slavery times, and how they used to beat them, and put ball and chain on them, to create an impression against the democratic ticket.

Q. Was there a negro there by the name of Abram Mitchell?—A. Yes, sir; he is here now.

Q. Did he vote there that day?—A. Yes, sir; he voted there that day.

Q. Did he have any trouble in putting his ballot in the box?—A. He was threatened with his life before he voted, and after he did vote he was threatened upon the ground.

Q. What was the character of this threat?—A. Like they all make, you know. If a man votes the democratic ticket, they threaten his life, and say he shall not go home.

Q. Did this colored man, Abram Mitchell, vote the democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir; I didn't see him vote, but I know he voted there. I didn't see him beat myself, but I know he was beat. I saw the big crowd running toward where he was, where two or three had "gouged" him; and this same man Ford ran out to try to stop it.

Q. Go on and state all you saw and heard.—A. The man is here himself, and he can testify to that. He was sort of walking off the ground when the crowd rushed after him.

Q. How far did they pursue him?—A. I suppose about two hundred yards.

Q. Did you see them overtake him?—A. Yes; two or three of them did. They had nothing but clubs. Everybody knew they had weapons there, though.

Q. Were there many of those clubs there?—A. Nearly every one of them had these clubs.

Q. What sort of clubs were they?—A. Some of one sort and some of another; some gum, and some hickory, and some oak; but all bad enough to break a man's skull if hit hard enough.

Q. How large were these clubs?—A. About an inch to an inch and a half in diameter.

Q. How long did those guns that were stacked near the polls remain there?—A. I think they moved those guns about half past nine or ten o'clock. I didn't notice the time particularly. When they saw that there wasn't going to be any especial occasion to use the guns, I think they got a little scared about what might be done about it; and I suppose any man going along there about twelve o'clock could not have seen the guns.

Q. Did you see them any more after that on that day?—A. Yes, sir; about half an hour before the polls were closed they commenced calling the different clubs to fall in.

They fell in in two thicknesses, with their guns in their hands, and marched around the church. At that time there was only two white men there, myself and Mr. Hard, the manager. They marched around the church two or three times with these guns; and then this same man Ford got them together, and they sung "Hold the fort for Hayes and Wheeler;" then they fired off their guns, about a hundred of them, and then you could hear a fellow giving orders to reload with sixteen buckshot each.

Q. Did you attend any political meetings in that neighborhood before the election?—

A. No, sir; I talked politics a great deal among the black people I knew. I did attend one political meeting. There was one held on Mr. Lamb's place. We had 150 or 200 colored people at it, and just made speeches to them.

Q. Did you see any arms there?—A. No, sir; that was a meeting called by the democrats.

By Mr. EDEN :

Q. Have you stated everything that occurred there at the election that day?—A. O, you could hear these negroes saying outside that no man should vote the democratic ticket; and they were talking about how they used to be whipped in slavery times, and all that sort of stuff. It was a notorious fact that it would have been dangerous for any colored man to have voted the democratic ticket. They didn't care anything about how the white people voted.

Q. But a negro, they said, had no right to be a democrat?—A. O, a negro couldn't vote the democratic ticket.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. In what voting-precinct do you live?—A. Whaley's Church is my precinct; but you know you can vote anywhere in the county.

Q. You live in that precinct?—A. Yes, sir; but I could have gone and voted at any other.

Q. How long have you lived there?—A. About ten or eleven years. You know I cannot stay there all through the summer, because it gets sickly and unhealthy through July, and I come down here.

Q. What is your business?—A. Farming and digging phosphate rock.

Q. Where did you reside up to the time of the war?—A. In Charleston; here, sir. I was in the dry-goods business.

Q. Were you a slave-owner?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many did you ever own?—A. Before the war I had about sixty, sir; I didn't have that many at the commencement of the war. When they were made free I had about sixty or sixty-five.

Q. Did any of the persons who were formerly your slaves vote at this precinct on that day?—A. Well, I don't think there was, sir. I can't recollect now. The most of them that lived with me voted at Four-mile House, close by. Yes, there was two or three that voted at Whaley's. One man that used to belong to me I know voted there.

Q. Which way did he vote?—A. He voted the republican ticket, I think. He promised me he would vote the democratic ticket. I don't know which way he did vote.

Mr. Lapham objects to so much of the last answer as is not responsive to the question.

Q. Do you know of any elector who came there who did not vote in fact?—A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Did you stay to see the votes canvassed?—A. Yes, sir; that was my duty. I was one of the supervisors.

Q. Did you assist in the canvass?—A. No, sir; except to see that everything was carried on correctly.

Q. Did all the managers sign the returns?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you make any report?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you got a copy of it here?—A. No, sir; I made a return to Mr. Poigneer, here in Charleston. He is the general supervisor of the State.

Q. Was there any protest by either of the managers against the fairness of the canvass?—A. At that time?

Q. Yes.—A. No, sir.

Q. Your return is in writing, is it not?—Yes, sir; part printed and part written. We both signed the same thing.

Q. You and the republican supervisor?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you no copy of it?—A. No, sir; he had one copy and I had one. I gave mine to Mr. Poigneer.

Q. You signed two returns?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You both concurred in signing these returns?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was the republican supervisor?—A. I do not know his first name. Singleton his name was.

Q. A colored man, was he?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you and he make any complaint of the canvass?—A. Nothing, except that we stated they had this Devoe arrested.

Q. That was the only fact you reported?—A. Do you mean to Mr. Poignier?

Q. Yes; in your written report.—A. There was no occasion to do it. I told Mr. Poignier all these facts I am speaking here about. It was all a printed form, with the number of votes cast written in.

Q. Did you and Singleton, in your report, make any complaint of the fairness at this election?—A. I did not make any written report.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. With regard to this report, you say it was given to you in printed form?—A. Yes, sir; printed form, with the number of votes cast for such an elector and the congressional vote written in. There was no place for any remarks.

Q. When you delivered it to Mr. Poignier you complained to him of all these matters you have testified about?—A. Yes, sir; he laughed about it. I told him I would make a written report if he wanted it, and he said it was not worth while, or something to that effect.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Was this man who was arrested for bribery a colored or a white man?—A. A white man. He was charged with an attempt to bribe.

Q. How many democratic votes were cast at this poll?—A. As well as I can recollect 17 or 18 out of 600.

Q. How many democratic votes were polled in 1874?—A. I wasn't there in that place in 1874. They changed the precincts. I was in another precinct.

Q. Where did you vote in 1874?—A. I voted at Ten-mile Hill, as they called it. They changed the precinct to Whaley's Church.

Q. Who was the colored clergyman at Whaley's church?—A. A. P. Ford, I think. I don't know for certain. I know he preaches there sometimes.

Q. Any other colored clergyman that you know of?—A. I do not, sir. I know Ford preaches there sometimes.

Q. Did you ever hear him preach?—A. No, sir; I never heard him preach.

Q. Then how do you know he preaches there?—A. Just from the common report of these darkies.

Q. You are a democrat, are you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And an active politician?—A. No, sir; except talking to these darkies about it. I never ran for any office, or had anything to do with politics in that way.

Q. Your name for supervisor was selected by whom?—A. I think by the executive committee of the democratic party.

Q. Where?—A. Here in Charleston, for the county. They couldn't find many white people up in that country.

Mr. LAPHAM objects to the latter part of the last answer as not being responsive to the question.

Q. How many colored men have you employed in the business you are engaged in?—A. I have not many now; but I have had a good many.

Q. How many have you had at any one time?—A. I suppose from seventy-five to a hundred. I have not had many the last year.

Q. Do you remember the two marshals that were up there?—A. They said there were two up there. There were men there with badges on them.

Q. Can you give their names?—A. No, sir; I cannot.

Q. There was a marshal there, but you cannot state his name?—A. I think there were United States men there who said they were marshals.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Who was this party that arrested this man on the charge of attempted bribery?—A. Singleton, the republican supervisor. He attempted to arrest this man on a charge of bribery, and had him under arrest, carrying him down to Charleston, when I went out among the gang of darkies and told them they had no right to arrest him.

Q. Did this supervisor have any warrant for his arrest?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was he afterwards prosecuted on that charge of attempted bribery?—A. No, sir. I showed to this supervisor that he had no right to make the arrest. There never was any prosecution about it.

Q. Was there any prosecution of this supervisor for interfering with this man?—A. No, sir. We were talking about doing it, of prosecuting him for assault and battery, but we never did it.

Q. After the election the supervisor never pursued this man?—A. O, no. In one of these rows they had they were going to shoot at him, and I told them not to do it.

T. H. SMITH sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Question. What is your age?—Answer. Thirty-four years of age, sir.

Q. Where do you reside?—A. Saint James Goose Creek.

Q. What precinct do you live in?—A. Whaley's Church, sir.

Q. Were you there on the day of the election?—A. I was, sir.

Q. What time in the morning did you get to that precinct, and how long did you remain?—A. I got there at the opening of the poll, and I remained there till half past four.

Q. Did you hold any office at that poll?—A. No, sir; none. That was the reason I left.

Q. Did you see any armed men there that day? and, if so, state how many, and who they were.—A. There was one company there known as the Ford riflemen. It was commonly known as the Ford company.

Q. What Ford was that?—A. A. P. Ford, present member of the legislature.

Q. Was he a candidate for the legislature at that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. On what ticket?—A. On the Bowen ticket.

Q. Was that the republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was this company you speak of armed there that day?—A. Yes, sir; they were armed there. Had them stacked in the road when I arrived.

Q. How far from the polls?—A. I suppose about a hundred yards from the polls—right in the public State road, sir.

Q. Was this the road that passed by the polls from which the voters came?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that the only company that was armed there?—A. No, sir. I suppose there was two hundred stand of arms stacked in the State road. When I say stand of arms, I mean shot-guns and old rifles, breech-loaders. They belonged to the militia of the State.

Q. These arms belonged to the Ford company?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is this Ford white or black?—A. Colored man.

Q. Were these other arms you saw there private arms?—A. Private arms; all private.

Q. How many white men were at that poll during the day?—A. I think there was nine white men there, sir.

Q. How many white men were there at any one time?—A. I don't think more than five or six at the outside at any one time.

Q. How many colored men were there?—A. I suppose there was upward ———; early in the morning there was about 300; 300 or 400 when we first arrived.

Q. Did they increase through the day?—A. No, sir; that was about the largest force they had when I was present in the morning.

Q. Did they have these arms about the polls at any time through the day?—A. No.

Q. What time did you leave?—A. I left at half past four.

Q. Did they have any clubs or sticks?—A. O, yes, sir; every fellow was armed with clubs and sticks.

Q. What sort of clubs?—A. Gotten up for the occasion. They were called eight-square sticks, about 3 feet long. I suppose they would measure around about 2½ to 3 inches.

Q. Did any of them have the appearance of having been recently prepared?—A. O, yes, sir; made up specially for that occasion.

Q. Did you see any persons repeating there during the day, or see any minors vote?—A. I did, sir; challenged one.

Q. State what occurred that you saw.—A. After my challenging that one vote, they got so obstreperous—it was repeated among them what I had done—and they went around and said, "Smith had better leave this place before dark or he will be made an example of."

Q. What was understood by that expression?—A. That I ought to be killed; that I would be killed if I remained.

Q. What was the language they used?—A. Well, sir, I didn't hear it. I was told by one of my men; and the only thing I heard in connection with that he came up to me and told me, "Mr. Smith, you had better leave here before dark."

Mr. LAPHAM objects to the witness stating what he heard.

Q. Go on and state what you heard.—A. I was told to leave before dark, or I would be killed after dark.

Q. Did you see any demonstration or hear any language of a threatening character on the part of these colored people there that day? and, if so, state what it was you saw and heard.—A. As I stated before, one of my hands came up and advised me to leave.

Q. Was this party that came up and advised you of this a colored man?—A. Yes, sir; he was a republican; he voted the republican ticket; he lived on my place.

Q. In connection with that, did you observe any threatening demonstrations? and, if so, state what you saw.—A. O, yes, sir; I saw it very plainly. This man, John Jackson, the man I challenged for voting twice, he came up to me and says, "You have got that to prove, and I will make an example of you if you don't leave before dark." That was after this conversation that came to me by this republican. He came afterward.

Q. Did you leave after that?—A. I left at half past four, sir.

Q. Did you see any minors vote there that day?—A. Yes, sir; I saw seven. Four used to belong to me and three lived with me.

Q. And you knew they were minors?—A. Yes, sir; I know they were minors, and can prove it.

Q. Did you challenge them?—A. They wouldn't allow me that chance; they wouldn't allow me to get up to the polls and challenge them, the crowd was so dense.

Q. Did you challenge them?—A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Why did you not challenge them?—A. I couldn't do it.

Q. Why?—A. From fear, sir. I couldn't get up to the polls.

Q. Why could you not get up to the polls?—A. The crowd was so dense I couldn't get through.

Q. Were these colored republicans thick around the polls; and, if so, state how they were around the polls—in what manner.—A. They were around so close you couldn't get within ten feet of the polls.

Q. Did they have these sticks in their hands at the time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hear or know of C. H. Chors challenging two colored boys there?—A. That was done, sir, during my absence.

Mr. LAPHAM objects to the last answer as an affirmative statement of a fact.

Q. Do you know whether any of the negroes you saw vote there once lived with Mr. Chors?—A. I do not, sir.

Q. Did you see anything else of a threatening character on the part of the colored men there that day in connection with the management and conduct of the election? and, if so, state what you saw.—A. I had charge of these tickets—the fusion tickets. Mr. Chors got them up for the occasion. A great many men in the neighborhood were anxious to vote the democratic ticket, with the exception of the republican electors and Bowen for sheriff. These tickets I gave to a good many who were desirous of voting them. They watched me and saw me give them to these parties, and they were followed up by several. A. P. Ford was watching me. He went up and demanded them to give him the tickets I had given them. He said they had no right to vote that ticket, and from fear they surrendered them and he gave them republican tickets and told them to vote that, and they did according to his orders. After they got through they came back and said, "Mr. Smith, I am afraid to vote this ticket after Mr. Ford seen we with it. It's more than my life is worth to put it in the box; I had to surrender it."

Mr. LAPHAM. I object to private conversations with the witness by electors after they had cast their votes.

(Objection overruled on the ground that the conversation at the time and under the circumstances is a part of the res gesta.)

Q. This man Ford, that you spoke of, is known as a member of the Chamberlain legislature?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State whether you witnessed the manner in which electors cast their ballots; and if so, what it was.—A. They compelled every man to be sworn, and compelled him to hold the ticket up in his right hand, showing the outside of it; and if one raised up his right hand without the ticket, they told him, "Take the ticket in your right hand." And I objected to it. I said, "Gentlemen, this is not legal."

Q. Was there anything about the respective tickets by which their political character could be ascertained or known by parties when thus held up?—A. Yes, sir; one showed the red very plainly, and the other was perfectly white. The republican ticket showed the red very plainly. You could see through it. The other was perfectly white.

Q. Do you know anything about the interference with the colored voter Mitchell?—A. Yes, sir; I saw it. He was attacked by the crowd.

Q. State what led to the interference with him.—A. He was accused of voting the democratic ticket.

Q. Who accused him?—A. A fellow by the name of Watson; I think that is his name; William Watson, a colored man. He says, "If we can prove that you voted that democratic ticket you will not go one foot further." That was in the presence of the crowd; and Sandy Prailor, he went forward and told the crowd, "That is something you have got to prove. If he did vote the democratic ticket, you don't know it. If he did vote the democratic ticket I wouldn't interfere with him. You could kill him." That is, alluding to this crowd that William Watson represented. After Prailor stated that, he was allowed to pass on with friends. I didn't hear the threats. That is all that I saw.

Q. You did not see Watson pursue him?—A. No, sir; I didn't see him pursue him.

Q. About what time of day was that, forenoon or afternoon?—A. It was afternoon, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. How many votes were polled at that precinct that day?—A. There were six hundred polled.

Q. How many of that number were democratic?—A. Well, I don't remember that exactly. I didn't see the poll-list afterward. I can give you the paper statement.

Q. What is the voting population of the precinct over 21 years of age?—A. About four hundred.

Q. Do you know by the census what the voting population of that precinct is?—A. The census is not correct.

Q. Do you know what it is by the census?—A. No, sir, I don't, by the census. The last census is not correct.

Q. Then how do you know it is incorrect?—A. From the census-taker who took the census.

Q. You are a democrat, are you not?—A. O yes, sir; have always been, sir, and expect to be.

Q. Did you have any arms on the day of the election?—A. Yes, sir;—I had arms.

Q. What kind of arms?—A. I had a pistol, sir.

Q. What kind of a pistol?—A. It's a five-shooter, sir. It's a Colt's Navy.

Q. Was it loaded?—A. Yes, sir; loaded.

Q. Do you know of any other white people who had them there?—A. No, sir; I don't know whether they had or not.

Q. Did you see them have them?—A. No, sir; I didn't see any have them.

Q. Did you see any white people have guns?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you take your pistol with you when you went there in the morning?—A. Yes, sir; I carried it.

Q. Loaded with a cartridge, or with powder and ball?—A. With a cartridge, sir.

Q. What sized ball?—A. It's a Colt's Navy, sir. It's a five-inch Colt's.

Q. How many balls to the pound?—A. I have no idea, sir. I have never seen them weighed.

Q. Large or small?—A. Small, sir; very small.

Q. Throw a ball through a 2-inch plank, wouldn't it?—A. No, sir.

Q. Through an inch-board?—A. No, sir.

Q. Where did you get it?—A. I bought it, sir.

Q. When?—A. I have had it ever since and during the war.

Q. Were you in the war?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where?—A. In Lee's army, sir; Hampton's cavalry; Butler's regiment.

Q. General M. C. Butler?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. An officer or a private?—A. A private, sir.

Q. Have you a rifle?—A. Yes, sir; one that I brought from the army with me.

Q. Have you ever belonged to a rifle-club since the war?—A. No, sir; there is no rifle-club in my neighborhood.

Q. This mixed ticket you speak of having tried to get in had the Hayes and Wheeler electors on it, had it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The republican ticket was for Hayes and Wheeler also, was it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. This mixed ticket did not change the result as to electors, then?—A. No, sir; I don't think there was any put in at all, to my knowledge. Here is one; it had the Hayes and Wheeler electors on it.

Q. So the men to whom you gave that ticket, or who voted the republican ticket, voted for the Hayes and Wheeler electors?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know of any person who went to Whaley's church to vote that day who did not in fact vote?—A. Driven off by intimidation, do you mean?

Q. Do you know of any person who went there for the purpose of voting who did not in fact vote?—A. No, sir; I did not see one.

Q. You live in that precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your business?—A. Farmer, sir.

Q. Employ colored men?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many?—A. Do you mean men or hands?

Q. I mean voters?—A. There are twelve on my place.

Q. Did they all vote at this precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far from the polls were you when these minors that you allude to voted?—A. I saw them vote.

Q. How far away from the polls were you?—A. I was about five feet away.

Q. You stated that you could not challenge them?—A. These seven that I referred to, I was close enough to challenge them, but couldn't do it from fear.

Q. You didn't challenge any one of them?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see any personal violence committed upon any person that day?—A. None, with the exception of Mitchell, sir; I saw violence with Mitchell.

Q. What did you see done by way of violence to Mitchell?—A. I saw clubs drawn over him; no licks passed, though.

Q. He was not struck?—A. No, sir; I didn't see any.

Q. Did you see any personal violence to any individual during the whole of that day?—A. Up to half past four, sir, when I left, do you mean?

Q. Up to the time you left?—A. No, sir; it was all one-sided.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. What was your answer to a question by Mr. Lapham as to the voting strength of that precinct?—A. About 400, sir.

Q. On this mixed ticket that you spoke of in your examination-in-chief, you say appeared the names of the Hayes and Wheeler electors?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. There were tickets there, were there not, with the democratic electors on them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why were they not offered to these colored voters?—A. They were offered, sir.

Q. They were not even permitted to vote the mixed ticket?—A. They wouldn't allow them to vote the mixed ticket.

Q. This pistol you speak of having on you that day, were you in the habit of carrying?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You did not carry it specially on that day, did you?—A. No, sir.

Q. You did not exhibit it to anybody?—A. No, sir.

Q. It was not shown there at the polls to intimidate anybody?—A. No, sir; it was not shown at all, sir.

Q. You said something about the census-return of that precinct; to the census of what year do you refer?—A. To the last census taken, sir.

Q. Of 1875?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was the census of that year taken by?—A. By a man by the name of Gant.

Q. Where does he live?—A. On the State road, not far from my place.

Q. Is he a white man?—A. No, sir; a colored man.

Q. Is he a man of intelligence and competency?—A. No, sir; nothing more than ordinary.

Q. What do you know about the accuracy or inaccuracy of the census, taken by this man Gant, of that precinct?—A. I asked him, "You haven't been in my neighborhood to get the census of this vicinity"——

Mr. LAPHAM objects to the witness stating a conversation he had with a third party as incompetent.

Q. Did he in fact come to your place to get the census?—A. No, sir.

Mr. LAPHAM. If by his place he means his residence, I do not object.

Q. Did he come to your plantation to take the census?—A. No, sir; he did not. There were three other places in my neighborhood he didn't visit.

Q. How many persons were on your plantation at that time, in 1875, when he took this census?—A. Do you mean including men, women, and children?

Q. Including all the persons on your place.—A. I can give you an estimate; about thirty, women, children, and all.

Q. You say that he didn't go to three other places in that neighborhood?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What information have you about that from the owners?

Mr. LAPHAM renews his objection.

Q. Did you learn anything from the census-taker himself?—A. I did have a conversation with him.

Q. At what time?—A. Immediately after I saw the report.

Q. In 1875?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State whether or not he made any admission to you that he had gone into those neighborhoods to take the census.

Mr. LAPHAM. I object, on the ground that the statement of the census-taker to the witness on the question whether his report was accurate or otherwise, is not competent.

Question withdrawn for the present.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. How long had the census-taker by law to complete his enumeration?—A. I do not know the required term, sir.

Q. About how long?—A. I am not posted at all in that.

Q. You do not know whether he had three months or six months to complete it?—A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. What season of the year was the census taken?—A. That I don't recollect. I don't remember now.

A. Do you remember whether you were at home every day during the period he was taking the census?—A. I live there, sir; I can't say, sir. I can't say I was there; but he could not have been there without my knowing.

Q. Do you know whether you were at home every day during the time he was taking the census, was my question?—A. No, sir; I can't recollect that.

Q. Are you not frequently from home?—A. Not very often; no, sir.

Q. Occasionally?—A. Occasionally I am absent, sir.

Q. To what places do you go?—A. To Charleston, sir.

Q. When at Charleston how long are you generally away?—A. A day, sir.

Q. Is Charleston your trading-place?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the name of the census-taker?—A. Gant. I don't know his initials. He is simply for that parish.

Q. Who is the colored preacher at Whaley's church?—A. Robertson, I think.

Q. How long has he been there?—A. About two years, sir. He has been preaching about two years, I believe. I am not well posted on the religious entertainment there.

Q. You know that he is the preacher there, do you not?—A. I think that is his name.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. Do you know that he has been preaching there?—A. No, sir; I do not. I think that is his name—Robertson. I don't know him personally at all.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. But you know there is a colored preacher there?—A. O, yes, sir; I know that. The church that my colored people generally attend, or those living on my place, is what they call Saint Peter's. A. P. Ford is the pastor of one church and Ishmael Grant of the other.

Q. Ford is pastor of which church?—A. The Baptist church.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. During any of your absences during that year of the census-taking did you learn from any member of your family, when you returned home, whether the census-taker had been there?—A. No, sir; I never did. He confessed himself he never went there.

Mr. LAPHAM objects to the last question and answer as not being competent testimony.

Q. In regard to this preacher at Whaley's church, you were never at that church, were you?—A. No, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. You do not know of your own personal knowledge who does preach there, do you?—A. No, sir.

Q. You only know from hearsay?—A. I know Ford preaches there, sir.

Q. Did you ever hear him preach?—A. No, sir; I never have. I have passed the road when he was preaching.

Q. You passed there when you understood he was preaching?—A. I know this man Ford, personally. I know him.

Q. Did you see him?—A. No, sir; I did not see him; but I heard him. The church is not more than twenty feet from the road.

JOHN RAVENELS sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Question. Where do you reside?—Answer. I stay in the country in the summer and here in Charleston in the winter.

Q. What is your voting-precinct?—A. Whaley's church.

Q. Did you attend that precinct on the day of the last election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you there in any official capacity?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see any interference there that day with electors? And if so, state what it was and all you know about it.—A. I suppose I might as well tell what I saw when I first went up there. When I first rode up to the crowd I saw a great many colored men there, and no white men at all.

Q. What time of day was this?—A. I suppose about six o'clock; and after having been there for about a quarter of an hour, I saw marching up the State road a company of colored men armed with rifles. They were met near the polls on the road—the polls were a little ways from the road, about a hundred yards—by a party of men who rushed from the polls with some of their leaders, and stopped, and then returning a little further, till they got exactly in front of the polls, and then they stacked their rifles up.

Q. How far from the polls was it that they stacked their rifles?—A. About 150 yards; a good gunshot.

Q. Did they leave their guns stacked there?—A. They left them stacked there, and half of the men would come up to the polls and vote, carrying their clubs with them, and they left the other half with the guns; the guns staying there till about twelve o'clock, when they were carried off, I don't know where.

Q. Did you see any interference there with any voter when he went up to vote? And if so, state what you saw.—A. As a man came up to the polls from the road he was always stopped by one leader and several radical colored men, and his ticket was demanded; not asked for, but demanded. He had to show it whether he would or no, and if he had a democratic ticket it was at once taken away from him and a radical ticket put in its place. And a gentleman of the democratic party, Mr. Devoe, was arrested by one of the supervisors for what he supposed was bribery—upon a charge of bribery; and the deputy marshal, I believe he was, had him released; but threats were so evident that he was carried off by Bowen. He carried him down in his buggy, because he didn't think it was safe for him to stay any longer around the polls. And at three o'clock, when Mr. Smith and myself were leaving, a colored man named Mitchell said he would like to come along with us.

Q. Who was Mitchell?—A. He was a democratic voter. He went to the State road, and Smith and myself went to our horses, and when he got to the State road he was met by some radical voters, and others followed him from the polls and surrounded him, with clubs, and threatened to beat him, holding up their clubs over him, and crowding him and menacing him in several ways; but Sandy Prailor hindered him from being beaten till he called them off.

Q. Did you observe when these electors voted whether they were required to hold up their tickets in any way? And if so, state in what manner.—A. The tickets were folded up, and they held them in their hands.

Q. Which hand did they hold them in?—A. They held up their right hand. I am not perfectly certain about their holding the ticket up in their hand, but I think they did. The ticket was folded up—

Q. Was there any one around the polls to examine their tickets—to see what ticket they voted?—A. At one time I saw Ford, the radical legislator from this county—

Q. Was he a candidate for the legislature on the republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir. I saw him ask for several tickets, and I saw him take tickets out of a democratic fellow's hand and give him a radical ticket; told him he didn't have the right ticket.

Q. Ford was the captain of this company that was there?—A. So I am told.

Q. You saw him come up, did you?—A. He was there before the company arrived; he went out towards the company, stopping them from coming to the polls, which they were evidently doing.

Q. How many white men were there at that poll?—A. Early in the morning, at the opening of the poll, there was Mr. Hood, the manager of election, and Mr. Chors, supervisor, and Mr. Smith, and myself; four of us.

Q. How many white men were there at any one time during the day that you saw?—A. Later in the day four white men came, and then Mr. Boogs came later than that.

Q. These white men that came there, would they vote and go home, and others come?—A. No, sir. The first four—I should have said five, because I forgot that Mr. Devoe was there—he came up with Mr. Smith and myself. We staid there till three o'clock. The other gentlemen they came about twelve, and staid about an hour and a half, I think, and then they left. Several men came up to me and told me they would like to vote the democratic ticket.

Q. Were those colored men?—A. Yes, sir. I told them I didn't think it was safe to do so, and they said, "O, they couldn't scare them; they would go and vote it anyhow." But they took a walk around, and seeing how things stood, and having their tickets taken away from them, they came back and said they couldn't vote them; that "those niggers would kill them." That was their expression, and afterwards I think they voted the radical ticket.

Q. Did you see them vote?—A. I didn't see them vote; no, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Who do you mean by the radical ticket?—A. I mean the Chamberlain ticket.

Q. I am speaking of the electoral ticket, not the State ticket.—A. Well, I mean the republican ticket for Hayes and Wheeler.

Q. That is what you call the radical ticket?—A. I call one the republican and the other a radical ticket.

Q. Which do you call the republican ticket?—A. We call the United States the republican ticket.

Q. Do you mean they were separate tickets?—A. No, sir; they were tickets together; but then we always talk of two parties. We had a fusion ticket up there, I believe—a fusion ticket and a State democratic ticket; the fusion ticket was republican.

Q. The effort was to get the colored people to vote the fusion ticket, was it not?—A. Well, sir, we offered them—just as they pleased.

Q. Was there not a special effort made to get the colored men to vote the fusion ticket? Did you not peddle those tickets?—A. No, sir.

Q. What did you peddle?—A. Nothing.

Q. Which ticket did you vote?—A. I didn't vote at all, sir.

Q. Are you not a voter?—A. No, sir; I was not a voter at the time.

Q. For what reason?—A. I wasn't of age.

Q. You were there out of curiosity, then?—A. Out of curiosity.

Q. You don't know of any one who was prevented from voting there, do you?—A. I can't name them, but it was as I stated before—

Q. I mean you don't know of any one who went away without exercising the right of suffrage—without voting, in fact?—A. I don't know of any that didn't vote, but I know of many who were threatened.

- Q. But still they voted?—A. One or two of them voted.
- Q. Did you see personal violence committed upon any person that day?—A. No, sir; I didn't see any one struck.
- Q. Where do you live; in what precinct?—A. I always go to Whaley's church; in the country places up there.
- Q. Where were you living on election-day?—A. On election-day—it was in summer. I was living here in town, and going up to my place every day. My business was in Whaley's precinct.
- Q. What is your business?—A. Planting, sir.
- Q. How many men had you in your employ?—A. I have three men living on my place. I have employed more.
- Q. How many had you in your employment at election time?—A. I had one at election-time.
- Q. Who is the colored preacher at Whaley's church?—A. I don't know who preaches there, sir.
- Q. You never attended their meetings?—A. No, sir.
- Q. And never attended that church?—A. No, sir.
- Q. Who subpoenaed you to come here as a witness?—A. Mr. Chors told me that probably they would want me to testify.
- Q. Did you come at the request of Mr. Chors?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. When?—A. He told me yesterday that I had better come down; that they might want me.
- Q. You were not subpoenaed, then?—A. I was, this morning.
- Q. I mean before you came here?—A. Mr. Chors told me that I was.
- Q. But you were not subpoenaed, were you?—A. I didn't receive one. I was out in the country.

DANIEL MOULTRE (colored) sworn and examined.

By Mr. EDEN :

- Question. What is your age?—Answer. I am about twenty-five years old now.
- Q. What precinct do you vote in?—A. Whaley's church.
- Q. Were you at that precinct at the last election?—A. Yes, sir; I was there, sir.
- Q. About how many persons were there there?—A. About two hundred and fifty, sir.
- Q. At what time did you go to the polls?—A. I went there about 6 o'clock, sir.
- Q. And what time did you leave?—A. About three, sir.
- Q. Did you attend any political meetings before the election?—A. O yes, sir.
- Q. At what places?—A. Three places. One at Mr. Rhett's place, and one across to Dorchester, and Eight-mile Pump.
- Q. Which one of the political parties was it that held these meetings that you attended?—A. The republican party, sir.
- Q. Who were the speakers?—A. Ishmael Grant, Sancho Gantt, and myself.
- Q. How long was it before the election that you attended those meetings?—A. Two months, sir.
- Q. If you heard any threats made before the election against persons about voting the democratic ticket, state what they were.—A. Several of them, sir; not at the same club we was tending, but the other club, the club they called the Ford club; the Ford club was at Ten-mile Hill, sir, on the northwestern railroad; the Ford meeting we did not tend there, because they did not allow us. They said any man who vote the democrat ticket at that day, if they find it out, they would kill him.
- Q. Who was it that said that?—A. Every one in the party, sir.
- Q. Was there any leader among them?—A. Yes, sir; Ford was the leader, and Braughton, and the others I cannot recollect now.
- Q. How many were there there at that meeting?—A. I could not tell now how much, but there be a good many of them. We had two hundred in our club, and they had more in theirs.
- Q. State what arms, if any, this Ford club had?—A. They was made up in clubs. They was made up first into a militia company, and then afterward they turned it into a club, and the militia company was called the Ford company, and it was made in behalf of Ford, and then they all turned into a club. They never had any arms at the club where they met.
- Q. What sort of arms, if any, did this company of Ford's have?—A. Muskets and rifles, sir.
- Q. Do you know how many there were in that company who had muskets and rifles?—A. No, sir. By judgment, I should judge there was two hundred.
- Q. State whether it was these militia men who had the guns, or other men that made the threats you speak of?—A. I cannot recollect whether it was the militia, but at the voting the Ford party came from all around with guns.
- Q. Come to the election with guns?—A. Yes, sir; but whether they had arms different from the rest I could not tell, sir.

Q. When these threats were made that you speak about, where was Ford?—A. Ford was right there, sir.

Q. What did he say, if anything?—A. He said any man who vote that ticket ought to be beat to death. He said they were a fool.

Q. Were there any white men at that meeting, or were they all colored?—A. All colored men, sir.

Q. When you went to the election what armed men, if any, did you see?—A. They had rifles, and muskets, and double-barreled shot-guns, and all sorts of guns.

Q. Who had them?—A. All the Ford party, sir; every one of them.

Q. Can you give an estimate as to how many guns there were there at one time and another?—A. I judge about two hundred guns, sir, because they had them stacked up like corn-stalks.

Q. State whether any other parties had guns there except the Ford party?—A. Nobody at all, sir.

Q. At the election what threats, if any, did you hear toward colored men about voting the democratic ticket?—A. They said they would beat them to death if they could find out. Some said they would kill them if they could find out. Some said they would beat them, and some again said they would kill them at once.

Q. Did you talk with any colored men at the election who expressed a desire to vote the democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir; I did. There was one young man right there asked me which one I was going to vote. I says, "Which are you going to vote?" His name was William Mitchell. I told him I was going to vote the democratic ticket, and Mitchell said he would, too, but he was afraid he would get killed. I told him I was going to do it slyly, unbeknowns to the party. He said he would not trust; he was afraid he would be killed. All the cry was there, any man who vote the democrat ticket would be beaten to death.

Q. Did you talk to any other man besides Mitchell at the election?—A. I did not talk again, sir, because I could not trust none. When three or four hundred men be again a party, a man does not know what to say.

Q. Before going to the election did you talk to any colored men as to how they were going to vote?—A. Yes, sir; before going to the election.

Q. If you heard any of them express an opinion as to how any of them were going to vote, state what it was?

Mr. LAPHAM objects, on the ground that a conversation with an elector before the day of election as to how he was going to vote is incompetent.

Mr. EDEN. We propose to prove that fact, and then that these parties were afterward at the election.

Q. Did you see those parties to whom you were talking to before the election at the election afterward?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did they say, if anything, about voting the democratic ticket?—A. They said they would vote the democrat ticket.

Q. Did you see those same colored men at the election?—A. There was two precincts; half up to Whaley's, and the other down to my house.

Q. Did you see any of these same men that you talked with before the election, and who said they would vote the democratic ticket at Whaley's church on the day of the election?—A. Yes, sir; I saw them there, sir.

Q. Did you talk with any of them there?—A. None but Mitchell, because I could not trust.

Q. Did you see any of these men vote there that you had talked with before?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you know the tickets; by their color?—A. Yes, sir; I know the tickets, sir.

Q. Do you know how these men voted?—A. Yes, sir; I know how they voted; they voted the republican ticket. When they all first went up there I do not know whether they had democrat tickets or no; but there was a party of men searched them all; but how it come they did not search me—

Q. Who searched them for tickets when they came up?—A. Four or five gathered around him and said, "Let us see what kind of tickets you have;" and some I could see had democratic tickets; and they took them away from them and tear them up, and made them vote the republican ticket.

Q. How many colored men did you see them search and take tickets away from in that manner?—A. Four. I stood up in the buggy and looked down in the crowd.

Q. Did you see those same four men vote?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What ticket did they vote?—A. The red ticket; that was the republican ticket.

Q. What time did you first go up to the polls to vote?—A. I started to the polls about eight o'clock, and the crowd was so thick around there—I had promised to vote the democratic ticket; I had made up my mind to do it—I went to the polls about eight o'clock, and they crowded around me so thick I would not attempt, and about 10 o'clock they were lying around the grass, and I went up and voted.

Q. What ticket did you vote?—A. I voted the democrat ticket, sir.

Q. When you voted, what crowd, if any, was standing immediately where you voted?—A. Nobody at all, sir.

Q. Whose plantation did you live on at that time?—A. Mr. Charley Chors's, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Where are you working now?—A. At Mr. Chors's, sir.

Q. How happened you to come here as a witness?—A. Mr. Chors asked me if I would not come and speak the truth—what was done up yonder.

Q. When did he speak to you about it?—A. Yesterday evening.

Q. You were not subpoenaed, then, to come here; there wasn't any officer come and served a subpoena on you?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know any one who did not vote at Whaley's that day?—A. No, sir; I did not know any one that did not vote.

Q. Do you know of any colored man who has been discharged from his work since the election?—A. No, sir; none.

Q. You do not?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you not hear any threats about discharging men before the election?—A. No, sir.

Q. What were these three meetings you attended; what kind of meetings were they?—A. They were republican, sir.

Q. You were a republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You made speeches at republican meetings?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was the last meeting you attended?—A. The last one we had was at Eight-mile Pump, sir.

Q. How long before the election?—A. About two weeks before the election, sir.

Q. How many persons were there?—A. There was a hundred there at the last meeting.

Q. Colored people?—A. Colored people, sir.

Q. Who made speeches?—A. Ishmael Grant, Sancho Gantt, and myself. We all three made speeches.

Q. Republican speeches?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You advised the people to vote the republican ticket, did you not?—A. Yes, sir; we did.

Q. They seemed pleased with the speeches you made, did they not?—A. No, sir; not all of them.

Q. Did they not cheer you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. This was about two weeks before the election?—Yes, sir.

Q. When did you change your mind; how long after that meeting?—A. A week, sir.

Q. You did not address a meeting after that, did you?—A. No, sir; I did not address none there, sir.

Q. After you changed your mind you did not make any democratic speech, did you?—A. No, sir.

Q. You were not armed on the day of the election?—No, sir.

Q. Did you see any white men have arms?—A. No, sir.

Q. Not pistols.—A. I cannot tell; I never had them in my hands.

Q. You didn't see any?—A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't have any pistol?—A. No, sir.

Q. You voted as you wanted to, did you not—voted the democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. You did not stay till the election closed, you say?—A. No, sir.

Q. What time did you leave?—A. Three o'clock, sir.

Q. How long have you engaged to work for Mr. Chors?—A. Ten years.

Q. Ten years from this time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has he agreed to keep you ten years?—A. O, no, sir.

Q. He has not agreed to keep you any length of time?—A. I can stay with him as long as I want.

Q. How long has he offered to keep you?—A. As long as I behave myself and keep from stealing. I have been working for him for ten years.

Q. Has he told you that you could stay with him as long as you wanted to?—A. Yes, sir; as long as I behave myself.

Q. And vote the democratic ticket?—A. There is some there who vote the republican ticket, and he don't object to them at all. They are treated as well as I am.

Q. When was it he told you that you could stay as long as you chose?—A. Since I was a small boy, sir.

Q. Has he not said it lately to you?—A. O, no; no, sir.

Q. How old were you when you began to live with him?—A. I was about fifteen years old, sir.

Q. Did you always have your own wages since you were fifteen, or did some one else have them?—A. O, my mother, sir.

Q. Where does she live?—A. My mother is right there too, sir.

Q. With Mr. Chors?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. She lives there yet?—A. Yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. When did Mr. Chors make the statement to you that you could stay with him as long as you wanted to?—A. When I was a boy, sir.

Q. How did he come to make that statement to you?—A. There was some boys there of my size, and they stole from him. They was so rascally, and he turned them off, and he said as long as I behaved myself I could stay on his plantation.

Q. He made no such statement to you at this election to influence your vote?—A. O, no, sir; before I could vote at all.

Q. You say you changed your mind about supporting the republican ticket after you had made a speech, some two weeks before the election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What brought about the change in your mind?—A. Ford was running for a representative and Ishmael Grant for representative, and Ford always called the Ishmael Grant party a democrat. He wanted all that belonged to Ishmael Grant turned over to him; and we considered that Grant was as good a man as he was and better, for he staid on the plantation and Ford staid in the city, and we did not recognize him to come out and represent Goose Creek Parish; and when we come down to town, two weeks before the election, they turned us out of the convention, telling us to go home and dig mud and let the citizens run the convention.

Q. You determined then to vote the democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was through no persuasion or influence of Mr. Chors?—A. O, no, sir.

Q. Why did you leave the polls at three o'clock in the evening?—A. I was afraid of staying there any later hour for fear of being beat.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Nobody touched you that day—used any violence toward you?—A. No, sir; no one didn't touch me.

Q. Any one know how you voted?—A. No, sir; not till two weeks after the election.

Q. Nobody knew how you had voted that day?—A. No, sir; nobody knew how I was voting.

Q. You denied that you had voted?—A. Yes, sir; I said I did not vote.

Q. You were in earnest when you advocated the republican ticket at that last meeting?—A. Yes, sir; I was in earnest.

Q. You had always voted it?—A. I had always voted it.

Q. Who is the colored clergyman at Whaley's church?—A. I do not understand that.

Q. Who is the minister at Whaley's church?—A. Mr. Hazle.

Q. Have you heard him preach?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you attend that church?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. He is a republican, isn't he?—A. I couldn't tell what he is, sir.

Q. Do you not know that he is a republican?—A. No, sir; I could not say so.

Q. Do you know Elder Leadbetter?—A. Yes, sir. I know him, sir.

Q. Did he ever talk to you how you should vote?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know how he voted?—A. Yes, sir; I know how he voted. He voted the democrat ticket.

Q. How did you find that out?—A. We all got around him, the boys that knew him, and was funning with him up at the poll, and he held it up so we could see what he voted.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. You were subpoenaed to come here this morning, were you not?—A. Yes, sir.

ABRAM MITCHELL (colored) sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Question. Where do you live?—Answer. Saint James, Goose Creek, this county.

Q. What precinct do you vote at?—A. Whaley's precinct, sir.

Q. How long have you lived in that neighborhood?—A. Eight years this January coming.

Q. What's your age?—A. Last June gone I was thirty-one.

Q. Did you attend any political meetings before the election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where at?—A. I attended one at the Eight-mile House, on the Dorchester road, and one to Whaley's, sir.

Q. Were those two all you attended before the election?—A. Yes; I didn't go out but twice.

Q. Which party held these meetings?—A. The first meeting I went to was appointed by Mr. Mackey.

Q. Which party did he belong to; was he a republican or a democrat?—A. He is a republican, I think, sir. I can't say anything else.

Q. Was the other meeting a republican or democratic meeting?—A. Both meetings was republican meetings, sir.

Q. Who spoke at the other meeting?—A. Adam Ford and Ishmael Grant, and somebody else spoke before I got there; but those two men spoke whilst I was there.

Q. How long was that last meeting before the election?—A. I was not up to the last meeting.

Q. The last meeting you attended; how long was that before the election?—A. If I don't make a mistake, it is about three weeks, I think, sir.

Q. Before the election?—A. We had one meeting since that, but I was not there.

Q. If you heard any threats made before the election against colored men for voting for one party or the other, state what you heard said upon that subject.—A. The republican party said no man has no right to vote no other ticket except the Chamberlain ticket, and if they do vote any other ticket they would whip them with switches and beat them with square sticks. That's what they carried at every meeting.

Q. Whom did you hear say that?—A. It was said among the party.

Q. Were you at the last election at Whalley's church?—A. The last election before this, do you mean?

Q. No; the very last one.—A. Yes, sir; this last election just past, you mean?

Q. Yes.—A. Yes, sir; I was there.

Q. About what time did you go there to the election?—A. I got there just about seven o'clock, as nigh as I can guess at it. I got there about the time the sun rised good, and I think that was about seven.

Q. Were there many persons there when you got there?—A. Yes, sir; the poll was crowded.

Q. Were they white or colored persons, mostly?—A. They were mostly colored.

Q. Were there any guns or other arms there that you saw?—A. Yes, sir; they had guns stacked off, stacked not exactly on the ground but off a piece; and they had arms up in the house, not a hundred yards from there, too, sir.

Q. About what number of arms did you see stacked?—A. They didn't have more than about seventy-five, sir. I would not say I didn't take particular notice to see how many they had, but they had a good lot of arms.

Q. Who was in charge of these arms that were stacked?—A. I did not go up with the party; but Dick Rodgers, he was captain of that company. I suppose he must have been in charge, sir.

Q. Were they colored men or white men?—A. No, sir; they were all colored men.

Q. Where was this house that the arms were in?—A. This house is a house not far from the ground—about a hundred yards.

Q. Who had charge of the arms in the house?—A. I don't know the man who lives in the house, but it is not far from the ground. He always was living there, but I never was up to the house before then, and I don't know the man that lived in it, sir.

Q. What time of day did you vote?—A. I voted about nine o'clock in the day, sir.

Q. About how many arms were there in that house?—A. I don't know exactly, sir, how many were in the house. I saw, but I didn't take any particular notice to know how many arms they had. They had about seventy-five arms on the ground, and they had some in that house, too, sir; but how many I won't say, because I don't know exactly, unless I was to speak from guess, and I don't like to do that.

Q. Were the arms in the house in charge of colored men or white men?—A. They must have been in charge of some colored man, because there was no white people lived in the house.

Q. Was there a colored man living in this house?—A. Yes, sir; there was a colored man who lives in the house.

Q. State what occurred when you went to vote.—A. When I first got on the ground Sandy Prailor he asked me who I was going to vote for. I told him I was going to vote the Hampton ticket, and he didn't say anything much. He says I didn't have any right to do it, and I told him I thought I had a right to vote as I felt disposed to vote, and so he said nothing more to me, and I went off, and after I was done voting, and when I started to go home, and after I got out into the road, they stopped me in the road, and came around me and asked me what did I mean by voting that ticket. I told them I thought I had a right to vote any way I felt like; and some one said they were going to cut some switches, and would whip me, and the rest of them said no, they would not do that; they would take the square stick and just beat me. But these men that said that was almost strangers to me. They came from up above. They did not live where I lived around there exactly. And they got around me with those sticks, and Mr. T. H. Smith and Sandy Prailor, and Mr. Ravenel, they came up and they stood for me, and they left me alone, and I came off and went on home, and none of them ever said anything to me since the election about it.

Q. Who was it that stopped you in the road; were they colored men or white men?—A. They was all colored men, sir.

Q. About how many of them were there in the crowd that stopped you?—A. About seventy-five head of them, sir; as nigh as I can guess at them, sir.

Q. How close did they come to you?—A. They came right up to me, sir; close up as they could get. I could not see my feet on the ground hardly.

Q. What, if anything, did they have in their hands?—A. They had square sticks, sir.

Q. About what sized sticks?—A. The size of the sticks was about—they were made just like those chair-rounds, and they have four squares at the end. They was not larger than those large rounds of the chair; the legs of the chair, not the rounds.

Q. About how long were the sticks?—A. Three feet long, sir. That's the way they makes them.

Q. In what position did they hold the sticks when they came up to you?—A. There was one or two of them had their sticks up over me, but, of course, all of them didn't do it, sir.

Q. Did any of these sticks have nails or anything driven into them?—A. Not that I noticed, sir; they didn't.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Where do you live now?—A. I live on Henry Smith's plantation, sir.

Q. Do you work for him?—A. Yes, sir; I works with him.

Q. How long have you worked there?—A. I have been working with him for the last six years; not regular; I have been away.

Q. How came you to come here as a witness?—A. Nobody didn't tell me to come, sir.

Q. Who spoke to you about coming?—A. Mr. Smith told me.

Q. Did anybody serve a subpoena on you?—A. I don't understand you, sir.

Q. Didn't any officer come and serve a subpoena on you?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Smith tell you you would get pay for coming?—A. He didn't tell me whether I was going to get pay or not.

Q. You expected to get pay, didn't you?—A. I expected pay.

Q. Nobody touched you with their clubs, did they?—A. No, sir.

Q. You were not injured in any way?—A. No, sir; never was injured.

Q. And this was after you voted?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know of any colored men who have been discharged since the election?—A. No, sir; not around where I am, sir.

Q. You do not?—A. No, sir.

Q. Anywhere in the county?—A. No, sir; I don't. I don't know of any man. In what way do you mean? Discharged from working where he has been working before?

Q. Yes.—A. No, sir; I don't know as there is around about where I am that's discharged.

Q. There aren't many there, are they?—A. O, yes, sir.

Q. How many does Mr. Smith have?—A. Mr. Smith has got about eight men on his place.

Q. Did you vote the whole democratic ticket, or what is called the Hampton ticket?—

A. I vote the full ticket.

Q. You voted the full democratic ticket?—A. Yes, I vote the full democratic ticket.

Q. When you went to those republican meetings, you were a republican weren't you?—A. No, sir; I went to hear each party speak.

Q. When did you make up your mind to vote the democratic ticket?—A. I can't tell you what time exactly.

Q. Did you ever vote it before?—A. I voted it once before, sir.

Q. When?—A. I voted it at the time Judge Carpenter run.

Q. How long ago was that?—A. It has been about six years now, sir.

Q. You have voted at every election since, have you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And voted the republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are a republican, aren't you?—A. Yes, sir; always was, sir, till this election.

Q. Neither of Smith's men vote the democratic ticket; the men who work on the same place with you?—A. Yes, sir; this one man, I think. That's a pretty hard question. It's most unpossible for me to say.

Q. They don't like to tell always how they voted?—A. Yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. You say you can't state how they voted?—A. No, sir; not exactly. Of course the time when I went up I went up pretty much by myself, and the rest of the crowd voted afterward. A good many of them says so, but I know they did do it. It is most unpossible to say, sir.

Q. You say you have voted the republican ticket heretofore for the last six years?—A. Yes, sir; till this election.

Q. Did you vote the democratic or the republican ticket six years ago?—A. Six years ago, sir, I voted the democratic ticket.

Q. Whom did you vote for six years ago?—A. I voted for Judge Carpenter, sir.

Q. This year you voted the democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why did you vote the democratic ticket this year?—A. The last six years from that time I vote the republican ticket up to this-year. I didn't do it this year. I voted the regular democratic ticket this election, but I never done it for the last six years before this year.

Q. Did you vote the democratic ticket this year of your own free will and accord?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was your judgment, was it not? You voted without any undue influence on you as a freeman?—A. Yes, sir; I thought I had a right to vote.

Q. You expected to be paid for coming down here? Did you expect anything more than your witness fees?—A. No, sir; they didn't tell me I would be paid.

Q. What pay did you expect to get; anything more than the ordinary witness fees?—A. I did expect to get pay for the days I lose in coming.

Q. Just for your time?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Do you think Mr. Smith will deduct your time for coming here?—A. I works on my own footing, though I works on his place. He is not paying me by the month, neither by the week; he only pays me for what I does for him.

Q. How do you work for him?—A. I gives him contract days during the year. We have nine months to give him; gives him so many days' rent; and after that, of course, he don't have anything to do with me, any more than when he hires me the next year.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. You pay him a certain rent for the land?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have had a summons read to you here to-day, have you not, since coming here? Was there not a paper read to you to-day?—A. O, yes, sir.

TONY SCOTT (colored) sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Question. What is your age?—Answer. Twenty-three years of age, sir.

Q. Where do you live?—A. Saint John's, Berkeley Parish, Charleston County.

Q. How long have you live there?—A. I was born and raised here.

Q. What voting-precinct do you live in?—A. Biggins's church, sir.

Q. Did you attend any political meetings previous to the recent election?—A. Yes, sir; one.

Q. Where was that?—A. Saint Strawberry.

Q. When?—A. In August, I think; about August, sir.

Q. What sort of meeting was that, democratic or republican?—A. A democratic meeting, sir.

Q. Who made speeches there that day?—They had Lawyer Jervey, Stephen Brown, and George Sass, and myself. I can't remember all of them, sir. Some of them, I don't know their names.

Q. How many colored men spoke there that day, including yourself?—A. George Sass is a colored man, and Stephen Brown is a colored man, and Ben Singleton he is a speaker, too; but they called him so quick they wouldn't allow him to speak; they had to reject him. And there was some three or four other men spoke afterward;—but I don't know their names.

Q. Were there any republican speeches made there that day? and if so, state by whom they were made.—A. George Sass is a republican man, and there was three or four republican mens there, and we allowed them to speak there, and George Suss enrolled my name as a republican man to speak, and I didn't tell him what I was till I went up there, and then I let him kuow.

Q. Did he name the speakers who were to speak on behalf of the colored men?—A. George Sass named them; he wrote the names, all who was to speak, as republican men.

Q. And you made a speech?—A. Yes, sir, I did; he wrote my name.

Q. Was there any interference there that day with voters? If so, state what it was.—

A. Well, sir, about a week or two weeks before they had this democrat speech at Strawberry Ferry, they invited me and all the mens off the river to meet them at Dean Hall's sign, on the Strawberry road, and I goes, and when I gets there they say that the white gentlemens all make an agreement to pay all the colored people twenty-five cents to out rice, and so they all concluded not to work for that; and I tells them I were working for Mr. Nelson; he pay me seventy-five cents a day for my work, and I can live off that; but, says I, I never hear Mr. Nelson or no other gentlemens make such a proposition as that, and if it's so, I can't live off any less than I'm living off now, and I will have to make out, because I can't get any better, and I'll be compelled to work for that; but when they out me off to twenty-five cents a day I can't work for that; and George Sass say, that if any one come down to twenty-five, they would give them fifty lashes and run them out of the field, which I agreed to; and I say if they catched me working for that they could lick me; I went down to Strawberry Ferry the day of the speech and he heard me talk that way, and he thought I was one of his men to vote the republican ticket, or even to be a republican man; and when he put my name on the roll that I should be a speaker, I went up and I told them, says I, I am not bribed by no man to vote no ticket; neither has I no idea of voting any ticket as yet; but I say I do feel to myself that I should vote for a man who be bred and born in South Carolina; and if they be honest mens, I would vote for them; I say I would not vote for no foreigner; that they has promised so many things they doesn't do. Well, just as I said that, Simon McKelvy rushed at me; they came on me with such a rush and wanted to jerk me out of the wagon where I be speaking and beat me; right there Captain Ingrams, as they called him, he protect me; all the gentlemens protect me. They didn't try to fight no man, but he kept them off from crippling me. These colored people draw up that story themselves, when they say the colored people get but twenty-five cents a day.

Q. You say they attempted to take you out of a wagon. Were you standing in a wagon at the time?—A. Standing up in a wagon. They have a wagon there underneath the trees. Simon McKelvy, he be the most anxious to get to me to every one on the ground. Every one was making for me.

Q. This attempt by this crowd to take you from the wagon was made at the time you announced your determination to quit voting for these men who come here and made promises to you that they did not fulfill?—A. Yes, sir; that's so, sir.

Q. Did they get you from the wagon?—A. No, sir; because them gentlemens keep them off from me. They didn't have no fight; but they talk to them and they stop.

Q. State what occurred thereafter that.—A. From that they spotted me out in preference to everybody else; and they found out I was intended to vote the democratic ticket, and George Sass, he meet me on a Sunday morning about two mile from the plantation, and he told me plainly, right to my face, if he catch me at making any speech again, or even to Strawberry Ferry on the day of the vote, he would put out men to give me fifty lashes, and if I outrun them they have buckshot enough to run me down anyhow. And another man by the name of George Wering, he came up to the farm one day where I live, standing before the store-door, and he say, "Every democrat man who come to vote at Strawberry Ferry wouldn't get home." He spoke it in my hearing, so I would never go. And Henry Rivers, he sent me word—I meets him about three days afterward. He say, "I mnstn't come down on that side, for if I came down on that side he would put twenty-five buckshot in me anyhow."

Q. You did not go to Strawberry on the day of the election?—No, sir; I goes up to Biggins with Mr. Nelson.

Q. On the day of the speaking at Strawberry, after you had spoken, did any one interfere with you after that—follow you, or anything of that sort?—A. Yes, sir; followed me up. I couldn't go there right now. I can't go anyways too far from home, any more than go a little ways and come back again.

Q. Did you hear these colored men there about the plantation before the election make any threats against colored men if they voted the democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir. George Wering, he was the first man who spoke before the store-door. He say, any man who come down to Strawberry Ferry and vote the democratic ticket wouldn't get home. They had a company; and they got up twenty men, and every one had guns.

Q. Did you see that company starting to Strawberry on the morning of the election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was the captain of it?—A. John Young and Albert Lawrence. They was the captain and lieutenant of the company.

Q. Did they all have guns?—A. Every one of them had their guns.

Q. Did they have them on the morning that they started to the election?—A. Yes, sir; them is the same men I am speaking about now.

Q. Were the guns loaded or not?—A. The captain told every man to see that the guns was well loaded. I stood near, and John Young went around and told every man to throw his ramrod in the gun to see if they was well loaded.

Q. What were they loaded with?—A. I couldn't say; but I know they was loaded, though.

Q. You say you saw them start for Strawberry?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You did not go to Strawberry, but went to Biggins?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many colored people were in that immediate neighborhood where you live at this time, just before the election?—A. That's a hard lick, sir. There's a good gang. I couldn't tell you how many are there.

Q. A large number or a few?—A. A large number. Good God, I live right among the whole crowd!

Q. Did you hear any of them talking before the election about colored men who voted the democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir; every republican man, little to big, the women and everything, say if any colored democrat man ever go to a poll, he never come back home if they see him. They are bound to kill him; they are sworn on that. There be very little difference in it right now. If I go out anywhere now I couldn't talk.

Q. Are any of them armed?—A. Every man in the country has got guns. Good God, every one has got their muskets! You can't find a man in the whole river who has not got muskets.

Q. How long did you stay at Biggins precinct on the day of the election?—A. I don't think I staid there anything over an hour, not much over.

Q. How many colored men were at that precinct that day?—A. I couldn't tell you how much.

Q. Were they armed?—A. Every one, sir, had their gun. Every colored man on the ground had their guns.

Q. Did they have them around the polls?—A. Yes, sir; right at the polls—only when they go in to vote and come right back and get their guns.

Q. About how many colored men were there that day?—A. I never counted them; but I tell you there was over three hundred head anyhow, I know.

Q. How many white men were there?—A. Well, sir, there wasn't much. There wasn't much white mens there when I was there, lest they come afterwards. There wasn't over about 75 or 80, hardly that. Yes, about 75 or 80 white mens.

Q. Why did you leave so soon after voting?—A. I will tell you exactly. I wasn't afraid they was going to hurt me, because I was in the club, but because there was so much about killing me; and they knowed I was going to vote the democratic ticket, and I thinks it best to make my escape home and be out of the way. That is the reason why I leave.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. There were seventy-five or eighty white men at Biggins, you say?—A. I thinks about that.

Q. Did they have guns?—A. I couldn't tell you what they had. Some of them I know did have guns, not all of them.

Q. Where did they keep their guns?—A. I can tell you for a fact, sir, I seen fifteen guns there in all; them is all the guns I seen, and they was in a wagon.

Q. Did you see any in the church?—A. No, sir; no gun was in the church at all, sir.

Q. Are you sure of that?—A. I can swear to that, for the time I was there.

Q. What time did you leave?—A. I was there about an hour, sir; nothing more.

Q. What time did you leave?—A. I couldn't tell you, sir; I had no watch; but they got the poll open about six o'clock, and I think I leave there about half past 7. It might have been something after 6, but I think I leave there about half past 7; I am not certain; I had no watch to see what time of day it was.

Q. Did you have any gun or pistol that day?—A. No, sir; I had no gun.

Q. Or pistol?—A. No, sir; I had no pistol.

Q. Did you ever have one?—A. I never had a gun since I am born.

Q. You do not like to fight?—A. No, sir; I have never had a fight since I am born.

Q. You were announced as a republican to make this speech at Strawberry, were you not?—A. George Sass announced me as a republican speaker.

Q. And you consented to speak?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Democrats and republicans both spoke, did they not?—A. Yes, sir; they allowed each man to talk.

Q. But each party selected their own speakers?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were announced as one of the republican speakers?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. But you made a speech for the democrats?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You did not let them know what your sentiments were until you commenced speaking, did you?—A. No, sir; I didn't tell them nothing.

Q. Nobody touched you, did they?—A. No, sir.

Q. Or hurt you?—A. No, sir; they didn't hurt me at all.

Q. They did not throw anything at you?—A. No, sir; they throwed nothing at me. Only one man run up to me with a knife in his hand—one of these butcher-knives they have—to cut me, and grabbed me on the shoulder, and tell me, "You d---d son of a bitch, if it were not for one thing, I would put this knife in you;" and I shook away from him and told him he could kill me if he wanted to, and went on. I forgot his name, but he stays on Ball's plantation.

Q. Did you go to any meeting after the Strawberry meeting?—A. No, sir; I couldn't trust. I didn't go to any meeting after that.

Q. Do not the white people there have arms?—A. No, sir; they didn't have guns, and I couldn't tell you if they had pistols; I never seen them with any.

Q. Do not the white people own guns?—A. They have double-barreled guns.

Q. And rifles, too?—A. No, sir; I don't think they have. They have guns to shoot birds with.

Q. But whether they have pistols or not you do not know?—A. No, sir; I couldn't tell you about that.

Q. Who do you work for?—A. I work for Peter Nelson.

Q. Hasn't he a pistol?—A. I never seen Mr. Nelson have a gun since I has been living with him.

Q. Has he not a pistol, I ask you?—A. No, sir; not to my knowledge.

- Q. He was here, was he not?—A. He is here now, sir.
- Q. Was he not here yesterday?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You never knew that he had a pistol?—A. No, sir; I couldn't tell you. I never seen him have one.
- Q. How long have you worked for him?—A. I has been working with him two years now, sir.
- Q. Who told you to come here as a witness?—A. Mr. Nelson told me that the committee is coming down from Columbia, and wanted that they should see me. That is all, sir.
- Q. When did he tell you that?—A. He told me that on Tuesday, I think, or Wednesday.
- Q. Did you come with him yesterday?—A. Yes, sir; I come with him yesterday morning.
- Q. How do you work for him—on what terms? How does he pay you?—A. He pays me by the week, sir.
- Q. How much a week?—A. According to what I can make. Sometimes I make nine dollars a week out of him—according to the kind of work he has got for me to do.
- Q. Does your time stop while you are here?—A. Yes, sir; it must stop.
- Q. How do you expect to get pay for coming here?—A. I couldn't tell you.
- Q. You expected pay for coming, did you not?—A. No, sir; nobody told me about pay.
- Q. Did you not expect pay for coming here?—A. No, sir; 'cause I never heard anything about it.
- Q. You don't expect any pay, then, for coming here as a witness?—A. Well, if you will give it to me, I will thank you very much.
- Q. But you did not expect any?—A. No, sir.
- Q. And still you say your time stopped with Mr. Nelson?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Have you been subpoenaed since you came here? Anybody serve a subpoena on you?—A. You is too deep for me there. I ain't no educated man. Do you mean anybody speak with me or ask me any question?
- Q. Yes. Has anybody talked to you since you came here?—A. No, sir; nobody talked with me any more than that gentleman there, [indicating the chairman.]
- Q. Where did you see him?—A. Right in here.
- Q. No one asked you anything until you were asked in here?—A. No, sir.
- Q. You were not in at the Charleston Hotel last night?—A. Yes, sir; I was up there last night. That gentleman there, too, I think, [indicating Mr. Eden.]
- Q. What did you deny it for?—A. I couldn't remember all at once.
- Q. You had forgotten that?—A. Yes, sir. In fact, he was not asking me any questions at all, sir. He was only talking with another man that come.
- Q. Did you ever vote the democratic ticket before?—A. No, sir; I never vote no ticket at all before this year.
- Q. You have voted the republican ticket, have you not?—A. No, sir.
- Q. This was the first vote you ever gave?—A. Yes, sir; the first vote I ever give.
- Q. Did you ever make speeches before?—A. No, sir.
- Q. Did you make any other speech than the one you made at Strawberry this year?—A. No, sir; I never make none.
- Q. Who selected you to speak?—A. George Sass.
- Q. Is he a republican?—A. He is a republican man, sir.
- Q. Who were the democrats that spoke there besides you?—A. Well, sir, Mr. Jervoy, for one.
- Q. He is a lawyer here, you say?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Who spoke first?—A. I don't know who spoke first. I met George Sass on the stand when I reached there. I don't know who was up before him. But when I got there he was.
- Q. Who spoke next?—A. I think Mr. Jervoy next to George Sass.
- Q. He spoke for the democrats?—A. Yes, sir; I thinks so. I am not certain of that, either.
- Q. Who spoke next?—A. There was a short man went up there to speak.
- Q. Who was he?—A. I don't know, sir.
- Q. Did he speak for the democrats or for the republicans?—A. He was a democrat man, I think.
- Q. Two democrats spoke together, then?—A. Yes, sir. Excuse me, sir. They didn't allow him, Ben Singleton, to speak; the people would not accept him; they all run off from the place and wouldn't listen to him; and another man went up there, a republican man, and he talked.
- Q. Then who spoke next after Singleton?—A. He is a foreman working for Mr. Ball. He is a pastor, I know. He is a democrat man. I couldn't tell you his name, but he's a preacher.
- Q. Who spoke after him?—A. I spoke after him.
- Q. He was a democrat, and then you were called as a republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever let any one know you were a democrat until you spoke there?—A. No, sir; not a soul knowed what I was till that day.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. You say you did not make any more speeches after that Strawberry meeting?—A. No, sir.

Q. Why did you not attend other meetings and make speeches after that?—A. They threatened me so much if I go out, which I didn't care about to go and get beat up and crippled up for nothing. I thinks the best thing I could do was to stay at home till the day of the voting.

Q. Did I understand you to say that this man, Sass, was speaking when you got there?—A. Yes, sir; when I got there.

Q. Then you were not there when this arrangement was made about who should speak, and your name written on the paper?—A. I didn't know my name was on the roll, not before an hour and a half after I got there. I don't know whether it was put on that same day or before. I couldn't say, sir; but an hour or so after I got there he comes to me and tells me they will call on you directly, after that man finishes, and he has not got but 20 minutes more, and he said I would speak next.

Q. What did you tell Sass?—A. I told him yes; I would go up there and talk and make a speech.

Q. Did you tell Sass you were going to make a republican speech?—A. No, sir; but he knowed I had sense enough to make one, if I had a mind to; and he put me down for a republican speaker, because he knowed that I had sense enough to do it.

Q. Did you have anything to do with having your name put down as a republican speaker?—A. No, sir; I didn't have anything to do with it.

Q. You felt at liberty when you got on the stand to speak your honest sentiments, did you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. With regard to this question that Judge Lapham put to you, about whether you were subpoenaed to come here as a witness, has any paper been read to you since you came here to appear and testify?—A. No, sir; no paper was read to me out in the country.

Q. Have you been required by any officer since you came here to attend and testify before this committee, or any paper read to you?—A. No, sir; no one didn't ask me that, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. You knew that George Sass had selected you to make a republican speech?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew that when you took the stand?—A. I knowed that.

Q. And you didn't mean to make it when you took the stand?—A. No, sir.

Q. And you did not tell Sass that you were not going to make it?—A. No, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. You did not tell him what sort of a speech you were going to make?—A. No, sir; I didn't tell him what sort of a speech I was going to make.

MOSES BROWN (colored) sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Question. Where do you live?—Answer. Farm plantation on Cooper River, sir.

Q. In this county?—A. Yes, sir; Goose Creek, sir.

Q. How long have you lived in this county?—A. I were raised and born in this county.

Q. How old are you now?—A. Twenty-six. I think that is my age, sir.

Q. What precinct were you at on the day of the election?—A. On the day of the election I were at Strawberry precinct, sir.

Q. Do you live in that precinct?—A. Yes, sir; I lives on the same district with Strawberry.

Q. What time in the morning did you go there to the voting-place?—A. I gets there, sir, at 11 o'clock that day, sir.

Q. What ticket did you intend to vote when you went there?—A. My aim was to vote the Hampton ticket.

Q. State what occurred after you got to the precinct. Did you attempt to vote immediately upon getting there?—A. I votes immediately after I gets there. I did not vote the Hampton ticket.

Q. How many people were there at the polls when you got there?—A. I could not remember them, sir. There was a great quantity. The whole place was covered with mens.

Q. Colored men, or white men?—A. Colored mens and white mens, sir.

Q. Were there many white men there?—A. Not as many as the colored mens, sir. There be a good deal less.

Q. Were there any parties there with arms or guns, or clubs?—A. Yes, sir; the party had guns.

Q. How many white men were there, do you think?—A. I could not exactly tell you how many white mens were there, sir; but there be a good many.

Q. Were there more colored men than white men?—A. Yes, sir; there be more colored mens, as far as I knowed.

Q. When you got there did any one say anything to you about your vote?—A. Not right there at the ferry, sir.

Q. Where was anything said to you about your vote?—A. Just before the vote, sir—some week or two before the vote.

Q. State all that was said to you about it.—A. About a week or two before the vote I had an idea to vote for Hampton, just by saying so. There be threats made if I did so and so.

Q. Who made threats?—A. At the first starting of it they had a meeting at Strawberry Forks. A colored man by the name of George Sass, he made the first pretend, that if any mans vote the democrat ticket what ought to be done with him. He say they must not leave home that day to go down and vote, because they had mens to horsewhip me, and to do a great many things with me, and they got me kind of so well scared that I did not vote at all. Just from the item of that, and what they would have done, they scared me out altogether. If it was not for that I would have voted the Hampton ticket. I could not remember the name of all. There was a meeting, and most every man had something to say about it, and they had me so scared about it; so I did not vote the democrat ticket at all.

Q. You voted the republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You would have voted the democratic ticket but for these threats that were made by these colored men.

(Mr. Lapham objects to the question, as asking for a conclusion which it is not competent for the witness to answer.)

A. That is the reason I didn't vote it, sir.

Q. How long did you stay at the polls that day?—A. Just as quick as I gets up there and casts a vote, and after I done casting the vote I leaves on the ferry.

Q. You were ferried across the river home?—A. Yes, sir; Strawberry Ferry.

Q. Were the colored men talking around the polls when you voted?—A. Yes, sir; just as thick as can be around the poll. But, at the same time, sir, they got mens not to come up exactly to the box as you come up; they allow one at the box at a time.

Q. They were in line?—A. Yes, sir; not in a rush. When two or three comes up to ote, they allows one to come in at a time.

Q. Who all were around the polls?—A. There is one man there I knows—Stephen Brown, a republican man, and this same man George Sass, and he was right at the poll there, but the rest of the gentlemen I am not acquainted with.

Q. What were they doing there at the polls?—A. They was standing there and handing the republican parties republican tickets, and showed you where to put them.

Q. Did any of these colored men there have clubs?—A. No, sir; not as I sees; no clubs at all there that day. As I first tells you, each party had arms with them.

Q. Speaking about each party having guns, did the white men have guns in their hands, or did you see them somewhere?—A. They did not have guns in their hands at all, sir.

Q. Where did you see them?—A. All the guns was in the buggies, sir; while the buggy was setting off aside, the gun was in the buggy.

Q. How many guns did you see these white men have?—A. I do not know, sir. They was always in the buggy; all I sees of the guns is in the buggy; only one buggy I sees at all with the guns in it.

Q. How many guns do you think were in that buggy?—A. From the distance I looked at it I think there be some twelve or a little over.

Q. How many guns did you see the colored men have?—A. Well, they had the most guns, as far as I see. There be a gate come right up to the poll, and as they come to the gate they lean the guns up against the gate and went up to the poll without the gun; but it was somewhere over twenty-five as was leaning up against there.

Q. After voting did they come back and get the guns?—A. Yes, sir; they comes back and takes up the guns.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. Who do you work for?—A. Mr. Nelson, sir.

Q. When did you come here?—A. To-morrow is three days since I be in here.

Q. Who told you to come here as a witness?—A. Mr. Nelson, sir.

Q. When?—A. On Tuesday, sir; day before yesterday was Tuesday, wasn't it?

Q. Did you come with Mr. Nelson?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he pay your fare?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he pay Tony Scott's fare, too?—A. Yes, sir; he brought us both.

Q. Did you vote before this year?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What ticket did you vote ?—A. The republican, sir.

Q. You intended to vote the republican ticket this year, except for Hampton, did you not ?—A. My idea this year be to vote the Hampton ticket.

Q. For Hayes and Wheeler and Hampton ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You voted what was called the Hampton ticket, not the democratic ticket ?—A. The same ticket as the ticket that is called the Hampton ticket.

Q. There was a ticket called the Hampton ticket ; were the electors on it for Hayes and Wheeler ?—A. The ticket I votes wa a democratic ticket ; that is the only ticket I votes.

Q. But you did vote the republican ticket as you always have ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Nelson state how you would get paid for coming here ?—A. Not as I knows about.

Q. Did he tell you you would be paid ?—A. Yes, sir ; he tells me I would be paid.

Q. He said you would be paid, but didn't state how ?—A. No, sir.

Q. Or how much ?—A. Three dollars a day, sir.

Q. He told you you would be paid $3 a day ?—A. Yes, sir ; $3 a day and 5 cents a mlie.

Q. How much does he pay you at home when you work for him ?—A. According to what I does.

Q. Generally what does he pay you ?—A. A dollar a day, and sometimes 75 cents, according to the work ; sometimes we does not work all day ; just according to the time.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. You did not come here to testify for the amount of pay you expected you should get ?

(Mr. Lapham renews his objection.)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is the evidence that you have given here controlled by the pay you expected to get, or did you come here to tell the truth about this matter ?—A. I come here to tell the truth about this matter.

Q. And this pay you expected to get was the witness's fee, was it not ?—A. Yes, sir. The committee adjourned to meet to-morrow (Friday, December 22) at 10 o'clock a. m.

CHARLESTON, S. C., December 22, 1876.

The committee met pursuant to adjournment.

JOHN C. PORCHER sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Question. What is your age ?—Answer. Twenty-nine.

Q. Where do you reside ?—A. Strawberry Ferry, Cooper River, Charleston County, S. C.

Q. How long have you resided there ?—A. Two years.

Q. How long have you resided in this county ?—A. Twenty-nine years.

Q. What precinct did you attend at the late election ?—A. Strawberry Ferry.

Q. Did you hold any official position ? and if so, state what it was.—A. I was one of the three managers.

Q. How many colored men were at that precinct on the day of the election, that you remember ?—A. I do not know as I can tell you the positive figures, but Mr. Chamberlain's majority was 360. They were all colored. There was about 135 colored votes cast for Mr. Hampton. He got 184 altogether.

Q. State how the election was conducted there that day.—A. Early in the morning everything went off very quietly, except that the rallyers tried to dictate to the managers what they should do ; and later in the day a company of armed men under the command of a captain—I don't remember his name ; I think his name is William Lawrence, but of that I am not certain—with a sword on, marched up to the polls. They halted and faced about.

Q. Were they mounted ?—A. No, sir ; afoot. They faced about, and with muskets in their hands, and voted with muskets in their hands. They were afterwards marched off again, some time later in the day.

Q. How far off did they go ?—A. That I cannot tell you. They came to the ferry, and crossed the river again.

Q. You were inside of the house, and did not see where they went ?—A. No, sir ; when they crossed the river, I could not see them after that.

Q. What time of day did they leave there ?—A. They left there about three o'clock. It was believed by us then that they went on to Mount Holly.

Q. State whether any parties were challenged there, and if so, what occurred.—A. I challenged several parties who I believed were voting under age, and proved afterward that they were voting under age; and a radical, a very noisome fellow, in the crowd said, "I will knock that fellow Porcher in the head with a club if he don't mind what he is doing."

Q. What was he; a colored man or a white man?—A. A colored man.

Q. How near was he to the poll when he made that statement?—A. About twenty feet.

Q. Did you cease to challenge after that?—A. No, sir; I went on challenging all those whom I believed to be voting under age.

Q. Did those parties you challenged vote, notwithstanding your challenge?—A. No, sir; my challenge was sustained by the other two managers; all sustained but two.

Q. Did you see a colored man there by the name of George Sass?—A. Yes, sir; he was there during the whole day.

Q. What was he doing?—A. He was what they called rallying round for the radical party. He was very noisy and intimidating toward the colored democrats. He was threatening all day a particular threat, which he said right behind me in my presence. It was that every colored man who voted the democratic ticket that day was a marked man. That they could go on voting the ticket, but he wanted every one to understand that they were all marked men.

Q. Was this declaration that all colored men who voted the democratic ticket were marked men made in a loud tone of voice, so that it could be heard around?—A. Every man on the ground could hear him.

Q. Did you attend any political meeting in that neighborhood preceding the election; and if so, where?—A. I did, at the same place, sir, several times.

Q. Did George Sass make a speech there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many were at that meeting?—A. There were several meetings at different times. There were different numbers. There were, I suppose, 700, the highest number that attended there on one occasion.

Q. Did you hear him make any threatening speech; and if so, at what meeting was it?—A. The first meeting we had he made threats; told the negroes that if Hampton was elected they would be put back into slavery, and that every colored man who voted the democratic ticket ought to be killed. Those threats were common with him. He was making them all the time. He also told them that the power was in their hands; that they could raise the rice-trunks by which we flow our lands down there, and could ruin the country. That they had it in their power and could control us, and there was no use of our trying to carry the election at all, because if we did we would have to suffer for it.

Q. How many were at that meeting?—A. At that meeting I suppose there were 200.

Q. Of that number what proportion were colored men?—A. About 150. That was a meeting, also, in which a colored man by the name of Tony Scott got up to make a speech, and after speaking for some time they found that he was divulging— Just before that, I may state, they started a strike on the river, which lasted two days. George Sass was the originator, ringleader of the strike.

Q. A strike on the plantations?—A. Yes, sir; the strike was for cutting rice. He induced the negroes to believe that we would deduct their wages.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Are you stating what you yourself know or what you heard?—A. What I heard him say, or what I know positively to be so. I am telling you what I know to be so; that is, what the hands told us.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did Sass make this statement at the meeting?—A. No, sir; he denied it, but it was proved on him there that he did say so.

Q. Was that the subject of discussion at that meeting?—A. Yes, sir; it was political first, and then it got onto that. This man Tony Scott, in making his speech, divulged some of their secrets, and Sass attempted to jerk him out of the wagon where he was speaking. Scott said in his speech the plan Sass had had for carrying out this strike. Sass and several of his adherents attempted to drag him out of the wagon. That was prevented by telling him that would never do, and we were obliged, whilst Tony Scott was in the wagon, to protect him if they meant to hurt him. They then stopped at a signal of a horn, which was blown by one of Sass's followers; they ran off on the other side of the road and drew up in line, apparently as if they intended to fight. They were armed with clubs and muskets. They were quieted, though, by some of the most influential citizens going in among them and persuading them that we did not intend to have any disturbance, and that quieted them and the meeting broke up. Tony Scott was not allowed to speak again, and Sass told Tony Scott, after coming back and being quieted, that he had better take care of himself; that he was a marked man.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. Did you hear that ?—A. Yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. The meeting then broke up ?—A. The meeting then broke up ; that is, it was a joint meeting, and it broke up. The republicans went on speaking. We left.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. The democrats left ?—A. Yes, sir ; and some of the republicans left. The majority of the meeting left.

Q. Were both parties armed at Strawberry on election-day ?—A. On election-day, as I said before, this company was armed, and nearly every colored man there was armed, on the republican side.

Q. That was not my question.—A. I was going on, sir, to finish it. The democrats were armed, but none of them carried arms. That is, not all of them were armed. About half of them were armed. The democratic arms, I did not see any. I was manager whilst holding the polls. I did not see a democrat with an arm in his hands. After the voting had slackened a little, I had occasion to walk off and get some lunch ; and a buggy, I suppose was fifty yards off from the polls, and there were several double-barreled guns in the buggy. Those were the only arms I saw there.

Q. Were you not armed ?—A. No, sir ; I was not. I had no pistol or gun.

Q. Were either of the managers ?—A. Not that I could see, sir.

Q. You staid until the canvass was completed ?—A. I staid until the canvass was completed, and brought the box to town.

Q. You were the messenger to bring it ?—A. No, sir ; I was not.

Q. But you did bring it ?—A. I did it.

Q. The managers all signed the return ?—A. The managers all signed the return.

Q. Any protest accompanying it ?—A. A protest accompanying it.

Q. In writing ?—A. In writing.

Q. Who signed it ?—A. By myself as manager, William F. Colcock, and others.

Q. The managers agreed as to the canvass of the votes ; there was no difference between you about that ?—A. Yes, sir ; they agreed as to the canvass. The protest was on other grounds.

Q. Was the protest made there ?—A. Yes, sir ; it was made there and read before the votes were counted.

Q. Do you remember the substance of the complaint ?—A. Of the protest, do you mean ?

Q. Yes.—A. I remember parts of it.

Q. What was the point of it ?—A. The first point was that the clerk in the morning was not sworn in. The next one was that several votes were put in the box and the parties sworn in afterward. Another point was that the polls were not opened at the usual hour ; that the democrats had been prevented from voting the democratic ticket, and had voted the republican ticket on account of the presence of an armed company.

Q. Any other grounds ?—A. I do not remember any other grounds now. I think there were one or two others.

Q. Who drew it ?—A. W. F. Colcock, president of the democratic club.

Q. President of the club at that precinct ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many colored men do you say voted the democratic ticket there ?—A. I said I could not remember exactly, but Mr. Chamberlain's majority was 360. I think there was 135 who voted the democratic ticket. I would not be positive as to the figures.

Q. They were persons who had before voted the republican ticket, were they not ?—A. I do not think any one of them hardly had ever voted the democratic ticket before. It was a poll where the republican majority was generally six or seven hundred.

Q. Was there a mixed ticket, as it was called, voted there—the Hayes and Wheeler electors, and Hampton for governor ?—A. No, sir ; they were all straight tickets. I do not think there was one mixed in them ; there was not a cut ticket.

Q. Do you know of any elector who came there for the purpose of voting who did not vote, without reference to whether he voted one ticket or the other ; do you know of any who did not exercise the right of suffrage ?—A. Yes, sir ; I know of two or three who did not come to the polls at all.

Q. I ask you if you know of any one who came there for the purpose of voting who did not vote in fact ?—A. No, sir ; they all voted that came.

Q. And the managers united with you in excluding those who were challenged as minors, excepting two of them, I think you said ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was claimed about these two ?—A. I challenged them because they were not of age.

Q. What did the other managers claim ?—A. They claimed they were of age.

Q. They swore they were of age ?—A. And voted ; yes, sir.

Q. Did you see any person injured there that day ?—A. No.

Q. At this meeting at Strawberry, how long before the election was that ?—A. That was, I think, sir, on the 31st of August. You mean the first meeting I spoke of ?

Q. The meeting at which this violence, of which you speak, occurred?—A. Yes, sir; the meeting on the 31st of August.

Q. Was that before the State ticket was nominated?—A. No, sir; afterward.

Q. Was that a republican meeting?—A. No, sir; that was a democratic meeting, to which we invited the republicans to participate.

Q. It was a joint meeting for discussion?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Sass represented the republicans?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who represented the democrats?—A. W. F. Colcock, jr.

Q. Don't you know that Tony Scott was selected by Sass, as a republican, to speak?—A. I never saw Tony Scott before that. I do not know anything about him.

Q. Did you not know that he was put forward by Sass as a republican speaker?—A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Did he not take the turn of a republican in the discussion?—A. No, sir; he came out as a democrat.

Q. Who spoke first?—A. W. F. Colcock, I think.

Q. He is a democrat?—A. He is a democrat.

Q. Who spoke next?—A. I think Sass was the next speaker.

Q. He spoke on the republican side?—A. I think so.

Q. Who spoke after Sass?—A. Well, sir, I am not able to tell you, sir. We had a good many canvassers there. Do you mean the order or the names? Every other speaker was a republican.

Q. A democrat spoke after Sass?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. But you don't remember his name?—A. I do not remember his name.

Q. Who followed him?—A. Another republican; I do not remember his name.

Q. Who spoke after that republican?—A. That I can't tell you, either.

Q. Was he a democrat?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who spoke after that democrat?—A. I think I may be mistaken. If you will allow me to correct my former statement —

Q. Who spoke after this democrat you have mentioned?—A. You asked me the question just now whether Tony Scott started out as a republican or not, and I told you I didn't know him before that day. I was not even near him when he started to speak. Now I do remember that some one told me he was a republican before.

Q. That is not the question I asked you. I asked you whether he did not take the stand there in his turn in the line of discussion as a republican speaker?—A. I cannot tell you that, at all, because I was not near the stand when he started to speak. I can only tell you what occurred when they attempted to pull him off the stand. I would not be willing to state it, because I was not near the stand when he started to speak. Whether he was before that day a republican or a democrat, I do not know.

Q. The result was, that from something Scott said the joint meeting broke up; the democrats retired, and the republicans continued the meeting?—A. The joint meeting was not broken up when Scott came down.

Q. But that was the result of the disturbance?—A. Yes, sir; but not the immediate disturbance.

Q. After that disturbance the democrats went away, and the republicans continued the meeting?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You went away, I suppose?—A. I went away; yes, sir.

Q. Do you know how long they continued it?—A. I do not.

Q. Were not the democrats there armed that day?—A. No, sir.

Q. Are you sure of that?—A. I state it as a fact.

Q. None of them armed, you say?—A. None of them armed. I did not see a man there armed; not a democrat.

Q. You had no arms?—A. None, sir.

Q. How many muskets did you see?—A. As I have said before, I suppose there were 150 republicans. I think half of them were armed with muskets and the other half with clubs.

Q. Where had they these muskets?—A. In their hands.

Q. During the meeting?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You joined in the meeting without any apprehension from their having their muskets with them?—A. We had no apprehensions at all until after that meeting.

Q. On election day, when Sass said if you challenged any more you would get hit, or something like that, you paid no attention to it?—A. I did not state that Sass did it. It was a man in the crowd. No, sir; I paid no attention to it; I kept on challenging.

JOHN JOHNSTON (colored) sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Question. Where do you live?—Answer. Up at Dr. Holbeck's farm, this county.

Q. What poll did you attend on the day of the late election?—A. Four-Mile House, sir.

Q. Did you vote there on that day?—A. Yes, sir; I votes right there, sir, that day.

Q. What time of day did you vote?—A. About nine o'clock, sir.

Q. What ticket did you vote, the democratic or republican?—A. He gave me a democratic ticket, sir.

Q. Did you have any trouble in voting? and if so, state what, if anything, was said to you.—A. No, sir; I never had any trouble at all, but after I got over voting I had a heap of trouble.

Q. About how many colored men were there that day?—A. I do not know how much was there, sir. I know I was.

Q. I mean how many colored men were there at that poll that day; were there many colored men there?—A. Yes, sir; a hundred or so, but I never take notice who all was there.

Q. Were there as many colored men as white men there that day, or more?—A. They had more colored men than white men there, sir.

Q. Did any colored men say anything to you there that day about your voting?—A. No, sir; they never says nothing to me when I were voting. They never took notice to me, but after I gets through voting I goes up the road one night—

Q. When was it you went up the road?—A. One Saturday night. I could not remember the Saturday night now, sir; about two weeks ago.

Q. How long after the election?—A. About a month.

Q. Did the colored men find out how you had voted?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did they learn it?—A. I do not know how they got it, sir, but they learn I vote for the democrats and all says I ought not to do it.

Mr. LAPHAM objects to the witness stating transactions that occurred a month after the election, as incompetent and improper.

The CHAIRMAN. We propose to show by this witness that he was interfered with and beaten for voting the democratic ticket.

Q. Who said you ought not to do it?—A. A feller by the name of Albert Grannison.

Q. Who was this man Grannison?—A. He staid there mostly at Four-Mile House.

Q. Where did he live; in this precinct where you voted?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he there on the day of the election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Proceed and state what occurred; what was done with you, if anything?—A. He beat me on the arm.

Q. Who was it that beat you?—A. A feller named Sampson.

Q. Who was with him?—A. This same Albert Grannison and a feller named Frederick Snyder.

Q. Where was it that they beat you?—A. Six-Mile House, sir. They say if they catch me they would beat me, and all three of them jumped on me.

Q. What did they beat you about?—A. Because I vote for a democrat, they says. All three jumped on me.

Q. Was it in the day-time or in the night?—A. Night, sir.

Q. What did they beat you with?—A. Sampson beat me with a club, and when I was going—when I tries to get away from Sampson the rest hold me back. Then Sampson hits me in the head with a club.

Q. Where did they strike you on the arm?—A. Here, sir. [Indicating the left wrist.] It is not well yet.

Q. Did they break your arm?—A. I don't know, sir; I cannot use it much now.

Q. Is there a knot there now?—A. Yes, sir; there is a knot here.

Q. Where did they hit you on the head?—A. See this knot up here. [Witness indicates the middle of his forehead.]

Q. Is that knot there yet?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they knock you down?—A. No, sir; they never knocks me down. They knock me twice. The three licks they make, two licks hit me on the head and one lick on the arm, and when he raised up the stick again I catched the stick, and then two boys behind me pitched me back, and then Jacob Bogy came up and parted us.

Q. Did any doctor wait on you afterward?—A. No, sir; I never had no doctor at all.

Q. Did the doctor examine your wounds?—A. Yes, sir; Dr. Holbeck, I was working with, examined them, and say I may bathe them in cold water.

Q. Is that arm stiff yet?—A. Yes, sir; see the knot here.

Q. Were all three of those men who were engaged in beating you at this poll that day?—A. I could not tell, sir, then, because they never says nothing to me then till I went up the road; and this Sampson, he cursed me for a son of a bitch, and say he mean to beat me because I vote the democrat ticket; and I say I would do as I choose, and at the same time he hits me twice, and at the third time I grabbed the stick; and another feller came behind me—Frederick Snyder; he went and come and took hold of me, and Sampson and all together carried me off, and said I was a son of a bitch; and old man Jacob Bogy, he came out and parted us.

Q. Where did you go then?—A. I went home to Dr. Holbeck's farm then, sir.

Q. How far were you from home then?—A. About a mile.

Q. Did these men beat you in the road or overtake you, or how? Did you meet them in the road or at some place?—A. They meet me at a place; they never caught me in the road.

Q. What meeting was it you were at when you met them?—A. I meets them at old Jacob Bogy's house.

Q. What did you go there for?—A. A whole crowd of people was there that night, and I goes too, and at the same time they meets me there.

Q. Was it a party?—A. No, sir.

Q. What was it?—A. A setting-up, as they calls it.

Q. What do you call a "setting-up"?—A. I do not know, sir. A whole crowd meets on Saturday night—the colored mens and womens, and all.

Q. The colored men and women met at this place Saturday night, and had what is called a "setting-up"?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How late did they stay?—A. I was there about eleven o'clock.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. When was this setting-up at Bogy's?—A. About three Saturdays ago; this same Saturday coming will make four.

Q. About three weeks last Saturday?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you been in the house?—A. Yes, sir; I were in the house, and then comes outdoors.

Q. What did the people there that night do?—A. They had a setting-up.

Q. When they sit up do they have anything to eat or drink?—A. No, sir; they don't have nothing to eat or drink.

Q. Hungry and dry, were you?—A. Yes, sir; poor people, you know.

Q. Did you strike?—A. No, sir; I didn't strike at all; didn't have time.

Q. Who did you say struck you?—A. Sampson.

Q. How old a person is he?—A. I could not tell how old he is, sir; a good aged feller, sir.

Q. A colored man, is he?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were the other two colored men also?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Bogy was a colored man, too, was he?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. He came out and parted you?—A. I didn't know much about it, sir.

Q. You have stated that Bogy came out and parted you.—A. Jacob Bogy, he came out and parted me.

Q. Is he a republican?—A. I do not know what he is, sir; he must be a republican.

Q. Why?—A. Because he gets a republican paper that morning, and go off and vote it, sir.

Q. You think Mr. Bogy must be a republican, then?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How is it with Sampson?—A. Yes, sir; Sampson is a republican, too.

Q. Did you ever vote before?—A. Yes, sir; I vote one year for Green.

Q. You used to vote the republican ticket, did you not?—A. No, sir; nary time. Never vote a republican ticket, nary time.

Q. You are a birthright democrat, are you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is your father a democrat?—A. I really could not tell, sir.

Q. Were you a slave?—A. My father was a slave, but I never. I was too small then to do anything.

Q. Who do you work for?—A. Dr. Holbeck, I am working for now, sir.

Q. Who told you to come here as a witness?—A. Dr. Holbeck; he say I must come with him.

Q. Did he come with you?—A. Yes, sir; he has gone on home; say he will be back directly.

Q. Did he pay your fare here?—A. No, sir; he never paid my fare. I walk.

Q. Did he walk, too?—A. No, sir; he stay in the city here.

Q. When you came from home here, how did you come?—A. I comes this morning, dragging the cart.

Q. You drove here in a cart?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far?—A. He stay at the corner of Wentworth and Cumming.

Q. Did he tell you what you would be paid if you came?—A. No, sir; he never tells me.

Q. You expected pay, did you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much did you expect to get?—A. I really could not tell, sir.

JOHN PINCKNEY (colored) sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Question. What is your age?—Answer. Thirty-five, sir.

Q. Where do you live?—A. Saint John's, Berkley, Point Comfort, this county.

Q. Where did you vote on the day of the late election?—A. Strawberry Ferry, sir.

Q. How long have you lived at Strawberry precinct?—A. I have been living there now since I lived there. It was six years since I have been living there.

Q. Did you attend any meetings of the colored people just before the election?—A. No, sir; I did not. I did not attend but one meeting.

Q. Where was that?—A. That was at Strawberry precinct, sir.

Q. The last meeting at Strawberry precinct?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that; how long before the election?—A. The meeting was on Saturday, sir, and the election was on Tuesday.

Q. Then it was on the Saturday before the election that you attended the meeting at Strawberry?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State whether you heard any persons in that neighborhood make any threats against colored men if they voted the democratic ticket; and, if so, who made them, and where they were made.—A. A man right on the place there, by the name of Edward Drayton, he said what he would do, sir, but he didn't do it.

Q. What did he say they would do to any man who voted the democratic ticket?—A. Any man who vote the democrat ticket at that poll that day they would get killed if they vote it; but I know from my own feeling that could not be done, for a man is free and independent, and he ought to be what he think.

Q. How many colored men were around when this statement was made, that any colored man who voted the democratic ticket would be killed?—A. Why, there was a quantity of people, sir; we was all in a large crowd.

Q. Did you hear that sort of talk more than once?—A. More than a dozen of times, sir.

Q. Did they say anything to you at the polls at Strawberry, on the morning you voted?—A. No, sir; no more than two mens, republicans, catched at me and says, "Vote this ticket," and I says, "Keep your hands off of me; I intend to vote the democrat ticket for my own notion, and I am going through with it."

Q. What did they say to you when you said that to them?—A. They said it was a wrong thing you are going to do, but you will meet it after you have done it. And I says, "I want to meet it; I am man enough to tote my own hook."

Q. How many were around when that talk took place?—A. The box was covered, sir; it was more than I could tell you, sir. There was a rush.

Q. How long did you stay at the poll?—A. I think about fifteen minutes, sir. I got in my ticket and got back to my work. I stayed there at first because I could not get a chance to get up to the box.

Q. Do you know of any colored men that voted the republican ticket there that day who had intended to vote the democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many?—A. Daniel Johnston, where I stays, was intended to vote the democrat ticket by his own word, but he could not do it; he stood with the republican party because they had threatened him.

Q. How many did you hear say that—any one else besides Daniel Johnston?—A. I heard Daniel Johnston and Thomas Brown.

Q. Do you know whether they voted or not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did they vote?—A. At Strawberry; we all votes at one place. Those men you heard me talk about all vote at one place.

Q. Did you see them vote the republican ticket?—A. I did not saw them vote, but Daniel Johnston he said he make the republican party believe he vote the republican ticket, and get the ticket and show it; and they were drilling soldier-like, and he had to get his ticket to make them believe he is a republican.

Q. He had to get his ticket from these parties that were drilling with guns, who saw him put it in the box?—A. Yes, sir; but I was not there present; I leave then.

(Mr. Lapham objects to the witness stating what he heard.)

Q. Where did he tell you that?—A. He tells me that after he gets back home on that day.

Q. Why did he say he voted that republican ticket?—A. A great many more people would have voted the democrat ticket, but they were threatened.

Q. Do you know how many colored men were at the polls there that day?—A. No, sir; I do not know, sir.

Q. You voted about nine o'clock in the morning and left?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. You do not know whether Johnston or Brown voted at all; you did not see them vote, did you?—A. No, sir; I did not stay to see them vote.

Q. You do not know what ticket they voted, either?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see them at the polls at all?—A. Yes, sir; I see them at the polls.

Q. Were they there when you went to vote?—A. Yes, sir; we went on together, sir.

Q. You left them there?—A. Yes, sir; I left them there.

Q. Did you not hear anything said about colored democrats who voted the republican ticket?—A. All I hear said, sir, when I come in—they all laughed at me and say, "That's a democrat."

Q. Did you hear anything said what ought to be done with colored men who voted the republican ticket?—A. No, sir.

Q. Colored men were not blamed, then, for voting the republican ticket?—A. O, no, sir.

Q. Did not the democratic colored men complain of them?—A. No, sir; they did not have anything to do with them. They was all peace.

Q. What they complained of was the colored men voting against the republican party; that is what they were scolding about, was it not?—A. No, sir; the colored men what vote the democrat ticket had nothing to do with the republican party.

MARCH BALL (colored) sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Question. What is your age?—Answer. I is about forty-two, sir.

Q. Where do you live?—A. St. John's Berkley.

Q. What is your polling-place; what church?—A. My pollug-place, where I always vote to, it was Biggins' poll, sir.

Q. Where did you vote on the day of the late election?—A. Well, I vote up at Pineopolis on the day of the election.

Q. Is that as near to you as Biggins'?—A. Pineopolis is a little nearer than Biggins'.

Q. How came you to go out of your precinct, to Pineopolis, to vote, instead of at Biggins'?—A. I went there on one occasion. I feel exposed to vote the democratic ticket, and it appeared to be so much threatening amongst the radical party against all those who vote the democrat ticket that day to injure them, I thought I was going to try to take care of myself not to be injured, and so I vote the way my mind lead me to vote, and I went to Pineopolis just to get rid of the crowd, not to be injured.

Q. What made you believe that you would be injured if you went to Biggins'?—A. Just from the entire threatening amongst the colored people around my neighborhood. I did not keep it as a hiding history. I tell them I feel exposed to vote the democrat ticket, and I was going to do it square out. And they says, "Well, I vote square against;" and I say, "My mind would not be so foolish." I feel that I am a free citizen of this country, and I have a right to support just what government I think will make me an honest government.

Q. What threats, if any, did they make against any colored man who voted the democratic ticket?—A. They made the threat that they would mob them and every man that voted the democrat ticket that day; they would mob him; and after I heard it, I was compelled to try to take care of myself.

Q. Where did you hear that, and how long was it before the election?—A. I heard that about up to the night ———, up until Monday night, up to the vote on Tuesday I heard it.

Q. Where did you hear that on Monday night?—A. I heard that at Oak Hill, where I staid, about half a mile off from where I stay, because some of the boys what were living near me say they feel exposed to support the democrat party; there was five of them. I knowed one of them in the crowd, and they comes up and called the boys out, and tells the boys they was fools to vote with me. I advised the boys to vote with me, and I says, "I am of age; I am forty-two years of age; I have a right to vote where I please, and I feel exposed to support the democrat party, and I don't feel any way like supporting the radical party at all."

Q. State what they said to you and to these boys if you voted the democratic ticket.—A. They told the boys if they vote the democrat ticket they would not recognize them again, and could not come amongst them, and if any place they meet them they would whip them. I said, "I am not going to go into a crowd and give them any chance to catch me to whip me." I told the boys that was foolishness, and that we would go up to Pineopolis, and we cast our votes the way our mind lead us; and so we went there and voted, and came back.

Q. Do you know a colored man named Gibby Simmons?—A. I know a colored man named Gibby Simone.

Q. Did you ever hear any threats against him?—A. Yes, sir; that I hear. I hear that he had a notion to support — (Mr. Lapham objects to witness stating what he heard.)

Q. Did you yourself hear this man Gibby Simmons say he wanted to vote the democratic ticket, or did somebody else tell you?—A. I heard it. I didn't hear it from Gibby Simmons himself.

Q. Do you know how he did vote on the day of election?—A. He went to the poll to vote the radical ticket. I know he went with the intention to vote the radical ticket, but I did not go to that poll at all.

Q. You did not see him vote?—A. I did not see him vote at all.

Q. Where is he now?—A. He is in the country.

Q. Whereabouts?—A. Right there near; pretty much on the line of Goose Creek and St. John's Berkley.

Q. What place is he at?—A. Near Monk's Corner.

Q. On whose plantation?—A. Mr. Sinclair White's.

Q. Is there a colored club in your neighborhood?—A. Yes, sir; a colored club right at Oak Hill.

Q. Were you at the meeting of the colored club the night before the election?—A. Yes, sir; I went up there myself the night before the election. They all meet to tell the club what to do on the day of election.

Q. How many were at that club-meeting?—A. Well, I think there was about twenty meet there in the club, sir.

Q. What occurred at that club-meeting; was anything said about the election at that meeting, or about voting?—A. They meet there and go on in making speeches amongst them, and tell them what side they thought best to vote for, and so on; and on Monday night, on the 26th of the month, they met there, and then they commenced to tell the club what to do. Well, they concluded whether they was to carry their arms up to the poll or not, and they says they was obliged to carry arms, because they heard that the democrat party was going to carry their arms. I told them no, the democrat party were not going to carry their arms. If they carry them at all, they will carry them along in the buggy, and so on;—because the law is not to carry no arms at all after the 7th of the month, and I told them not to carry arms, because they might make themselves liable to the law; but they concluded to carry the arms. They said they did not trust to go without the arms. They speak in that way.

Q. Did they say anything about colored men, if they voted the democratic ticket—what they would do with them?—A. They said, if any colored man they knew, if he vote the democrat ticket, they consider that he voted against them; but that club says that they would not make no arrangement among them to do no injury to no colored man that vote the democrat ticket; but they considered that they would not have no good feeling toward them. That is what I heard.

Q. That was at the meeting of the club on the 26th?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you at the club-meeting the night before the election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was said, if anything about the colored men who voted the democratic ticket?—Q. They says this then, "They would not have anything to do with none of the colored men who vote the democrat ticket." But they says they hear the Monk's Corner party say any man who vote the democrat ticket, they was going to show them what it is on the day of the election. After I heard that I always vote at Biggin's poll; but if that's the way I was not going there at all. I am going to the poll what I consider to be a peaceful poll, without any riot; and I tell them boys, I says, "I have heard them say that they want peace at the election; because some colored men feel exposed to vote the democrat ticket, and they say to the others to do it, and they says to their club they are going there to see that all are free citizens of this State; and we have a right to vote where our mind leads us to vote; and they was going to see if any one exposed to vote the democrat ticket, that if any one of the radical party disturbed them they was not going to be disturbed in it."

Q. You told them that?—Yes, sir, myself; I tells them to try to be peaceful, because the democrat party wanted everything to go off peaceful, and they didn't want any fuss at all.

Q. Do you know of any colored men there, in your neighborhood, who did not go to the poll at all that day?—A. One man, Sam Bush; he said he didn't vote at all.

Mr. Lapham objects to witness stating what he heard.

Q. Did he go to the election?—A. No, sir; he didn't went at all.

Q. How was he inclined to vote?—A. He says he had a idea to vote the democrat ticket, and he was afraid to go to Biggin's. He was afraid he would get injure l.

Q. And he didn't go at all?—A. So he didn't go at all. He says he didn't vote.

Mr. Lapham renews his objection.

Q. That was before the election that you had this talk?—A. Yes, sir; before the election.

Q. Did any colored men in that neighborhood belong to democratic clubs in connection with white men. Was there a club in your neighborhood?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Composed of white men and colored men?—A. Yes, sir; they opened the doors and said, all that feel exposed to vote the democrat ticket. I was one that joined it, and another man joined it.

Q. How many colored men were in the club, if you know?—A. There was three colored men; one was a brown man; I call him a colored man. Three or four jined.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. When was this meeting, when they thought they had better take their arms because the democrats would have their arms there?—A. That was on the 6th of the month. We was to vote on the 7th, and that was on the 6th, evening.

Q. It was the evening before the election?—Yes, sir.

Q. They were talking about whether to take their arms, and they said that the white men would have their arms there, and they thought they had better take theirs also?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You heard that?—A. Yes, sir; I heard that.

Q. How came you to go to the republican club if you belonged to the other?—A. Our club didn't call on that evening. I didn't belong to that club. We generally gave an invitation that each club could visit each other.

Q. Could the white men visit that club?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were they armed at that time?—A. No, sir.

Q. Who said that the white men were to have arms?—A. That was the men that meet at the club.

Q. Who said that?—A. Toby Gadson. He said the white men would have arms.

Q. And for that reason he advised the colored men to take their arms along?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you say you voted?—A. I vote at Pineopolis polls.

Q. You didn't keep your voting a secret. Did it make any difference whether you voted there or at Biggin's?—A. Yes, sir; I would have voted the democrat ticket at Biggin's if I had not heard these threatenings, what they was going to do with the democrat party, so I went up to Pineopolis for quietness.

Q. How long did you stay there?—A. I did not stay there no more than just went up and cast my vote, and came back home and went to work.

Q. It is known that you voted the democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have never made any secret of it?—A. Never did make any secret of it.

Q. They knew you were going to vote that ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. They knew you belonged to the democratic club?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who do you work for?—A. I works for myself.

Q. Do you hire land?—A. I rents land.

Q. Whose land do you rent?—A. Dr. Porcher—doctor in the hospital here in Charleston.

Q. Who told you to come here as a witness?—A. Mr. Porcher told me that what I know—I could come in and give it in.

Q. Dr. Porcher told you to come?—A. No, sir; John Porcher.

Q. When did he tell you?—A. He told me yesterday.

Q. When did you come?—A. I comes in yesterday.

Q. Did he tell you what pay you would get for coming?—A. Yes, sir; he tells me what I would get.

Q. What did he tell you you would get?—A. $3.00 a day, and five cents a mile for travel.

Q. You were not subpoenaed to come here, were you?—A. No; I didn't summons down here.

Q. How have you voted heretofore?—A. I vote the independent republican ticket.

Q. You have voted a good many years, have you not?—A. Yes, sir; I votes since I was free up to now.

Q. Always voted that ticket?—A. No, sir; I never voted that ticket before.

Q. What ticket did you vote before?—A. I vote the radical ticket.

Q. You voted the independent republican ticket this year?—A. I vote that ticket year before last.

Q. Before that you voted the republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. EDEN:

Q. Didn't the officer read the subpoena to you at any time?—A. Yes, sir; since I comes here.

By the Chairman.

Q. When that club spoke of taking their arms there, you told them that the democrats were not going to take arms there, did you not?—A. Yes, sir; I told them so.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. You know that the democrats did take their arms, do you not?—A. I was not there at all.

Q. Did they have arms at the polls where you went?—A. No, sir; not at Pineopolis polls, sir.

Q. Neither party had arms there?—A. Neither party, sir, had arms there.

Q. There were not any republicans at Pineopolis?—A. One, sir.

Q. A colored man or a white man?—A. A colored man.

Q. How old a man was he?—A. I think about thirty-five years old, sir.

ANTHONY GATHERS (colored) sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Question. How old are you?—Answer. About twenty-nine.

Q. Where do you live?—A. I live at Strawberry station.

Q. How long have you lived there?—A. I have been living there a good while; I have been living there about twenty years.

Q. Where did you vote on the day of the late election?—A. I voted at Strawberry poll.

Q. Did you attend any political meeting at any place just before the election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where?—A. At Strawberry poll.

Q. Did you have any trouble there? and, if so, state what it was.—A. I had a little difficulty a week before the election.

Q. Where was that?—A. That was at Strawberry.

Q. How did it come about? Tell all about it.—A. I had a difficulty between me and a man named George Sass. He asked me if I was going to vote the democratic ticket, and I told him yes. He said I must show him the reason, and I told him because it was my idea to vote the democratic ticket. He asked me if I did not think that was a bad ticket to vote. I told him if it was a bad ticket, I was going to vote it. The next day after that, when I came from Charleston from the parade, he made a speech on a Saturday, and asked me a question. He asked me the question, and I answered it; and he said, "Did the democrats promise to lock us up in the hall, and then, on the voting day, drive us out like a man driving cattle to the market to kill?" I said it was not so, and he got mad; and he jumped off the stand, and he told me to leave the crowd. I told him I would not, because it was a public ground, and he collared me; and when he collared me, the parties that was there, about 125—and if there had not been some good ones there, they would have mobbed me to death. And his son hit me in the temple with his hand, and another fellow lifted me up on a stick. A fellow named Friday Bellock lifted me up on the stick. The crowd was so big.

Q. How often did they strike you?—A. His son struck me about two weeks, and Robert Days and Billy Days they came up and make peace, and Bob Robinson.

Q. Did you leave then?—A. No, sir; I did not leave until the meeting resigned, and when they was done they asked me why I was going to vote the democratic ticket, and I told them I was going to vote for John T. Green, and I think I have a right to vote what I choose, and I would vote for Hampton; and I see him twice, and I will vote for Hampton if he never get elected, and I done so. I tell them after we try Mr. Chamberlain two years it was my idea to vote for Hampton and try him two years, and if he was not a good governor we could defeat him again.

Q. What did they say they would do to you if you voted the democratic ticket?—A. They told me if I voted—any one who vote the democrat ticket could not walk there; they would kill them, or something like that; and I said, "I know you can kill me. I have but one life. I will vote where I choose; and if you kill me, kill me."

Q. How many colored men were around when that statement was made?—A. About 125.

Q. This row that you had with Sass and his son, when was that?—A. That was a week before the election.

Q. Do you know what day in the week it was?—A. I cannot remember it now, sir; but I know it was a week before the election.

Q. Did you hear the colored men in your neighborhood say anything about colored men voting the democratic ticket; what they would do with them if they did?—A. No, sir. I know that Daniel Johnston and Johnny Brown and Tremmies Brown, they was to vote the democratic ticket. The way that Sass speak, that if any man vote the democratic ticket they would get damaged; they would not vote the democratic ticket at all.

Q. They heard Sass make that threat?—A. Yes, sir; and they would not vote at all. When the soldiers leave there and come back he be afraid they might take his life.

Q. Did you see him at the polls on the day of the election?—A. O, yes, sir; we all went down together.

Q. How did they vote when they got to the polls?—A. They voted the republican ticket straight through; and Sass he would walk up to them and tell them, "Where is your ticket?"

Q. They said they would vote the democratic ticket if they were not afraid they would kill them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know of any other colored man who said that?—A. A colored man named Jacob—I do not know his other name—but he wouldn't go to the poll at all. He didn't vote at all.

(Mr. Lapham objected to witness stating what others told him.)

Q. Was there any one else besides Jacob?—A. That is my remembrance, sir.

Q. Do you know Jefferson Bennett?—A. Yes, sir; he didn't go to the poll at all. He say he would not go. He said rather than get into any furs he wouldn't go at all.

Q. What ticket did he intend to vote?—A. He had an idea to vote the democrat ticket. He wouldn't go at all; nor Jacob. They stay on the place that day. Daniel Johnson and they say, had they known that the poll had gone on as peaceful as it did they would have vote the democrat ticket, and I said it was too late now.

Q. Were the colored men in your neighborhood there generally armed before the election?—A. O, yes, sir; generally armed; generally carried their arms to the meeting they were going to.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Did the white men have arms too?—A. I did not see the white men with arms, but a few.

Q. I mean, did the white people have arms?—A. O, yes, sir; they had guns, but they didn't march up like the colored people to the polls with their guns.

Q. Do you keep any?—A. No, sir; I never had any.

Q. Don't own any?—A. No, sir; I don't tote no gun.

Q. You only voted once, did you?—A. O, yes, sir; only once I voted.

Q. On the election-day, I mean?—A. Yes, sir; only once.

Q. What ticket did you vote?—A. The democratic ticket.

Q. The full ticket?—A. Yes, sir; full out.

Q. Who gave it to you?—A. Johnny Harvey.

Q. Is he a white man?—A. Yes, sir; he is a white man.

Q. Where did he give it to you?—A. Right at the box.

Q. Colored people were there too, were they not?—A. O, yes, sir; it was crowded with people.

Q. They saw you take the ticket from him, didn't they?—A. O, yes; they see me take the ticket.

Q. Who told you to come here as a witness?—A. Mr. Hayward.

Q. Who is he?—A. Mr. Hayward has got a plantation on Cooper River.

Q. Do you work for him?—A. Yes, sir; when he has got work I work for him.

Q. Did he tell you you would get pay?—A. He told me to come down; they wanted me as a witness to know how this election go on, and I could make my statement, and get my board and passage free, and get paid for my day.

Q. How did you come?—A. I came on the car, sir.

Q. Who paid your fare?—A. Mr. Barker paid my fare down.

Q. Who is he?—A. I don't know who is him, but he stay up on Cooper River. We come down on the car, and he paid my way down.

Q. Is he a white man?—A. He is a white man.

Q. Where does he live?—A. He stays in town now. His father has a plantation up there—Dr. Barker's son.

Q. You do not work for Mr. Barker, do you?—A. No.

Q. Mr. Barker came along with you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you come?—A. To-day will make three days I was here, sir.

ADAM REED (colored) sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Question. Where do you live?—Answer. I vote at Strawberry precinct.

Q. Where did you vote on the day of the late election?—A. Strawberry, sir.

Q. Did anybody go to the election with you on that day; and, if so, state who they were?—A. Yes, sir; myself, John Gilliard, Andrew Segare, Solomon Davis, and Thomas Benton; that was four.

Q. How did these men intend to vote?—A. John Gilliard he was going to vote the democrat ticket like myself.

Q. How were the others going to vote?—A. They intend to vote the democrat ticket the same as we vote, but after we went down we found they was afraid, and I said whatever I intend to do I mean it.

Q. After they got to the polls what was said to them?—A. They said if they vote that ticket they would shoot them, and they gets afraid and went and vote the republican ticket.

Q. How did you vote?—A. I vote the straight-out democrat ticket.

Q. George Sass, is he a colored man?—A. Yes, sir; George Sass he is a colored man.

Q. Who handed them tickets?—A. George Sass handed them.

Q. How long did you stay at the polls?—A. I was there till sunset. The sun was down when they went to count off the ticket, when I went home.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. You were not afraid?—A. No, sir; and I mean that, sir.

Q. Who did you get your ticket from?—A. I get them from Mr. Colcock.

Q. A white man?—A. Yes, sir,

Q. Did Sass offer one to you?—A. No, sir; he didn't offer me none, because I would not took it.

Q. Did you see him give tickets to the others?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. They had always been republicans, had they not?—A. Yes, sir; always been republicans.

Q. Had you been a republican before this?—A. Yes, sir; I was a republican before this election.

Q. How long this year?—A. This will make twice.

Q. How many times you voted against the republicans?—A. Yes, sir; twice.

Q. Who do you work for?—A. For Cummings Ball.

- Q. Who told you to come here as a witness?—A. I saw Mr. John Porcher.
 Q. When?—A. Yesterday, about, I believe, it was 10 o'clock.
 Q. Did he tell you what you would be paid for coming?—A. Yes, sir.
 Q. What?—A. He said I would get $3 a day.
 Q. What else?—A. Nothing more.
 Q. Did he not say you would be paid your traveling fee?—A. Yes, sir; he tells me 80.

 Q. How much a mile?—A. He didn't tell me how much they was going to give me.
 Q. How did you come?—A. I come on the car.
 Q. Who paid your fare?—A. I paid my own fare.

T. H. SMITH recalled.

By the CHAIRMAN :

- Q. You have stated in your examination heretofore that you voted at Whaley's Church?—A. Yes, sir.
 Q. State whether you observed how the voters were sworn there that day.—A. They were sworn three at a time, sir.

R. W. HARMON (colored) sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN :

- Question. What is your age?—Answer. Thirty-nine years old.
 Q. Where do you live?—A. I live in Saint John's.
 Q. What precinct?—A. Biggins.
 Q. Where did you vote on the day of the late election?—A. Biggins, sir.
 Q. Did you see any armed men that day at the polls?—A. Yes, sir.
 Q. Did you meet or see any armed men on the road?—A. Yes, sir.
 Q. How many?—A. More than I am able to say, sir; I didn't count them. I suppose I met a hundred. All were not armed, though; some had arms and some had none.
 Q. What time did you leave the polls?—A. I left the polls about 8 o'clock in the morning.
 Q. You voted then and went on home?—A. Yes, sir.
 Q. Who went with you from the polls when you went home?—A. A man by the name of Lockler.
 Q. Was he a colored man?—A. A white man. There was a colored man came along with us by the name of Edie.
 Q. Did you meet any parties going to the polls?—A. Yes, sir.
 Q. Who were they, and how many?—A. I don't know the name, or I don't know how many; I didn't count them.
 Q. About how many?—A. I suppose I met about a hundred.
 Q. Were they armed?—A. Some was, and some was not.
 Q. Were they going in a body?—A. Well, sometimes there was fifteen or twenty, and sometimes five or six, and sometimes ten, and sometimes more than that.
 Q. Were they colored men?—A. All colored men, sir.
 Q. How were they armed?—A. Some had double-barreled guns and some had muskets.
 Q. These men that you met, where were they going?—A. Going to Biggins poll, sir.
 Q. Did you have any conversation with any of them when you met them?—A. One crowd we met said to this man Edie, they ask him how did he vote, and Edie said he voted the right way. And they says to him, "I suppose you voted the democratic ticket."

(Mr. Lapham objects to the witness stating what he heard.)

Mr. EDEN. I think that what occurred while on their way to the election is competent.

By the CHAIRMAN :

- Q. Edie said he voted the right way?—A. Yes, sir. They said, "You vote the democratic ticket—if we thought you did we would cut your throat," and they drew the back of a sword across Edie's throat.
 Q. Did they pass on then toward the polls?—A. Yes, sir; they didn't stop, or we didn't stop. They went on their way and we went on our way.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

- Q. Where have you voted since you became old enough to vote?—A. Nowheres but Biggins and Pineapolis.
 Q. How many years have you been in the habit of voting?—A. Eight years, sir.
 Q. Did you see any white men at Biggins with arms?—A. Yes, sir.
 Q. Did you ever see arms at the polls before this year?—A. Never did, sir.

Q. How many arms did the white men have there at Biggins?—A. Well, I could not tell how many, sir. I seen both white and colored men have them, sir.

Q. Did the colored democrats have arms?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the white democrats?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You did not see anybody injured, did you?—A. No, sir.

Q. Who did you get your vote from; who gave you your ticket?—A. I forget the man's name now. He was a white man, sir.

Q. You voted the democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever vote it before?—A. Always did, sir.

Q. They didn't accuse you of changing then?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you go to any of the democratic meetings before the election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did not people have arms there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was customary for both parties to take arms to political meetings, was it not?—A. Yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. How many white men did you see at this poll at Biggins that day?—A. I could not tell you, sir. I didn't count them.

Q. Were there few or many?—A. There was a good many, sir. I didn't stay all day; I didn't stay long.

Q. Did you see a dozen there?—A. There was more than that; I suppose in the neighborhood of 35 or 40 when I left.

Q. How many colored men were there?—A. I couldn't tell; I suppose there was over a hundred when I left.

Q. How many guns did you see the white men have there?—A. I could not tell how many. Every white man had a gun, I think.

Q. And all the colored men were armed?—A. Not all; some come without arms.

Q. How many guns did you see the colored men have—as many as a hundred?—A. I couldn't say. I do not think there was a hundred, because every colored man didn't have a gun. Some had and some didn't.

Q. You left at eight o'clock?—A. Yes, sir.

The committee adjourned to meet to-morrow (Saturday, December 23, 1876) at 10 o'clock a. m.

CHARLESTON, S. C., December 23, 1876.

Committee met pursuant to adjournment.

ISAAC GRANT (colored) sworn and examined.

By Mr. EDEN :

Question. What is your age?—Answer. I could not tell you rightly. I reckon I am between 25 and 26; along there. My master always kept our age, but he is dead and gone.

Q. Where do you live?—A. I live about at Ten-Mile Hill.

Q. What precinct did you vote at?—A. Whaley's Church.

Q. Did you vote there at the last election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Before you went to the election, did you tell anybody who you were going to vote for?—A. No, sir; I didn't. When I started from home the other folks had gone before, and I didn't catch up until 12.

Q. Some time before that had you told any of the boys who you were going to vote for?—A. Yes, sir; some boys told me up at their shop that they were going to vote for the democrat party, and I told them I was going to vote for them too, sir.

Q. Who were those boys?—A. Jim Barnwell and Sam Gilliard.

Q. When you started to go to the election, what ticket did you intend to vote?—A. When I started from home I was going to vote the democrat ticket.

Q. On your way to the election, did you meet anybody, or fall in company with anybody?—A. No, sir; I didn't fall in company with nobody; I meets a whole gang of people. They were coming back and I was going.

Q. Were they colored or white people?—A. All colored.

Q. What did they say to you?—A. They asked me what ticket I was going to vote. I never told them what ticket I was going to vote. So I went up there, and after I got there one man give me a ticket and I vote. I voted the republican ticket.

Q. What did these people you met say to you about voting?—A. I met two young men on the road; they tell me if anybody vote the democrat ticket, they said that I would not get back home safe. So I didn't want nobody to beat me or bruise me up, and so I vote the same as I always does vote.

Q. Were these colored boys or white boys?—A. No, sir; they were colored.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

- Q. Who gave you the ticket you voted for?—A. A man by the name of Sandy Prailor.
 Q. Did you know him?—A. O, yes, sir.
 Q. And you went up and voted it?—A. Yes, sir.

JESSE GADDIS (colored) sworn and examined.

By Mr. EDEN :

- Question. Where do you live?—Answer. I live in Whaley's Church precinct.
 Q. What is your age?—A. About 25 to 27.
 Q. Where did you vote at the last election?—A. At Whaley's Church, sir.
 Q. When you went to the election, what ticket did you intend to vote for?—A. I was intended to vote the democrat ticket, sir.
 Q. What ticket did you vote for?—A. When I went up there I vote the republican ticket.
 Q. Why did you do that?—A. Because the boys up there said if any man vote the democrat ticket they would not get way from them, and before I would get myself injured, I went and vote the republican ticket.
 Q. What boys were they that said this?—A. Sandy Prailor, Jim Barnwell, and several more of the boys.
 Q. Were they colored men or white men?—A. Colored men, sir.
 Q. How long did you remain there after you had voted?—A. About half an hour; I remained there about half an hour, sir.
 Q. Who gave you your ticket?—A. A young fellow by the name of Hayward, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

- Q. Who do you work for?—A. I work for the company, sir.
 Q. What company?—A. I do not know the company, but Dr. Pankison says he is the head man of that company.
 Q. He is the manager, is he?—A. Yes, sir.
 Q. Does he employ you?—A. He is the head man, sir; but the man who carry on the work when I was there was Wharton; he was carrying on the work.
 Q. Who hired you?—A. Mr. Wharton; he is the superintendent.
 Q. Who told you to come here as a witness?—A. No man told me, sir; but when I was down here I heard they were contesting of the vote, and I know, sir, they were threatening me—
 Q. I want to know who spoke to you about coming here as a witness?—A. When, sir?
 Q. Any time before you came.—A. No man spoke to me about coming.
 Q. You were not subpoenaed to come here, were you?—A. After I got here, sir.
 Q. But before you came?—A. No, sir; after I gets here.
 Q. When did you come?—A. I came this morning, sir.
 Q. Did you see any one who had been here as a witness?—A. No, sir.
 Q. Did you hear what compensation was being paid witnesses for coming?—A. No, sir.
 Q. You expected pay, did you not?—A. No, sir; I expected my right.
 Q. You didn't expect to get any pay?—A. No, sir; I come to see myself righted.
 Q. Righted for what?—A. By the contesting of the voting.
 Q. You don't expect any pay for coming then?—A. No, sir; only under my rights, sir.
 Q. Did you ever vote before this time?—A. O, yes, sir.
 Q. What ticket?—A. I always vote the republican ticket, sir.
 Q. You are a republican still, are you not?—A. I have voted the republican ticket, but I was making up my mind to vote the democrat ticket at this election.
 Q. But you are a republican still, are you not?—A. Yes, sir; a republican, still, now, sir.
 Q. Are you at work there now?—A. The work is stopped now, sir.
 Q. When did you cease to work?—A. Over two months ago, sir.
 Q. Before the election?—A. Yes, sir.
 Q. How long before the election did you leave there?—A. About a month, sir.
 Q. A month before the election?—A. Yes, sir.
 Q. You have not worked there since?—A. No, sir.
 Q. Where are you at work now?—A. Well, sir, I am fixing to plant now, sir.
 Q. You are not at work for any one now?—A. No, sir.
 Q. And have not been since you left there?—A. No, sir.
- By the CHAIRMAN :
- Q. You say you are fixing to plant now?—A. Yes, sir; fixing to plant now, sir.

W. S. DRAYTON sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Question. What is your age ?—Answer. Nearly 32, sir.

Q. What is your occupation ?—A. Farmer, sir.

Q. Where do you reside ?—A. Hilton Head Island.

Q. How long have you resided there ?—A. I have been there for the last three years, sir. That is in Beaufort County.

Q. Where did you reside before that ?—A. I have always been in South Carolina until I left the State in 1868, and went first to Saint Louis, Mo. A few years I was absent from South Carolina, but came back, and have been here for the last three years. I am a native of South Carolina, born and raised in the State. After the close of the war I went to the Northwest. The last three years I have been back in the State.

Q. Where did you attend at the recent election ?—A. At Mitchellville precinct, sir.

Q. Beaufort County ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you occupy any official position at that precinct ?—A. I was one of the managers of the election.

Q. Who were the other two managers ?—A. Gabriel P. Gardner and Mr. Peoples—both colored.

Q. What was the vote at that precinct ?—A. Four hundred and seventy-six.

Q. How many white voters were there out of that number ?—A. Sixteen.

Q. How many republican votes were cast there ?—A. Four hundred and sixty-three. Well, there is one of those votes that was split, one voting for Hampton, and he voted for Hayes, too. There were only ten democrat votes—that is, full tickets; but one was split, voting for Hampton and the State, and for Governor Hayes, national ticket.

Q. State, in your own way, the manner in which that election was conducted there that day, and what was the conduct of the parties at the polls; as to whether there was any violence or any intimidation exercised toward voters; and, if so, the nature and character of it.—A. Well, sir, when I got over to the polls—it was half past six o'clock—they had already voted some twenty-odd voters, and when I got in the first thing I did I voted, and Mr. McFall was outside doing as the republicans did. They were distributing their tickets, and, of course, we were distributing ours, too. We were as anxious to vote as many democratic tickets as the other party was to vote republican tickets, and the election went on very smoothly. There were these little sly jokes, you know, such as, "We are going to beat you," and all that, until about half-past nine o'clock, when I heard a great commotion outside, and Mr. McFall came up and said to me, "Look here, Mr. Drayton, these tickets are getting pretty hot. These fellows are ordering me away from the polls and I am not going. I am going to distribute these tickets as long as I feel like doing it." I says, "Certainly you have a perfect right to distribute democratic tickets here and get all the voters you can. The law requires that we shall have a free and fair election, and you have as much right to distribute democratic tickets as they have to distribute republican tickets. This is a free country, and if they prohibit you I will report them." "Well," he says, "all right;" and he went off. I heard, then, a little more fuss, and about that time he came up and says, "Look here, I demand protection from you." He says, "These men threaten to drive me away again from the polls, and unless I have some assistance I will have to leave." He says, "I cannot resist the force." "Well," I said, "Mac, I will read them, then, the riot act;" and I got up and I read it. They listened to me very patiently.

Q. What did you read from ?—A. I read from the United States law. Let me tell Mr. Lapham why I read from the United States law. I was appointed by mistake as supervisor. When I had already qualified as a manager, the powers and rights of supervisor were sent to me by the chief supervisor here from Charleston; but of course, having qualified as State manager, I couldn't qualify as supervisor. I had the law, and of course I read it to them. Their remark was that it was "A damned democratic paper got up in Beaufort," and that I could "Go to hell."

Q. State from whom that remark came.—A. It came from the crowd right around the ballot-box. Of course I was inside. I cannot say that everybody said it; only those individually around me. Two of them was the chief men in it. I can mention names if you want me to.

Q. Those two parties you speak of as being the chief men in it, did they appear to be leaders ?—A. Yes, sir; they were the leaders.

Q. What did they say ?—A. I told them that was all very nice for them to talk, whether it was a democratic paper or not; if they did not allow the free expression of the ballot-box I would report them. They then told me—these gentlemen will excuse the language—that I was "a son of a bitch," and if I came out there they would break my head.

Q. Were you at the time of this conversation at your voting-table as manager ?—A. Yes, sir; and they told me what I have already mentioned; that if I came out they would break my head. I told them my position was not to fight, it was only to report, and that I did not intend to come out there to be beaten. And the Rev. Mr. Peoples, the republican colored manager, he did show a disposition to try to do what was right. He got up and opened the door and went out. He told them, "Whether a man is white or black, if he wants to vote the democratic ticket he has a perfect right to do it here." And they said to him, "Look here, now, your place belongs around-in-dat box. If you come out here, you will get the debble-stick to you. You had better go back; we run dis ting." And old Peoples says, "I can't do anything with them, gentlemen." He says, "It is a shame; but I can do nothing with them;" and he came back and sat down. Just about that time, Mr. Henry C. Pollitzer and Mr. Clemm—I do not know his christened name—came up, and the crowd surrounded them.

Q. Were these two white men?—A. White men; yes, sir. The crowd surrounded them and declared that they should not vote; that that was republican ground, and no damned democrat should vote there. They told them that they were going to vote. By God, they were going to vote if they died; and they said they should not vote. Just about then, gentlemen, I thought, my God, my life was not worth three cents, and wished I was anywhere else but there. I have been in some tight positions, but I never want to be placed in another position like that. And Dr. F. E. Wilder, the republican county commissioner, rode up about that time. He is a resident of Hilton Head Island.

Q. White man or colored?—A. He is a white man. He is a republican, and as strong a republican as there is in South Carolina. I appealed to Mr. Wilder, and told him that we must have an honest expression of the ballot-box, and Mr. Wilder then sent to me for the laws and regulations of elections, and I sent them; and he read to the crowd, telling them that if they did not allow the democrats to vote at that poll that that box would be thrown out. They consented then to allow the white democrats to vote, but abused them in the most infamous terms. They cursed us for sons of bitches and everything else. I could not repeat to you the oaths myself. They said there were too many white people on that island, and that they intended to wipe them out.

Q. State whether this precinct of Mitchellville is on the island?—A. It is on the island, on Hilton Head Island, Beaufort County, South Carolina. At the same time they declared that if any colored man voted the democratic ticket then and there, they would cut him to pieces; and every colored man who came up to the polls to vote after this excitement, after half past nine o'clock, was subject to scrutiny. His ticket was opened and scrutinized before he could place it in the box. There was one thing I did see, and that was Mr. McFall as they carried home—forced home—driven away from the polls, and as many tickets as they could get away from him, taken away. They would have taken all away, but he had some secreted in his coat, and they did not take them all. They took some of them away from him, as many as they could get, and tore them up and drove him away.

Q. Did he return to the polls?—A. No, sir; he could not return; they would have killed him if he had returned; and the only thing that protected me there, gentlemen, was that my uncle who was a captain in the Federal Navy there during the war—the negroes all had the idea that because I was a manager behind the polls that I must be in the ring, and even after I came out, after the close of the election, two or three of them said to me, "All right; you read that democrat paper, and if you had come out there we would have fixed you; but," they said, "after all that we don't believe you vote the democrat ticket; we believe you vote the republican ticket anyhow." I says, "Why do you think so?" Well, they said, "Your uncle was in the Navy," and, they said, "He was too good a soldier in the northern Navy for you to vote the democrat ticket." "Well," I says, "you can believe what you please, but I did vote the democratic ticket."

Q. Did any of the colored men there at that precinct before the election express in your hearing a desire and purpose to vote the democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir; there were plenty of them. If it is necessary for me to substantiate what I saw I can bring them here.

Q. Did you make up the returns and sign them there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were they signed by all three of the managers?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Could all those managers read and write?—A. Well, Mr. Gardner can read and write. Mr. Peoples did not sign his name. He begged me to sign and he made his mark. I do not know whether he can read or whether he can write. He didn't sign the report. He asked me to sign his name for him, and he crossed it in the presence of Wilder and Gardner, both republicans.

Q. Was there any United States marshal at this precinct?—A. No, sir; none at all.

Q. Did the negroes there have any clubs or weapons of any kind?—A. No, sir; not that I could see. Some of them had sticks in their hands.

Q. Were there any negro women there?—A. Plenty of them, sir.

Q. What were they doing there?—A. Well, they came to drive Mr. McFall away from the polls. They had barrel-staves and fence-pickets.

Q. Did they make any noise?—A. Well, considerable, sir.

Q. What sort of a noise? What did they say and do?—A. Well, as far as I could hear them, they were abusing him; asking him what he brought the poisoned ticket there for—the democratic ticket—and that he ought to be killed. That is as far as I could see. You know I could not hear everything; my scope for hearing was limited.

Q. Did those voters prowl around the poll much?—A. Yes, sir; until three o'clock there was a constant crowd right up at the polls. These voters coming up were subjected to having their tickets examined.

Q. But they voted?—A. O, yes, sir.

Q. Were those colored men on that island generally armed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see any armed organization there on the island?—A. Not that I know of, sir. They all have guns and pistols—the majority of them; but there is no armed organization that I know of, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. The white people on the island have arms, haven't they?—A. O, yes, sir; we have arms—have pistols.

Q. Don't the white people have guns?—A. There is one man on the island who has a gun, and he is a republican. That is Mr. Ashsebrooke.

Q. Did you have arms that day?—A. Yes, sir; I had; I had my pistol.

Q. Was any person injured, to your knowledge that day; did you see any one injured?—A. I saw John McFall struck three or four times with a fence-picket. That is all I could see from my position.

Q. Who struck him?—A. A negro woman, sir.

Q. With that exception, did you see any one?—A. Yes, sir; I saw one white man. He was a sailor; a United States sailor. He came there and tried to vote, and I told him he could not vote; that it was not allowable by the statutes of South Carolina for him to vote. He said he was a democrat, and wanted to vote the democratic ticket. I told him he could not vote there if he was a democrat.

Q. I have asked you simply whether you saw anybody injured except Mr. McFall?—A. Yes, sir; I saw this sailor knocked about a good deal by colored men.

Q. How knocked about?—A. Took and struck him with their fists.

Q. For attempting to vote when he hadn't any right to vote?—A. Well, he came up to find out whether he had the privilege to vote or not.

Q. Well, he offered to vote; did he not?—A. To see if he had a right to vote, sir.

Q. Did he come there and attempt to vote?—A. He came there to ask the privilege of voting.

Q. Did he offer to vote?—A. No, sir; he did not offer to vote.

Q. Did he not have a ticket?—A. Yes, sir; he had a ticket.

Q. Did he not offer it to the managers?—A. No, sir; he didn't offer it.

Q. What was said and done to him growing out of that circumstance?—A. When I told him he could not vote they were very exultant, and knocked him about.

Q. The colored people were exultant, I suppose you mean?—A. Some call them negroes, and some colored people, just according as it suits them.

Q. How do you make the distinction?—A. Well, sir, I generally call them colored. I do not like to hurt anybody's feelings unnecessarily, sir. If they prefer to be called colored people, I call them colored people.

Q. Have you stated now all the violence you saw that day; all the injury you saw committed upon any person?—A. All the injury; yes, sir. Very few white men, you know, there, sir.

Q. Do you know of any person who was entitled to vote, and came there for that purpose, who did not vote in fact?—A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Were you a manager ever before?—A. No, sir; I was supervisor at the last election, in 1874; not at Hilton Head, though.

Q. At this precinct?—A. No, sir; at the Bluffton precinct, in the same county.

Q. Do you know what the vote was at this precinct in 1874?—A. As near as I can recollect now—I won't give it to you on my oath—from what the managers told me—Gardner and Peoples—it was 365 or 370.

Q. Republicans?—A. Yes, sir; two democrats voted there, I think, sir.

Q. In 1874?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was it this year?—A. Four hundred and seventy-six votes cast—sum total; ten democrats and one split—one voting for Hampton and Hayes.

Q. How many republicans?—A. Well, sir, there were 400. On the national ticket, 464; and, I think, on the State ticket, 463.

Q. You joined in the return?—A. Yes, sir; I signed it, sir.

Q. Did you send any protest with your return?—A. No, sir; as manager I had no right to send a protest.

Q. No white persons there armed, except yourself?—A. No, sir; not that I know of, sir.

Q. Do you know whether they were or not?—A. I say, not that I know of.

Q How many white persons in all voted?—A. Sixteen, sir. Some of the whites there are republicans.

Q Did you hold any position in the party?—A. No, sir; never was in any position.

Q Member of a committee, or any position of that kind?—A. No, sir; no position at all, sir, except state manager.

Q Were any of these men your employés?—A. There, do you mean?

Q Yes.—A. Yes, sir.

Q How many persons that work for you?—A. There is a good many tenants, you know, on my place, if you take those.

Q Yes, I take those.—A. Some fifty or sixty, sir, tenants and laborers.

Q You were subpoenaed to come here, I suppose?—A. Yes, sir; I was telegraphed for.

Q From whom did you receive the telegram?—A. From Colonel Phillips, chairman of the committee, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q You were asked in regard to whether you did not make a protest. Did you not make an affidavit shortly after the election?—A. Yes, sir; just as soon as I could make it, I did.

Q What was done with it, if you know?—A. Mr. Elliott took it, and I think he forwarded it on to Columbia.

Q What position, if any, did he hold in the party there?—A. He was one of the executive committee.

Q In regard to this sailor, I understood you to say that when he came up, he stated he was a sailor, and asked if he had a right to vote?—A. Yes, sir; he had a ticket. I do not know whether it was a democratic ticket or what it was, but he had the ticket in his hand. Mr. Lapham asked me, and of course I said he had it in his hand. Whether it was a democratic ticket or a republican ticket, I do not know. He had it folded up. When he came there he said, "Have I a right to vote here?" He was on the light-ship, in the United States service. Of course, I said "No, you haven't any right to vote here."

Q Then he announced he wanted to vote the democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q Then it was that these colored men set upon him?—A. Yes, sir.

JOHN MCFALL sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Question. What is your age?—Answer. I am fifty years old.

Q Where do you reside?—A. Port Royal, South Carolina, Beaufort County.

Q How long have you resided there?—A. Five years, sir.

Q At what precinct did you attend at the late election?—A. Hilton Head precinct, Mitchellville.

Q State what time you arrived at the polls that day, and all that transpired at the polls during your stay there, of which you have personal knowledge.—A. I arrived at the polls about twenty minutes after six o'clock in the morning; myself and Mr. Drayton. I think it was twenty minutes after six, by his watch. There had been fifty or sixty votes polled when we arrived there. He went into the poll, inside of the house. I was acquainted with a good many colored people on the island, having run a truck-farm there this year, and several of them asked me if I was going to vote that day. I told them I was. They said, "I suppose you vote the democratic ticket," and I said, yes. They told me if I wanted to vote the democratic ticket I had better vote pretty soon.

Q Who told you that?—A. William Read and three or four of my acquaintances. He lived at Mitchellville. There were only fifteen or twenty on the ground when I voted. I told them I didn't apprehend any danger. I said, "You all know me; I have treated you well, and have always been treated kindly by your color down here." "Well," says they, "when our crowd come here if you want to vote the democratic ticket you had better vote now." And I voted. It was not twenty minutes until the crowd commenced coming in. They asked me how I voted, and I told them I had voted the democratic ticket. "Well," says they, "you have no right to come here and vote that ticket." I told them I had a perfect right to come there and vote the democratic ticket; that I was farming there, a citizen of Beaufort County, and was born and raised in the State. And they commenced using very insulting language toward me—a good many of them.

Q State what they said to you.—A. There was a couple of men from Spanish Well. They told me they "didn't believe in no damned old rebel son of a bitch who owned colored people before the war to come to Hilton Head and vote the democratic ticket, and the time was coming when they would root out every white-skin on the island." I told them that chin-music was cheap, and I didn't apprehend any danger at all. They made a rush at me, and old Billy Read stepped up to and told them to be quiet and not to interrupt me; that he had known me for four or five years, and that I had always been the right sort of a man, and to let me alone. They came up and asked me for democratic tickets. I gave them democratic tickets and told them, "You won't vote them, but you can take them home and put them in your Bibles to refer to." I said, we are going to beat you in this race; that thievery and corruption was about played out in South Carolina, and that we were going to have honest men in office once more. They pushed me so that I went up to the manager and requested to be protected; to let me come in the house. Mr. Drayton, who was supervisor, and, as I thought, head manager, read the law of the United States to the crowd. They cursed him for all the sons of bitches the world ever saw, and dared him to come out and arrest or cause to be arrested anybody there, and they would out him up and stamp him in the sand—murder him. I requested him to be quiet, and I would try and take care of myself. I retreated from the poll-box, and caught hold of a man by the name of Riley for protection. He was one of the leaders of that island—

Q. Was he a colored man?—A. Yes, sir; there was only a few white men on the island—eight or ten. Mr. Drayton and I were the only white men there in the morning. Mr. McIntyre came up afterward. I caught Mr. Riley on a pile of lumber. He was the leading colored man on the island. I told him it was an outrage to be treated by people whom I had never harmed or wronged or defrauded, and that I ought to have the right of my opinion there, to distribute the tickets, or to do anything that was legitimate on that occasion. It was democrat and republican, and I thought that each man had a right to say his say on the election. Well, he spoke to the crowd, and he thought that I was justifiable in my course, and he didn't want me mobbed there. About that time some twenty or thirty negro women, backed by about one hundred and fifty to two hundred of these colored people, came up to me and commenced beating around me with hoe-handles, barrel-staves, and garden-pallings. I thought at first they were doing it to plague me. I knew a great many of the women; in fact, the leader of it used to be a washerwoman in my family four years ago. Her name was Harriet. I said, "Harriet, what do you mean?" She said, "We mean to run you off this island, or kill you." I had on an overcoat; it was a drizzly day, something like to-day, only rainy occasionally. They commenced jabbing me and punching me, and they got one palling through the lappel of my coat, and another came in my coat at my back and ran through it. I got up against a cart that was standing there and the horse started, and it was through the wheels of the cart that that palling came, and the noise against the spokes made the horse start off lively. I saw that my situation was very untenable. The horse was hitched in it loose; was not hitched to any post or anything. I saw that they really were going to kill me or injure me seriously, and I jumped in and caught hold of this Harriet around the arms and defended off the licks and jabs until I got up to Gardner's store, a colored man who had a very large store there, and as I got up to the steps and went to go in they told me I could not go in there. There was a shed by the side of the store, and there was four steps leading to the shed-room; and as I passed I slapped an old colored man on the shoulder, and said, "Sam, are you going to forsake me in this crisis?" and he said, "No, sir; I will not." And he got on the lower stop and held his hands up and protected me, and old man Noble's wife, a colored woman, did the same on the other side, or they would have killed me right there. Then we compromised that I was to leave.

Q. State what was said about your leaving?—A. They told me if I would leave the ground and not come back until after the poll was closed they would not kill me, and I agreed to leave; and this man, Samuel Black, and this colored woman agreed to see me off three-quarters of a mile. Before I started, however, I told them that that was a very rough compromise, but I hoped they would allow me after six o'clock to come and give three cheers for Tilden and Hampton, our next rulers. They came on and skinned this man Black's hands fearfully. I was behind Black, and he protected me.

Q. What became of those tickets you had?—A. They took them away from me. I had to deliver over all my tickets; and Black and this old man Noble's wife, a colored woman, carried me about two hundred yards, and I went over to Mr. Drayton's place.

Q. How far off was that from the poll?—A. Three-quarters of a mile. I went into his foreman's yard to tell him about how excited the people were at Mitchellville.

Q. You told who?—A. Summers Christopher, a colored man.

Q. You went to him and reported to him what had occurred?—A. Yes, sir; he had went over early in the morning.

Q. Did you report to him what had occurred?—A. I reported to him what had occurred, and in a few minutes, I suppose thirty minutes from the time I had left the polling-precinct, the time that I was in Christopher's yard, we heard a yell, and his wife remarked, "Summers, here comes a flag and a whole crowd." He ran out in the yard, and says, "Mac, I am afraid"—

(Mr. Lapham objects on the ground that the conversations between third persons away from the polls are immaterial.)

(Witness continuing.) They came from the polls after me. I was locked up in the lumber-house for an hour and a half.

Q. Who looked you up in the lumber-house?—A. This man Christopher's wife.

Q. What were you looked up in there for?—A. From these infuriated people, who were coming with axes, hoes, and clubs to murder me.

Q. Did they come on up there?—A. Mr. Black and Mr. Christopher, and two or three others of the Drayton colored people, kept them out of the yard. They did not know where I was, but I could hear all that was going on. They forbid them to put their foot past a certain line. I was in on Mr. Drayton's private property, and they defied any person to put their foot past the corner of the yard; and after about an hour's haranguing there, they finally dispersed, and went back to Mitchellville.

Q. You didn't go back to the polls any more that day?—A. No, sir; I didn't. They threatened to kill or murder me. There was only about eleven white men on the island. They threatened to kill the last one of them. Some one remarked that Dr. Wilder was a good republican, and they said, "Well, we do not know whether he is or not."

Q. Mr. McIntyre; does he live on the island?—A. Yes, sir; he has been feeding these poor people for the last ten years, whenever their crops would fail, and they shot him the other night through his window.

(Mr. Lapham objects.)

Q. This man McIntyre was at the polls that day when these threats were made?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was there, and has since been shot?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Was he killed?—A. No, sir; he was shot too far.

(Mr. Lapham objects to this line of examination as being incompetent.)

The WITNESS. They threatened to run every white man off the island and then run Mr. Drayton off, and me, and Mr. McIntyre; and we are the backbone of the whole island.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Before these negro women set on you there, did any of these colored men interrupt you?—A. O, yes, sir; they shoved me about and knocked my hat off, and done everything to get me to resent it.

Q. Did you make any resistance?—A. No, sir; I called on this constable, William Reed, who shook his head, as much as to say he had nothing to do with it.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. How long have you lived on the island?—A. I have been at Port Royal for five years; I farmed on Hilton Head six years.

Q. My question is, about how long have you lived on Hilton Head Island?—A. I suppose about six months.

Q. How long have you lived on any island?—A. I lived on Port Royal Island five years.

Q. Where did you live before that?—A. In this city, Charleston, a year and a half. I was born and raised in Anderson, in the upper part of the State.

Q. Did you ever own slaves?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Down to what time?—A. I owned them up to the surrender.

Q. How many?—A. Sixty in fee-simple, and an interest in about five hundred.

Q. Were any of these persons living on the island ever slaves of yours?—A. No, sir; if there had been, there would not have been any fault found. I owned no slaves in the low country. My colored people are all in the up country.

Q. How did they know you had been a slaveholder?—A. I cannot tell you. I suppose they all knew it from hearing what others said.

Q. Had you never talked to them about it?—A. Yes, sir; I probably have told them I was slaveholder.

Q. Don't you know you have talked to these people on the island?—A. Some of them I had.

Q. Your residence is at Port Royal?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That would have been your natural voting-place, would it not?—A. No, sir; I had a farm on Hilton Head this last year—last November a year ago.

Q. How large a farm is it?—A. Fifty acres.

Q. Were any of these persons laborers of yours?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever have any difficulty with them before election-day?—A. No, sir; not a word.

Q. Have you had any difficulty since?—A. No, sir; never since; they had all treated me very kindly.

Q. Have you had any of the persons assaulting you arrested?—A. No, sir; there is no use to arrest them.

Q. Why have you not had them arrested?—A. Because we have not got any law in our county.

Q. Have you any law in the State?—A. Not in this part of the State.

Q. The Ku-Klux were convicted here and punished, were they not?—A. Well, I believe they were.

Q. Under the United States law?—A. Under the United States law, so called.

Q. What is the name of the man who protected you?—A. Samuel Black.

Q. How long have you known him?—A. Between four and five years.

Q. What was the name of the woman?—A. Mrs. Nobles. I do not know what her given name is. She is the wife of a colored man there by the name of Nobles.

Q. You made a compromise there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was that you should leave, and not come back there during the election. In that event they agreed to let you alone?—A. Yes, sir; that they would not kill me.

Q. They agreed to cease their violence, did they not?—A. The agreement was just this: if I agreed to go within ten minutes, they would not kill me.

Q. And you agreed to do it?—A. I did, most assuredly.

Q. How far had you got before you made the other proposition?—A. Which other proposition do you mean?

Q. You stated that you said something after you had gotten out of their reach about coming back at six o'clock?—A. That was on the steps before I started.

Q. It was after the arrangement was made?—A. No, sir; when they proposed the arrangement.

Q. What was it you said?—A. I told them I would like them to give me the privilege of giving three cheers for Hampton and Tilden, our next rulers, after six o'clock.

Q. What was your object in saying that?—A. I done it to show them that I was a Hampton and Tilden man.

Q. Did you not mean to exasperate them a little by that kind of talk?—A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. You knew that would be the effect of it?—A. No, sir, I didn't think so.

Q. You said that your proposition to them was to come back there after six o'clock and give three cheers for Tilden and Hampton?—A. No, sir, I didn't say that.

Q. What did you say?—A. I said that after six o'clock I would give three cheers over at Drayton's. It was three-quarters of a mile from the polls.

Q. Who was the person leading this crowd?—A. Of the female department, do you mean?

Q. Who was leading the colored men?—A. My acquaintances were not in the crowd.

Q. You cannot name any one then?—A. I cannot name the colored people. They were all strangers to me.

Q. You cannot name any one who occupied the position of leader or commander?—A. No, sir; there was one named Riley, and one named Campbell; but if you were ever in a sea-island crowd of colored people when they were excited—

Q. Do they raise sea-island cotton on this island?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. It is a cotton-island, is it?—A. It is a cotton-island.

Q. Is that what you are growing there?—A. No, sir; I never growed cotton since the war. I grow vegetables—potatoes, cabbage, &c.

Q. You have not grown cotton since you parted with your slaves?—A. No, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. At the time that you stated you asked permission of these people to give three cheers for Hampton and Tilden, it was after they had used this violence on you, and when you were talking about leaving in ten minutes?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were asked why you did not have these people arrested for this violence; did you regard it as safe to undertake to have them arrested afterward?—A. Not at all, sir. I would not have attempted to have one of them arrested.

Mr. LAPHAM. I asked the witness the proper question, why he did not have them arrested; and now he gives as his answer that the laws could not be executed. Now, you ask him a leading question.

The CHAIRMAN. It is a new matter brought out by you. I can examine about that new matter, undoubtedly.

The WITNESS. I have not removed my things from there yet; my potatoes, and everything, are there.

Q. After the election, did you leave?—A. I did.

Q. For what reasons?—A. Because I was afraid of my life.

Q. What had been your relations with the colored people in that neighborhood previous to the election?—A. The most friendly you ever saw, sir. Was treated kindly by them, and treated them kindly. Never had a word.

Q. Never had any trouble with them?—A. Not a bit in the world. There was a hundred passed my farm every day going to their work, and many of them would stop and give me half an hour to an hour's work.

Q. Never had any trouble until this election-day?—A. No, sir.

Q. And it was entirely political?—A. Political altogether.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

- Q. You are a pretty strong partisan, are you not ?—A. I have never been until late.
- Q. I mean this year ?—A. I was, because it was the first time since the war that I took an interest in the elections.
- Q. You voted at what hour ?—A. I voted at about 35 minutes after six, about 10 minutes after I got to the polls.
- Q. What time did you leave there ?—A. I left there a few minutes after ten.
- Q. How long after 10 o'clock ?—A. About 10 minutes.
- Q. How many people were there at the time you left ?—A. About four hundred.
- Q. Sixty had voted, I think you said, after you had gotten there ?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Had they gone away ?—A. About twenty had gone away.
- Q. About four hundred, including the women, were there when you went away ?—A. Yes, sir ; there were fifty or sixty women, I suppose, there. There was quite a little town there of colored women.
- Q. How large an island is this ?—A. About twenty miles long and about four miles wide.
- Q. What is the population ?—A. I suppose there are about four thousand colored, of all ages and sizes, and about twenty-eight whites.
- Q. How many voting-precincts ?—A. One—Mitchellville. DeFoskie Island, at the mouth of the Savannah River, they vote there, too.
- Q. What is the population of that island ?—A. I think there is about two hundred and fifty to three hundred on that island.

By the CHAIRMAN :

- Q. Was there not another voting-precinct on that island ?—A. No, sir.
- Q. What is the nearest voting-precinct to Mitchellville ?—A. Paris Island.
- Q. How far off is that ?—A. It is about eleven miles to the polling-precinct there.
- Q. How far is Mitchellville from Hilton Head ?—A. It is about a mile. Hilton Head, you know—there is just a little tide-creek between this Mitchellville and Hilton Head—Scroggins, as it was called there. During the war Hilton Head was a big place. The only town of any consequence is Mitchellville now.
- Q. What information have you with regard to the voting population there ; what do you know of your own personal knowledge ?—A. Nothing but what I have heard ; that there is about four thousand negroes.
- Q. You have never examined the census ?—A. No, sir ; I never have ; I know the white people, because I know all the white people on the island.
- Q. You say you do not know a great many of these colored people on the island ?—A. Only on the Drayton place.
- Q. You have no personal knowledge yourself of the extent of the population of the island ?—A. No, sir ; only what reports says that there is about four thousand colored people on De Foskie.
- Q. Judge Lapham has asked you the question if you were not quite partisan at the last election ; please state what part you took in politics, and to what extent at the last election, just before the election ?—A. Before the election—the day of election—I didn't think I spoke to half a dozen negroes on the island ; just those I met going from my place down to the post-office, that I was well acquainted with. I asked them how they proposed to vote in the coming election.
- Q. Did you have any discussions or controversies about politics before the election ?—A. No, sir ; I told them we expected to get some good speakers and come down there and let them hear our side of the question, and a great many of them said, "It won't do to bring them down there ; that they only wanted to hear one side ; that they would not allow them to come there." So I went over and saw Mr. McIntyre and Mr. Drayton, and we found it would not do. There never was a speaker went on the island.
- Q. No speeches were made there ?—A. No, sir ; it would not have been safe for them to go there.
- Q. Then, when you say you were partisan in the late election, what do you mean by it ?—A. I mean to say I felt an interest in the election and voted. I hardly ever voted since the war. I don't think I voted but twice.

H. B. VAN NESS sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN :

- Question. What is your age ?—Answer. I am going on thirty-seven.
- Q. Where do you reside ?—A. In Beaufort, Beaufort County, South Carolina.
- Q. How long have you resided there ?—A. About six years, sir.
- Q. Where did you reside before you went there ?—A. At Coosaw.
- Q. How long have you resided at Coosaw ?—A. I think about five years, sir.
- Q. Where did you reside before you went there ?—A. In New York.
- Q. The State or city of New York ?—A. I resided in Brooklyn, State of New York.

Q. Did you serve in either army during the war?—A. I did, sir; Second New York Cavalry, under General Kilpatrick.

Q. Where did you attend at the late election?—A. At Gray's Hill precinct.

Q. Were you there in any official capacity on that day; and, if so, state what it was.—A. I was one of the managers of the election there, sir.

Q. Do you remember about how many votes were cast there that day?—A. There was four hundred and seventy-two republican and nine democratic votes, sir.

Q. How many colored men of that number were at that election on that day?—A. They were all colored except two, sir.

Q. Do you know whether all those voters who voted at that precinct that day resided in that precinct?—A. No, sir; I do not know.

Q. Any persons from Beaufort vote there that you know?—A. Persons working in Beaufort voted there, sir.

Q. How many?—A. Well, sir, there is one or two that I know, sir; although they lived in the country, their place of work was in Beaufort.

Q. How far did they live from Beaufort?—A. About nine miles, sir.

Q. How far from Gray's Hill?—A. About two miles, sir.

Q. Gray's Hill, then, was probably their precinct?—A. Yes, sir; they went home to vote, I believe, sir.

Q. State what time you reached the polls on that morning, what you witnessed there during the day, and any facts connected with the conduct of that election.—A. I went to the polls about six o'clock; I believe it was just six when we arrived there, and we opened the polls at six, and they commenced voting, or went on voting up until about half past eight, I should think. They commenced a row there, and were cursing and going on, and threatening about democrats voting there, and we moved the box; that was about half past eight. Everything went on quietly up until about then, sir, and one of the managers took the box away and put it back again; and they commenced cursing us, saying that if I would come out I should not leave the house again, and I did not know what was the cause of it until I seen Mr. Porteous—John F. Porteous, who was the United States supervisor. They had Porteous, handling him pretty roughly, and one of the republican managers called my attention to Porteous. I did not see him, there was such a crowd around him, and I looked and I saw there was no chance for me to go out; that they made the same threats to me if I went out; they had their clubs raised over him.

Q. What did they threaten if you went out there?—A. They threatened that they would mash my brains out—kill me; that if I went out there they would knock my damn brains out. They used most every language they could in the way of profane language, and threatened that I should not leave the house. So I said if this was the way things were going on I should not go any further with the election. So they commenced voting again. These other two men who were managers, they started on with the voting again, and it quieted down some in regard to the row. I got Mr. Porteous inside, and then locked the door—barred the door.

Q. Was Mr. Porteous a white man or colored man?—A. He is a white man. He was the only white man who was there besides myself, sir. The voting went on, and the threats continued for an hour or so afterward; and they swore that no democrat should vote there; that it was a republican poll, and that no negro should vote the democrat ticket; if he did, they would beat his brains out and bury him in the sand. In fact, they took hold of one old negro there who they claimed had democrat tickets with him, and handled him pretty severely, and they tossed him down and commenced to jump on him; and some of them took his part and told them he was too old a man to use in that manner, although he voted the republican ticket.

Q. He did, after that, vote the republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir. He says, "Now, to show you that I am not a democrat, here is my ticket for any one to see; it is a republican ticket." He made one scratch, and it was Judd. He says, "I promised Judd that I would vote for him as clerk of the court, and I will do so," and he voted for Judd, who ran for clerk on the democratic ticket.

Q. Did you leave the building, or remain?—A. No, sir; I did not leave it until after the election. In fact, I could not leave it at the time. I would have left before if I could.

Mr. LAPHAM. The statement of the witness as to what he would have done, I object to.

The WITNESS. I went and asked one of the men to go to Beaufort for troops.

Q. State whether you were afraid to leave the building.—A. Yes, sir; I was afraid to go outside of the building. I believe any man is afraid of death. I thought it was getting rather severe there, and I did not know what might—

Mr. LAPHAM renews his objection.

Q. Why did you desire to go to Beaufort?—A. Because I did not think I was safe where I was, sir. I saw it was not safe for me to go, and I asked a negro to take my horse and go to Beaufort and have troops sent out, or some one, to help us; that it was not safe for us; that the threats were getting too great.

Q. Do you know whether he went or not?—A. No, sir; he sent word by another man who was going to Beaufort.

Q. You say you told a colored man to send word to Beaufort?—A. I told him to take my horse, and to go, or to send, to Beaufort for troops.

Q. And he reported he had sent by another man?—A. He said he had sent by another man, and when I got into Beaufort that night I learned the message had got there.

Q. Did any troops come out?—A. No, sir; there was only twenty-two soldiers in Beaufort.

Q. Do you know of any parties who came there to the polls that day to vote the democratic ticket that were prevented from voting?—A. There was two men that came there. The republican manager said that Mr. Hammond, a man from the Port Royal Railroad, and a Mr. Marburg had come up there, and they were afraid to vote, and had gone back.

Q. Did you see either of them there?—A. No, sir; I did not see them. One of the republican managers told me at the time the voting was going on.

Q. Did those colored men there at the polls crowd around the polls during the day?—A. Yes, sir; they crowded very much. At one time they crowded even the room the box was held in—the voting was done out—and we had to put them out.

Q. Was that when you moved the box back?—A. The box was moved back then, sir.

Q. Did they have any arms or weapons that you saw—sticks or clubs?—A. There was quite a display of clubs there at the time they had hold of Mr. Porteous, and also when they had hold of this old negro. I suppose you might call them weapons—call them clubs; they walk with them.

Q. Were there many of those sticks there?—A. Yes, sir; there was a number of them, sir.

Q. Did the managers make up the returns of that precinct there that evening?—A. They did, sir.

Q. And sign them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have any parties applied to you since the election about making up any other returns; and if so, state when.—A. They have; last week Dr. Wilder came to me.

(Mr. Lapham objects, on the ground of immateriality.)

The CHAIRMAN. I want to see whether any returns were boxed up there last week and sent to Columbia.

Q. Who is Dr. Wilder?—A. Treasurer of Beaufort County; appointed the day before Governor Chamberlain's time, sir; before he was inaugurated.

Q. He is a white man, is he?—A. He is a white man, sir.

Q. A republican or democrat?—A. Republican, sir.

Q. Is he prominent in politics there; a leader in the party?—A. He is one of the head republicans of Hilton Head.

Q. When was it he brought to you a return?—A. Last week he brought to me a return to sign. He said that the blank had not been filled out properly.

Q. Was it a return he brought to you already prepared?—A. Yes, sir; all written out; not a printed form, but written on a business sheet.

Q. Did he present it to you to sign?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you sign it?—A. No, sir; I did not. He wanted me make an affidavit also.

Q. Do you know whether the other two managers signed it?—A. He took it to the other two. I do not know whether they signed it or not.

Q. You do not know whether they signed it or not?—A. No, sir.

Q. You did not sign it?—A. I did not sign it, sir.

Q. You did not sign the affidavit either, did you?—A. No, sir.

Q. You do not know what became of that affidavit?—A. No, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. What did the doctor say was the defect in the return made?—A. He said it was not filled out properly, sir.

Q. Did he specify in what respect?—A. No, sir; he claimed that one blank was filled up correctly, but the others were not. He said there was a mistake.

Q. Did he state on what officer?—A. No, sir.

Q. He asked you to sign a corrected return, and to make an affidavit?—A. Yes, sir; to make an affidavit.

Q. And you declined to do either?—A. I declined to do either, sir.

Q. Can't you remember sufficiently well to state what the omission was; what the omission in the original return was; what blank it was that was not filled up?—A. No, sir; because I thought they were all filled up properly. All I know he said was, that they were not filled out properly.

Q. Did he not specify what blank it was that was not properly filled out?—A. No, sir; he did not specify.

Q. Who drew the returns that you made?—A. I drew them up; they were in blank form, and I filled them out, sir, with the aid of the other two managers.

Q. Who wrote them?—A. I wrote some of them, and some was written by one of the other managers, sir.

Q. Were they compared with the tally-list after they had been written out?—A. Yes, sir; they were then compared with the tally-list.

Q. Did you call off from the tally-list and write the returns?—A. We compared it with the tickets; afterward compared it with the tally-list.

Q. Did the managers all sign the returns?—A. They all signed, sir.

Q. Did any protest accompany the returns that you managers made?—A. No, sir, not that I know of; not to my knowledge.

Q. You made the usual certificate of the election at that poll, according to the printed forms?—A. I did, sir; I filled up the printed forms in the usual way.

Q. If there was any defect in it, if it did not comply with the law, it would be a mistake, would it not?—A. I do not see where there is any mistake.

Q. But if there is any, it is a mistake, is it not?—A. If there is any I made it, but I do not believe there is any mistake; if one was made out right they were all made out right. They were all copied from one another.

Q. There was no split ticket there, was there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Not on the electors?—A. Not to my knowledge; I do not know, sir. There was a number of split tickets.

Q. Had you ever officiated at this poll before?—A. Never, sir.

Q. How long do you say you have been in this State?—A. I have been in this State nearly eleven years.

Q. Have you always voted the democratic ticket?—A. No, sir; I have always voted the republican ticket.

Q. Until when?—A. Until this last election, sir.

Q. They used to call you a carpet-bagger, did they not?—A. No, sir; I have never been charged with being a carpet-bagger.

Q. The democrats never called you as such?—A. No, sir; I have never been charged with being a carpet-bagger.

Q. They only make that against officers, I believe?—A. I presume that is the best right they have against those that come here for office.

Q. Did these people know you had always been a republican; the people who were at this poll that day?—A. No, sir; they never knew anything of the kind. I have never been much of a politician, either one way or the other.

Q. Where had you voted heretofore?—A. Different places—in Beaufort, Gray's Hill, and Chisolm's Landing.

Q. How far is Gray's Hill from Beaufort?—A. About seven miles.

Q. You went to act as manager, then, in a precinct where you did not vote; you lived in Beaufort?—A. I live in Beaufort; yes, sir.

Q. You were a stranger at this precinct then; did the voters there know that you had been a republican?—A. No, sir; they did not know that I had been a republican, nor they did not know that I was a democrat until this last election.

Q. You were a stranger to them up to that time?—A. In regard to politics I may have been, sir. I do not know whether I was or not.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. A carpenter, sir.

Q. Had you ever acted as a manager before?—A. Never, sir.

Q. Can you state why it was that you were selected as a manager to go up to this precinct when you lived in Beaufort?—A. Yes, sir; there is so few democrats in our county that they had to take them wherever they could get them that would serve from home.

Q. Were not there any democrats up in this precinct where you served?—A. At Gray's Hill, do you mean?

Q. Yes.—A. There is but nine voters there.

Q. Were there no democrats up at Gray's Hill to act as managers?—A. No, sir; not that I know of. There is only nine white men, and two of those were working in Beaufort. They went home to vote.

Q. Gray's Hill is a republican precinct. The voters there are republican?—A. I never voted there. I have never known the democratic ticket to be voted since I have been in this State; so I cannot tell you that. I have never known but one ticket ever since I have been here.

Q. Why were you selected to go up there from Beaufort to Gray's Hill as a democratic manager?—A. Well, as I told you before, there was so few men in Beaufort that would serve.

Q. Why did they not select some one from Gray's Hill?—A. There was no one that would serve there. They did appoint a man there, but he refused to serve. He said he could not leave his store, and I was sent up in his place.

Q. His business would not allow him to serve, you say?—A. He said he would not leave his store at all on election-day; he was afraid to leave his store.

Q. Did you hear him say it?—A. They told me this. That is my reason for being at Gray's Hill. He was appointed and he could not serve.

Q. How do you know he was appointed?—A. I only know it from the board of managers there.

Q. For some reason or other you were selected to go up there, were you not?—A. No, sir; I do not think there is any reason.

Q. You were selected without any reason?—A. I do not know that there was any reason, except to fill out the number of managers.

Q. Do you not know that Gray's Hill is a republican precinct; a place where the voters are all republicans?—A. I don't think anything about it. I know that the whole State has been republican ever since I have been here.

Q. I am now talking about Gray's Hill.—A. I do not know that Gray's Hill is any more republican than democratic, if they had a chance to vote the ticket.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. There was but one white man besides you and Mr. Porteous at that poll?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say it was stated to you, when you were requested to go up there, that some other party had been appointed to that place, and that he had declined for the reason you have given?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And thereupon you were appointed to go there and take his place?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is the reason you went up there?—A. Yes, sir. I was appointed to another precinct, and then was exchanged after this man could not serve. That was at Myrtle Bush.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Did you go armed?—A. No, sir. I did not go armed no more than I have always been in the habit of going when I went on that road.

Q. Did you go to that poll armed?—A. I went there with a revolver; but then, sir, I have never been on that road without a revolver in my pocket.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Were you in the habit of carrying a pistol?—A. Always, sir.

Q. You did not take it that day especially, did you?—A. No, sir. I was attacked on that road once before, sir.

Q. You stated that you signed the managers' return without any protest. State whether you made any affidavit immediately after the election.—A. As quick as I came into Beaufort the next morning.

Q. Setting out the facts substantially as you have stated them here?—A. I did, sir. I went to the chairman of the democratic committee and told him how things had transpired, and made an affidavit to that effect before Mr. Lookwood, in Beaufort.

JOHN F. PORTEOUS sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Question. What is your age?—Answer. Fifty-one, sir.

Q. Where do you reside?—A. I reside in Beaufort.

Q. Where did you attend at the recent election?—A. At Gray's Hill precinct, where I was United States supervisor.

Q. What time in the day did you reach there?—A. About half past six in the morning.

Q. How long did you remain there?—A. Until between eleven and twelve at night.

Q. You remained until the votes were counted?—A. I remained until the votes were counted.

Q. How many white men were at that poll that day?—A. I and Mr. Van Ness were the only two.

Q. How many colored men were there that day?—A. Four hundred and seventy-six voted. There was a large crowd there.

Q. Do you know how many democratic votes were cast there that day?—A. There were nine democrat votes cast there; the balance were republican.

Q. Please state the manner in which that election was conducted; what occurred during the day on the part of the electors there, and all that you saw and heard.—A. Well, when we went out, sir, Mr. Van Ness, who was the democratic manager—I acted that day as neither a democrat nor republican. I acted that day simply as United States supervisor. Mr. Van Ness was the democrat manager; took out the tickets. I, without looking at the tickets, took the tickets and put them on the window, where the parties could see them, and said, "Here, men, are the tickets for you to vote." When they had commenced to vote for some time, I, not having anything to do, went out to the back door, and was speaking with some of them, when I was accosted very roughly by a negro, who asked me what I meant by bringing out the democratic votes. I said, "I have not brought out any votes here, but I have come out here with a man who did." They set upon me then, and when I got back in the house I saw they set upon a negro man, who was chairman of the precinct. I saw them hustling and maltreating him. They charged him with having done a dishonest thing.

He was a colored man, they said, who had deceived them in giving the democrats his support, because he was in favor of a man in Beaufort named Judd. They brandished sticks over him, and rolled him on the ground, and otherwise ill-treated him and hustled him very much. They then came into the room where the managers were, and filled the room where the box was kept. This was when the voting was done. The room was filled, and I was following out my instructions. They made such a noise, and were so violent in their denunciations of all democrats, that it was my necessity to call upon the head men to stop it. At the finishing of the counting of the votes, they all went out, and they staid there until between eleven and twelve o'clock at night, when we took the poll to Beaufort. That is a full account of that day's doing.

Q. Is that all you saw and heard that day?—A. I saw while I was out a Mr. Hammond, a white man, a section-master on the railroad there, who wanted to come up to the window. The window was surrounded by a crowd. I said, "If you wish to get up, I will try and go up with you." He said, "Mr. Porteous, I do not like the looks of those people, and I would not like to vote here."

Q. Did he vote?—A. He did not at that place.

Q. Did you see him after he left that day?—A. No, sir; not that day.

Q. Did he return to the polls afterward?—A. No, sir.

Q. What did they do to you before you went into this house?—A. They shoved against me, and one of them got hold of my leg, and attempted to throw me down, and, being a strong man, I prevented them. They tore out of my hands the instructions I attempted to read to them—my instructions of my duty as supervisor.

Q. You attempted to read it to them?—A. Yes, sir; and when I commenced a man seized it out my hands and ran away with it.

Q. Did you get it any more?—A. I did not; I did not see that man again.

Q. What did you do then?—A. I went up then to this chairman of the precinct and called upon him to prevent any maltreatment of a United States official of the place. I went up to him and told him I called upon him as a United States official to be protected in the discharge of my duty. I wished to get back into the house where I could carry them on. Some three or four old negroes there, who knew me well, managed to get me back to the house.

Q. When you got into the house did they leave the door open?—A. No, sir; the door was shut to immediately. In fact, I had to stand by the door some time before it was opened.

Q. Did you remain in there all day?—A. I staid in the house all day.

Q. Why did you remain in the house all day?—A. Because, sir, I knew it would be unsafe to go out.

Q. Did you hear that crowd that morning say anything after you got in the house? and, if so, state what you heard them say.—A. I went to the window and spoke to them again, and to assure them that I had done nothing that deserved anything like their suspicion. They then came to the window, and I had to shut it down, because they made such a noise, saying, "If you come out here, we will kill you."

Q. Did they crowd around the polls that day; and, if so, to what extent?—A. They crowded the window, where the poll was held, in such a way—well, as I told you, Mr. Hammond could not get up to it at the time he made the attempt.

Q. That is, this white man did not vote?—A. It was crowded so he could not get up. He was afraid to attempt it, and he went off without voting.

Q. Did you hear any threats there during the day against any colored men if they voted the democratic ticket?—A. I heard them say it was a republican poll, and that they would kill any negro men who wished to vote the democrat ticket. They did not say they would kill, but they said any negro man who voted the democrat ticket should be killed.

Q. Do you know of any colored men there who were prevented from voting the democratic ticket that day?—A. I knew of three men who told me they meant to vote the democratic ticket, who did not vote after they heard these expressions.

Q. Did you hear any threats, before the election, by colored voters, at Gray's Hill, against any colored persons if they should vote the democratic ticket?—A. The Saturday before the election I heard a man at Swamp Place—I am getting wood in the country, and going backward and forward—

(Mr. Lapham objects to the witness stating what was told him the Saturday before the election.)

Q. Was anybody present besides this person you were talking to?—A. Yes, sir; three boys and this man.

Q. Were they voters?—A. No, sir; the boys were not voters; the man was a voter, but the boys were too young to vote.

Q. Did you hear of any threats there at Beaufort before the election?—A. At Beaufort I heard a great many men say that they would break the head of any colored man who voted the democratic ticket.

(Mr. Lapham renews objection.)

Q. How long was that before the election?—A. We have had democratic meetings in Beaufort once a week all through the fall, and I heard on two or three occasions when we would come they said they would receive the colored men who joined the democratic party with jeers and threats, and I heard them then say that they would break the head of any colored man who dared to vote the democratic ticket.

Q. Those threats were made in a crowd?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were the colored men at the polls at Gray's Hill that day armed with guns, clubs, or sticks?—A. They were armed with clubs and sticks, but I saw no guns.

Q. Do you know whether the colored men in that neighborhood were generally armed or not?—A. All through that country the colored men are generally armed.

Q. When you had these club meetings did any colored men attend them?—A. There was some fifty or sixty members before the election—colored members

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. This is at Beaufort you are speaking of, is it?—A. Yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. Were these threats you speak of by these colored men made as they would come from these meetings?—A. Yes, sir; on the outside, on the street, as they would come out.

Q. Were there any companies of armed colored men at Beaufort?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many?—A. I cannot tell you how many; I know that there was one. I cannot tell you how many; I know of one.

Q. Was that a military company?—A. It is a company of State militia.

Q. Did they continue their organization up to the election?—A. O, yes, sir; their organization is a regular thing; it is the national guard of the State.

Q. Did that company have parades there at Beaufort up to the time of the election?—A. I think they did; I did not see them parading.

Q. But you know there was a company?—A. I know that they are there. I have seen the notice for them to parade, but I have never seen them parading.

Q. Did you make any report after that Gray's Hill election of what transpired there?—A. Yes, sir; I made a report to Mr. Poyner, the chief supervisor of the State, of the facts that I have stated to you gentlemen.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. Did you ever know of a rifle-club among the white men at Beaufort?—A. No, sir.

Q. There never has been one?—A. No, sir; never has been one.

Q. Do the white men have arms?—A. I suppose so, sir; I do not know how generally it is so.

Q. How do you know the colored men had arms?—A. Because I seen them.

Q. Have you not seen the white men have arms?—A. Here and there I have.

Q. Have you seen all the colored men have them?—A. No, sir; I know the colored men in the company; I know they have the guns which they are furnished with as soldiers.

Q. They are the militia; they do not all belong to the national guard, do they?—A. There are very few negroes in the town of Beaufort who are not members of some favorite association; and the white men generally have guns—have weapons; pistols or guns.

Q. Did you have one that day?—A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Don't you own one?—A. I have a pistol and a gun both, but I had nothing but a stick with me that day.

Q. What kind of a gun have you?—A. A double-barreled sporting-gun.

Q. Beaufort is your voting-place, is it not?—A. Beaufort was my home, sir, before the war; I had a very good home there, sir.

Q. It is where you live now, is it not?—A. I am living there now. I have been spending the summer there.

Q. How far is Gray's Hill from Beaufort?—A. Some seven miles.

Q. Who appointed you a supervisor?—A. Judge Bryan, here in this town—United States district judge.

Q. Who selected you for the place?—A. I suppose our democratic club.

Q. What were your duties as supervisor?—A. My duties as supervisor was to see that the votes were properly counted; and to see that they were properly put into the box, and to make a return of them to the general supervisor; to place myself in some convenient position in regard to the box, so that I could see that everything was fairly done in the election.

Q. What was the first thing you did when you got there?—A. The first thing I did when I got there was to put the tickets upon the window, for the convenience of the men voting.

Q. Upon what window?—A. The window near the box in which the votes were put.

Q. What did you say as you did that?—A. I said, "Here are votes which you can choose."

- Q. Is that the language which you used?—A. That is the language I used.
- Q. Did you not state on your direct examination, "Here is the ticket you want to vote?"—A. I said, "Here are the tickets you can vote."
- Q. Did you not say, "Here are the tickets you want to vote?"—A. No; I did not say anything about "want to vote." If I said "want," I meant "can."
- Q. You placed the tickets there and said, "Here are the tickets you can vote?"—A. Yes, sir. I put the tickets there for their convenience.
- Q. How many?—A. I did not count them. There was a large bundle of them.
- Q. How many would you judge you put there?—A. I cannot judge at all; I suppose there was at least a hundred. There was a bundle of them.
- Q. There were not enough for all the electors, were there?—A. I presume not. I say there was about a hundred.
- Q. They were democratic votes?—A. I did not see whether they were democratic or not.
- Q. Do you mean to say you did not know that they were democratic votes?—A. Yes, sir; I mean to say I did not look at them to see what they were.
- Q. Did you not look to see if they were democratic votes?—A. No, sir; I did not. They were carried out by the democratic manager, and I therefore supposed, if I had supposed about it, that they were democratic votes; but I did not look at them, one way or the other.
- Q. From whom did you receive them?—A. From Mr. Van Ness, who was the democratic manager at that poll.
- Q. You and Van Ness were from Beaufort?—A. We were from Beaufort.
- Q. Do you know where he got the tickets?—A. No, sir; I do not.
- Q. Did you not do anything with those votes, except to lay them on the window there, and make the remark you have stated?—A. No, sir; I did not.
- Q. You did not retain any in your hand?—A. No, sir; I did not.
- Q. Did you talk with any of the men who were there about voting them?—A. No, sir; not one.
- Q. Did not endeavor to get any one to vote them?—A. Certainly not.
- Q. Were you not charged with a little deception in putting those votes there?—A. No, sir; I was not. I told you a man came up to me and charged me with having carried the votes out to deceive them.
- Q. That is what I say. That was the first thing they said to you?—A. I said that in my direct examination.
- Q. That was the first thing that was said to you, was it not?—A. No, sir.
- Q. Among the first?—A. No, sir.
- Q. It was before any violence was offered?—A. Yes, sir; before any violence was offered.
- Q. Do you know whether Hammond voted anywhere that day?—A. No, sir.
- Q. Where did he live?—A. He lives about five miles from that poll.
- Q. What was his voting-precinct?—A. That was his voting-precinct.
- Q. You knew there were only very few, if any, democratic voters at Gray's Hill, did you not?—A. I knew that there could not be many.
- Q. What time was it that Hammond was there?—A. Hammond was there, I think, about between ten and eleven o'clock in the morning.
- Q. How long did he stay?—A. I did not see him there for more than ten or fifteen minutes. How long he staid there I do not know.
- Q. I thought you said he went away?—A. I did not see him go away. I left him at the place. He told me he could not vote there.
- Q. You don't know how long he remained there?—A. I do not know how long he remained there; but I know he did not vote there.
- Q. You do not know but that he left at once?—A. I do not know whether he left at once or not; I left him standing there.
- Q. You did not see him afterward?—A. No, sir.
- Q. You did not see him try to vote?—A. No, sir.
- Q. It was only about ten o'clock you say?—A. Between ten and eleven.
- Q. And nearly all the voters of the district had arrived there at that time, had they not?—A. There was a large crowd at that time when he was there.
- Q. Three or four hundred?—A. About the window, sir, there was some thirty or forty.
- Q. The voting was going on rapidly?—A. Yes, sir; at that time.
- Q. There were three or four hundred persons present, were there not?—A. At least.
- Q. You were not hurt?—A. Not much. A few scratches on my hand were all that I received.
- Q. Did you vote there?—A. Yes, sir; I voted there.
- Q. At what time?—A. I voted there, I think, early in the morning.
- Q. Before you laid these ballots out, or after?—A. O, no; after I laid the ballots out I voted. I voted before the violence was done me.
- Q. You voted one of those tickets?—A. One of the tickets that I got from Van Ness, do you mean?

Q. One of the same hundred or so that you laid there on the window?—A. I told him I wanted a democratic ticket.

Q. And you took one of the same?—A. I do not know that it was the same. I took it from Mr. Van Ness.

Q. You took all of them from him, did you not?—A. I took the whole of them, and when I wanted to vote, I said, "Mr. Van Ness, give me a ticket, if you please."

Q. You took one additional from him?—A. I do not know whether I did or not.

Q. You cannot say whether you voted one of the same kind that Van Ness gave you to lay on the window or not?—A. No, sir. I know I voted the democratic ticket; that is all I know.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. You stated, in answer to a question that Judge Lapham put to you, that you did not see Hammond try to vote. That has reference to after you entered the house, has it not?—A. To be sure.

Q. Did you not state in your examination-in-chief that before you went into the house you saw Hammond attempt to vote?—A. Yes, sir; I did. I did not say I did not see him. I said, in answer to the question in my examination-in-chief, that I did not see him after I had gone to the house.

Q. Did you by that answer have reference to what occurred after you went into the house?—A. Yes, sir; of course.

Q. Did you, or did you not, see him attempt to vote before you went into the house?—A. I seen him there, and I offered to go up with him to the place of voting, and he said he was afraid to go.

Q. Were you not at that time trying to get up to the polls?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. I understood you to say that the crowd was so great you could not get up?—A. Yes, sir; the crowd was so violent.

Q. And after that you did not see him?—A. No, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. Did he make any effort to go up to the polls?—A. Do you mean when I was outside?

Q. At any time, did you see him make any effort to go up to the polls? I want a categorical answer to my question.—A. I said to him, "Mr. Hammond, if you wish to vote, there is the window;" and he said, "I won't vote; they are so violent, I am afraid to vote."

Q. Did you see him make any effort to go up to the polls?—A. No, sir, I did not.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. At the time he made that remark to you, did he move toward the polls?—A. He was standing, I think, about six feet from the window at the time. When I came around and saw him, I said, "Have you come to vote?" and he said, "I have come to vote, but I am afraid to vote; they are so violent."

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. At that precise point they were voting rapidly; thirty or forty voters around the window?—A. Yes, sir; they were going on voting.

The committee here adjourned to meet to-morrow, (Tuesday, December 26, 1876,) at 10 o'clock a. m.

CHARLESTON, S. C., December 26, 1876.

The committee met pursuant to adjournment.

LAZARUS LUDD (colored) sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Question. How old are you?—Answer. So far as I can judge, I think I is about twenty-seven—between twenty-seven and twenty-eight; along there somewhere.

Q. Where do you live?—A. On James's Island.

Q. In this county?—A. Yes, sir; right in Charleston County—right across here.

Q. How long have you lived there?—A. About eleven or twelve years.

Q. Where did you attend at the recent election?—A. At James's Island.

Q. At what voting place?—A. Dill's Bluff preeluct—right at the ferry there.

Q. That is the polling-place, is it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you vote there that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What ticket did you vote?—A. The democratic ticket, sir.

Q. Do you know how many colored people were there at that poll that day?—A. I could not tell you how much was there at the time I was there.

Q. About how many were there while you were there?—A. About ten or twelve, as near as I could guess to it.

Q. How many white people were there when you were there?—A. Three, altogether, sir.

Q. What time did you vote in the morning?—A. Well, sir, I couldn't tell you to the exact hour, but I could guess. I think between ten and eleven o'clock, as near as I could guess.

Q. How long did you stay?—A. I didn't stay not longer than about five or six minutes, sir.

Q. Why did you go away so soon after voting?—A. Because I were afraid the people would try to injure me, sir.

Q. Who was it you were afraid would injure you?—A. The colored people, sir.

Q. Why were you afraid they would injure you?—A. Because they had threatened me once or twice already, sir.

Q. They had threatened you before that day?—A. Before the election, and at that very day, sir.

Q. What did they say?—A. They told me that if I votes the democrat ticket that I shau't enjoy myself nor the ticket any longer.

Q. Is that all they said? Did they say anything else?—A. They said more than that. They tell me that if I votes that ticket that they was going to beat me, sir.

Q. Where did they first make those threats?—A. The first they made those threats was about two miles from the place, sir.

Q. Were there any persons present when they made that statement?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. About how many colored people altogether when they made that threat?—A. About twenty-five, sir.

Q. Did they make any threats at the poll on the day of election? and if so, state what they said.—A. Yes, sir; just at the poll. As I went up they ask me what ticket I be going to vote. They brought the republican ticket before me, and I tell them that I didn't feel like voting that ticket; I was going to vote the democrats' ticket. They said if I votes that ticket they would beat me.

Q. How many were around when they said that?—A. About fifteen, sir. There was twelve at the poll, and I think I met two before I got to the poll, about two acres from the poll.

Q. Did you go up and vote the democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did they say?—A. After I done voting they say—there was some ahead of me who threatened to beat me, but I was on a horse and I galloped very fast past them. They ask me to stop awhile; that they want to speak to me; but I wouldn't stop. I was afraid they was going to make to injure me.

Q. Were any of them armed at that poll?—A. No, sir; I didn't see any with arms at all.

Q. Did you see any with sticks?—A. Yes, sir; one of them had a little stick—a little, dry, cotton stick—as if he was walking with it in his hand.

Q. Do you know of any colored men in your neighborhood who wanted to vote the democratic ticket who were prevented from voting it?—A. I didn't see myself.

Q. Did you see them examine or demand to look at the ballot of any voter before he went up to vote?—A. I seen them looking at the ballot-box very stroug, but it didn't make any impression.

Q. I mean the ticket. Did you see them take the ticket from anybody who went up to vote, to see what ticket they voted?—A. No, sir; I didn't see nobody.

Q. Do you know whether there was an armed company or club of colored men in that neighborhood?—A. Not at that time, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. How many white men live on the island?—A. As far as I can guess about twenty-five or thirty, I think, sir.

Q. Have they arms?—A. No, sir; not as I knows of.

Q. Neither guns nor pistols?—A. I never seen any, sir.

Q. Are they all democrats?—A. Yes, sir; all the white mens is democrats, sir.

Q. You saw no one have arms at the election?—A. No, sir; I did not see no one have arms at the election.

Q. How far is that island from here?—A. I suppose, sir, about two miles, across.

Q. What is the population of the island? How many people are there on it?—A. Well, I thinks it is about three miles.

Q. How many people live on it?—A. O, I could not tell that. It is a crowd; I haven't an idea; I could scarcely tell you; I thinks it is most over a thousand.

Q. Men, women, and children, you mean—all classes?—A. All classes I mean, sir.

Q. Do you know how many votes were cast at that poll?—A. No, sir; I couldn't tell you.

Q. Who did you first tell of this?—A. The first person I ever tell of this is Mr. Mitchell.

Q. When did you first tell him ?—A. I told him after election—I think two days after the election.

Q. Where does he live ?—A. He live on Edisto ; he keeps a law-office here in the city.

Q. How came you to come here as a witness ?—A. Mr. Mitchell tolled me about a gentlemen committee here, and ask me if I give witness about it—if I have anything serious to give it ; and I said yes, and I come.

Q. He requested you to come, did he ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did he request you to come ?—A. It was Friday, sir.

Q. When did you come here ?—A. I come on Saturday, sir.

Q. Have you been in the city ever since ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he tell you what fee you would get ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he tell you ?—A. Three dollars, sir.

Q. Three dollars per day ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you been paid anything ?—A. No, sir.

Q. Where have you been stopping in the city ?—A. I have not stopped ; I goes at night and comes in the day.

Q. You go home every night ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you been back here every day ?—A. I come here Saturday, and I have been back here, but not to this house.

Q. No ; but you have been in the city ?—A. I have been back yesterday, sir, Monday.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. You reported here Saturday, did you ?—A. Yes, sir.

WM. ANDERSON (colored) sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Question. How old are you ?—Answer. Well, sir, I am now arrived at twenty-nine, as near as I can guess at it.

Q. Where do you live ?—A. I lives up Saint James Goose Creek, at the Eighteen-Mile house.

Q. Where did you vote on the day of the late election ?—A. I votes at Whaley's church.

Q. What ticket did you vote ?—A. I votes the republican ticket, sir.

Q. Did you vote the ticket of your own choice ?—A. No, sir.

Q. Why did you vote it then ?—A. Well, sir, the reason I didn't vote was because I didn't care to get hurt.

Q. Tell all the circumstances under which you gave that vote, why you gave it, what was said to you, and what led you to believe you would be hurt if you voted the other ticket.—A. Well, sir, I went there intending to vote the democrat ticket, according to my mind, and my feeling, and to my desires, on that day, and after going there to vote, and seeing that mens said that any man who vote any other ticket except the republican ticket that he would not go home alive, and I had some tickets in my pockets otherwise—

Q. What other tickets did you have in your pockets ?—A. Some of those tickets they call bogus democrat tickets. They had C. C. Bowen's name on it, and A. P. Ford, representative of this precinct, and they was not, of course, red like the republican tickets was ; and the mens that saw me with them in my hand they said, there is a man got some of the democrat tickets. One man points me out, and there was ten or fifteen threatened me, and I went off from the poll and burnt them up.

Q. What did they say to you about it ?—A. They said if I votes them I would not go home alive.

Q. And you went off and burned them ?—A. I walk off with another man. I knowed if I staid there I would get hurt, because I feel it from their actions. They followed me till they see I get out of reach of the poll, and in company with another man I walk off a distance from the poll and burnt the tickets, and after while I come back. I knowed they would take the tickets away from me and buru the tickets besides. So I went and vote the republican ticket and leave the polls.

Q. What was the conduct of these colored republicans at the polls there ; how did they behave themselves ?—A. Well, they behaves themselves very disagreeable to a man they thought was going to vote against their principles.

Q. What did they say and do ?—A. They said if any man vote the democrat ticket there that he would not go back home alive. And then again they said, any man that had tickets they would snatch them out of their hands and tear them up ; and so they just went around in a gang of 18, 20, and 30, and any one they found with democrat tickets they went right to him in crowds ; right to one man. I had no idea anybody would interfere with me voting just as I choosed to vote. I had always been voting the republican ticket up to the last two years.

Q. Who did you vote for two years ago?—A. I votes for Judge Green two years ago sir.

Q. And at the late election you intended to vote the democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hear any threats before the election against colored men who proposed to vote the democratic ticket?—A. I heard many a man threaten about any man they find voting the democrat ticket at the poll, what they intended to do.

Q. What did they say?—A. They said if they vote the democrat ticket they would not come home from the poll alive.

Q. Did they have any arms at that poll?—A. They didn't have them exactly right where I votes at, but they had arms off a piece from the poll, in the public road, about an acre from the church; the church sets back about an acre.

Q. How many guns did you see there?—A. I didn't exactly count to see how many was there; but I know there was over thirty-odd.

Q. Were they stacked up in the road?—A. Just setting off there; some have the men by them.

Q. Did they have any clubs or sticks?—A. Yes, sir; they had clubs in their hands—sticks in their hands.

Q. Do you know of any other colored men there that day who wanted to vote the democratic ticket and were interferred with or prevented from voting?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many?—A. I knowed about six or seven more that lived near me.

Q. Do you know how they did vote?—A. No, sir; I could not tell; two of them telled me—

Q. Did they tell you there on the ground or since?—A. They told me since that they voted the democrat ticket.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Who do you work for?—A. I have been working for the Charleston Mining Company.

Q. Do you work for them now?—A. I just stopped a little before the holidays, and according to the weather.

Q. How many men had that company at the time of the election?—A. Well, I couldn't tell; they works sometimes over one hundred and fifty men.

Q. How many about that time—election-time?—A. I could-not tell exactly how many was working on the fields; I was whitewashing for the mining company.

Q. Tell as near as you can.—A. I suppose there was some ninety-odd men working there, to the best of my judgment.

Q. Do you know of any of them being discharged soon after the election?—A. No, sir.

Q. Who did you get the bogus tickets from?—A. They was brought up by a young man by the name of Sancho Gant.

Q. Where does he live?—A. He lives on Saint James Goose Creek.

Q. He gave them to you, did he?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where?—A. He gave them to me near about Twelve-Mile polls.

Q. How far from the election?—A. About three miles.

Q. How many did he give you?—A. I had two hundred and fifty of them, sir.

Q. What do you call them bogus tickets for?—A. They didn't have any party name on them. They generally call them the bogus ticket, sir, because it was not the regular ticket.

Q. Did he call them bogus tickets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why were they not regular tickets?—A. I couldn't tell exactly myself, sir.

Q. What did you get them for?—A. I get them to issue to all who vote the same ticket I was going to vote.

Q. That was the one you were going to vote?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. It had Bowen's name on it, you say?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the electors were Hayes and Wheeler?—A. Yes, sir; I believe it were.

Q. And Hampton for governor?—A. Yes, sir; that's right, sir.

Q. That was the ticket you were going to vote?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The colored people knew that you brought those tickets there, did they not?—A. Yes, sir; they didn't know it till I showed it.

Q. That made them a little angry, didn't it, to see you there with those tickets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you distribute any of them?—A. I didn't issue any, sir.

Q. You could not get anybody to take them, could you?—A. No, sir; them that would took them was afraid, and I was afraid to hand them because when I pulled a roll out of my pocket I had to put it back and clean up from the poll.

Q. How long were you there before you went and burnt them?—A. I was not there ten minutes.

Q. They made short work of those bogus tickets, then?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did you stay after you voted?—A. I staid there about two hours, sir.

Q. Did you peddle any of those regular ballots there that day—distribute any to other persons?—A. No, sir.

Q. What were you doing those two hours?—A. I was just there talking one to another, sir.

Q. Did the white men have arms there?—A. No, sir.

Q. You are sure of that?—A. Yes, sir; I didn't see any; there was not a great many of them there.

Q. You did not see any white men have arms?—A. No, sir.

Q. Were you in the church?—A. No, sir; I didn't go in the church, but I went to the door and could see into the church.

Q. Do you know whether they had pistols?—A. I couldn't tell whether they had them or not; if they had them I could not see them.

Q. Who was the white manager at that place?—A. I don't know exactly of the white managers. I know one was Charley Chors; Mr. Willie Hard, they was the only two I knowed there.

Q. How many white men were there?—A. I couldn't tell exactly, sir; I didn't take particular notice.

Q. Did you tell Chors or Hard how you wanted to vote?—A. No, sir; I didn't have any conversation with either one, sir.

Q. When did you come here to Charleston?—A. I came down this morning.

Q. Who told you to come?—A. Nobody didn't tell me to come, particular, sir. Some of the boys was telling me about it.

Q. What boys?—A. The young man who was down here told me about it last week.

Q. What young man?—A. His name is Daniel Moultrie.

Q. What did he tell you about coming here?—A. He tell me that the committees was down here taking the testimony of the election at Whaley's church, and he asked me if I didn't want to go down and give my testimony. I tell him I would go down if it was necessary.

Q. Did he state what pay you would get?—A. No, sir; he didn't say anything to me about any pay.

Q. Didn't anybody tell you before you came here?—A. No, sir.

Q. How did you come?—A. I came down on the train, sir.

Q. Who paid your fare?—A. I paid it myself.

Q. You have always been a republican?—A. Up to the last two years, sir.

Q. Were you ever a slave?—A. No, sir.

Q. Where did you live during the war?—A. I was bred and born in Morgan County, State of Georgia, sir.

Q. When did you come into this State?—A. I came down here about two years before the war ended, sir.

Q. Why did you come to this State?—A. Well, I was traveling about from one place to another, wherever I could get work to do, sir.

Q. And you came to this State for that purpose?—A. Yes, sir.

SAMUEL GREEN (colored) sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Question. What is your age?—Answer. I will be thirty-five years of age the first day of this June coming.

Q. Where do you live?—A. Up at the Eighteen-Mile House, sir.

Q. Where did you attend at the recent election?—A. At Mr. Whaley's, sir.

Q. At Whaley's church?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you vote there that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What ticket did you vote?—A. Well, I voted a republican ticket, sir.

Q. Was that the ticket of your choice; did you intend to vote it when you went there?—A. No, sir; that was not exactly my choice when I started from home.

Q. What ticket did you intend to vote when you started from home?—A. When I started from home, I started intentionally to vote the democratic ticket.

Q. Why did you not vote the democratic ticket when you got there?—A. The reason why I did not vote it was because I was afraid of the republicans after I got there.

Q. State what you heard in regard to the republican ticket after you got there.—A. Because I had the ticket in my hand and there was a man seen it, and I suppose he must have knowed it was a democrat ticket, and he asked me what I was going to do with it, and I told him I was going to vote it, and he went and spoke it among the mens there and so they got at me; so, consequently I had to get out of the way, and after I went off he took the ticket away from me, one man did, and when I come back and walked about there awhile, I seen Adam Ford who was walking around, and had some republican tickets in his hand, and he came up at the time and offered me a republican ticket, and I took it from him; it was a republican ticket. Well, I voted that.

Q. Who is Adam Ford?—A. He is a colored man, sir; he stays here in the city.

Q. Was he a candidate for any office?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was he running for?—A. He was running for representative, sir.

Q. These republicans that you say got at you, were they colored men?—A. Yes, sir; they was colored mens.

Q. What did they say to you about voting the democratic ticket?—A. Well, the man that first hailed me about the ticket, he went off and "spoke" it among the rest of the men, and I was standing there, and they said they wanted to know where was me, where was the man; and as soon as they made for me I made off; I did not let them get to me at all.

Q. Who took the ticket from you?—A. There was a man took the ticket from me, by the name of Jerry Aiken; he asked me to let him see the ticket, and I let him look at it, and he took it and tore it right up.

Q. What did he say?—A. He didn't say anything more after I gave him the ticket; he took it and tore it up, and he told me I had no business to vote any such ticket as that; I did not say anything; the party was so strong there, I would get abused or something of that kind.

Q. Did you hear them make any threat there against colored men if they voted the democratic ticket? And if so, state what you heard.—A. The republicans allowed that the democratic ticket should not pass there by no colored man.

Q. About how many colored men were there?—A. I never tell you rightly how many colored men was there, there was so many of them; I did not take particular notice how many.

Q. Did you see any arms?—A. O yes, sir; they had plenty of arms.

Q. What were they?—A. Guns, sir.

Q. Had they any clubs or sticks?—A. O, yes, sir; they had plenty of clubs and guns.

Q. Did you hear any threats against colored men who voted the democratic ticket before the election? If so, what did they say?—A. Well, I never heard them say particularly about what they would do before the election to any man who voted the democratic ticket; no more than what I heard them say that day, that no democratic ticket should pass there by a colored man.

Q. Do you know of any other colored men who were prevented from voting the democratic ticket, who was interfered with by these men?—A. No, sir; I do not know of any other colored man particularly, personally, excepting the colored name I called.

Q. Are the colored men in that neighborhood generally armed?—A. O, yes, sir; they have got guns.

Q. (By Mr. LAPHAM.) Were not the white men armed, too?—A. Yes, sir; all the white men that is about there; all that I see have got guns, sir.

Q. How long have you known of the white men having guns?—A. The white men have always guns, just common shot-guns, riding around, driving, &c.

Q. Ever since you knew them they have kept arms, have they?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have they a rifle-club there?—A. No, sir; not to my knowing.

Q. How long have the colored people had arms?—A. The colored people had arms ever since freedom up there; ever since I was about there.

Q. Have they been getting arms all the while, ever since you have been living there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is, they have more than when you first went there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The colored men don't have pistols, do they?—A. No, sir; I did not see any of them have pistols.

Q. The white people have pistols, haven't they?—A. I never seen any of the white people have pistols. They might have them, but I never seen them.

Q. If the colored people carried pistols you would be likely to know it, would you not?—A. Well, sir, I do not know, because they is concealed arms.

Q. Who do you work for?—A. Well, I do not work for any one particularly, sir; I just gets a job anywhere I can get it.

Q. How came you to come here as a witness?—A. Well, I heard about this, sir, and I came down.

Q. Who did you hear it from?—A. I heard it from a gentleman who went from down here up there, Saturday.

Q. Who was he?—A. A man by the name of Isaac Grant.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Is he a colored man?—A. Yes, sir; a colored man.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Did you hear what fees the witnesses were getting?—A. No, sir; he did not say anything about what they were getting.

Q. How did you come?—A. Well, I came on those terms, what he said. I considered I was a free man, and I would like to receive my rights as much so as anybody else.

Q. How did you come here—in what way?—A. I walked down, sir.

Q. When?—A. I came down here yesterday.

Q. How far did you come?—A. Well, it is eighteen miles. They call it Eighteen-Mile House. It must be eighteen miles, sir.

Q. Any one come with you?—A. No, sir; I comes by myself.

Q. You were not afraid to come out alone?—A. No, sir; I was not afraid.

Q. What ticket were you going to vote; I understood you to use this expression: That the republican ticket was not exactly your choice. You stated you voted the republican ticket; Mr. Phillips asked you if that was the ticket of your choice, and you said it was not exactly your choice.—A. No, sir; that was not exactly my intention; I was intended to vote the democratic ticket.

Q. You intended to vote a part of either ticket?—A. I was intended to vote the democratic ticket.

Q. Who did you get the ticket from that you showed to Aiken?—A. I got it from a young man by the name of Saicho Grant.

Q. Where does he live?—A. He lives up on Ten-Mile Hill.

Q. Is he a white or colored man?—A. A colored man.

Q. How far does he live from you?—A. I do not know exactly how far from me; but it is below me.

Q. When did you get it?—A. I got the ticket like I was going to vote to-morrow. I got it to-night.

Q. The day before the election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who were you at work for at that time?—A. At that time I was working for Mr. Brinkle.

Q. What was his business?—A. He was digging up rocks out of the river—phosphate rock.

WILLIAM WRIGHT (colored) sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Question. Where do you live?—Answer. At Eighteen-Mile House.

Q. In this county?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you attend at the late election?—A. Whaley's, sir.

Q. How far did you live from Whaley's church?—A. Well, I suppose, about as near as I can judge—I think either four or five miles. I could not judge it any closer.

Q. Did you vote there that day?—A. Yes, sir; I vote there, sir.

Q. What ticket did you vote?—A. I vote the republican ticket, sir.

Q. Did you go there to vote the republican ticket?—A. I goes there to vote the democratic ticket on that day.

Q. Why did you not vote the democratic ticket?—A. Because I could not do it, sir, on that day.

Q. Why could you not do it?—A. The reason I could not do it on that day—after I got there, about eight o'clock in the morning, there was some two or three hundred men on the ground and the lot they had, and they said any man who vote the democrat ticket they would beat him, and I thought I would not like to get a beating on that day and I vote the republican ticket. That was my object in voting.

Q. Did the colored men have any arms there that day?—A. I did not see none of that, sir. The way I come I did not see any of them.

Q. You did not come that way?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see any clubs or sticks?—A. Every man had clubs.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. The colored people are in the habit of carrying clubs or sticks when they walk, aren't they?—A. Some does, sir, and some don't.

Q. Don't they generally?—A. Some generally tote sticks.

Q. How is it with you; do you walk with one?—A. I do not walk with a stick no time, no matter where I goes.

Q. Who do you work for?—A. I work for the company, sir, this year.

Q. What company?—A. The Ravenel Company, sir.

Q. Who told you about coming here?—A. William Anderson.

Q. When?—A. He told me last week.

Q. Did he tell you what pay you would get?—A. No, sir; he did not tell me about that. He only told me that some committees in Charleston was a finding out about the election at Whaley's Church.

Q. Did you not learn from any one what fees witnesses got for coming here?—A. They never tell me anything. They first tell me about the committees.

Q. How did you come?—A. I come on the train this morning, sir.

Q. Who paid your fare?—A. I paid it myself coming down, sir.

Q. You do not expect any pay, do you?—A. No, sir.

Q. You are going to be disappointed.—A. Well, sir, I don't mind, sir, so I gets my rights, sir, so I can choose as I want hereafter. I do not want any fee. I am able to work for mine, sir.

Q. How old are you?—A. I am being, sir, in my twenty-eighth year.

Q. You have always voted the republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir; I voted the republican ticket on that day.

Q. Have you not always voted it?—A. I always voted with the republicans, sir.

Q. You did not feel very bad about voting it this time?—A. Well, sir, it did not come to my mind on that time to vote it. If a man goes against his mind he must feel bad.

Q. Did you really feel bad because you voted that day as you have said?—A. Of course I feel bad about voting the republican ticket.

Q. Who did you tell first?—A. William Anderson was one I told. I told Guss Johnson and I told several more of the boys that I was going to vote the democrat ticket.

Q. My question is, who did you tell about voting the republican ticket?—A. I did not tell nobody, because the whole party know I vote the republican ticket on that day.

Q. You have not talked about it, then, since the election?—A. I never had any more to say about it.

Q. What was the ticket you had? Who was it for, the first one?—A. I was going to vote that for Hampton.

Q. How was the rest of it? It was for Hampton, but was it for Bowen also?—A. Yes, sir; Bowen's name was on it, sir.

Q. It was what they called the "mixed ticket," was it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is, you were going to vote for the Hayes and Wheeler electors and for Hampton as governor. That is the ticket you were going to vote?—A. Yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did you know what electoral names were on the ticket, whether the Hayes and Wheeler or Tilden and Hendricks electors?—A. The ticket what I had, sir, had on Hayes and Wheeler, and Hampton for governor. We concluded we would try Mr. Hampton these two years for governor, sir, and we concluded to vote for him for governor.

Q. With respect to these clubs and sticks that you saw there that day, were you in the habit of seeing as many men carrying sticks on other occasions as you saw on the day of the election?—A. O, yes, sir; there was a lot more carrying sticks than they did carry before, because every man on the ground had a stick there that day.

The committee adjourned to meet to-morrow, (Wednesday, December 27, 1876,) at 10 o'clock a. m.

---

CHARLESTON, S. C., December 27, 1876.

The committee met pursuant to adjournment.

MARION R. COOPER sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:—

Question. Where do you reside?—Answer. At Port Royal, Beaufort County, sir.

Q. How long have you resided there?—A. About five years, sir.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. My occupation at present, sir, is a lumber commission merchant, inspector of lumber. Besides that, I am clerk and treasurer of the town—clerk of council and treasurer.

Q. Where did you vote at the recent election?—A. Paris Island precinct, sir.

Q. What time did you reach that precinct, and how long did you remain?—A. I reached there in the morning a few moments before six—about ten minutes before six by my time. I was there all day, with the exception of about one hour.

Q. What time did those polls open and close?—A. The polls were opened about seven o'clock, sir; a few minutes after seven, and closed at four o'clock.

Q. How many votes were polled there that day?—A. One hundred and fifty-five, I believe it was, sir. I am not positive about that. I kept a tally of the vote, but I left it; I did not think to bring it.

Q. How many republican and how many democratic votes?—A. One hundred and forty-three republican and twelve democratic.

Q. How many colored and how many white voters were there that day?—A. All colored except six. There were six white votes.

Q. Please state how that poll was conducted there that day, and all that you saw and heard there in the matter of interfering with the rights of voters and the peace of the election.—A. When I arrived there in the morning there was no one present; nobody there except Capt. John J. Allen, who went with me as the United States supervisor of election. We arrived at the poll before any one else; and about twenty minutes after, one of the managers came with the ballot-box, and about half an hour later I suppose it was another came. That was about about half past six, and just before seven the other manager arrived with several other voters, and there was some discussion about where they should open the poll. Finally they decided to open it in a school-house, and it was opened in one corner of the school-house without any railing or anything around it. It was perfectly open to all, and the voting commenced. The democratic voters voted immediately after the opening of the poll, with the exception of myself and Captain Allen. The colored men voted right away. They said they wanted to vote before the crowd gathered. They were afraid of some difficulty; that is, those who wanted to vote the democratic ticket, as they had had frequent threats if they voted that ticket. They did not seem to object to a white man voting it, but there was considerable opposition to any colored man voting the democratic ticket. About ten o'clock the crowd began to get pretty loud and boisterous, and a few minutes after I left and went away from the polls; that was the only time I was absent. I was gone perhaps three-quarters of an hour. When I came back they told me that they had had a difficulty. The crowd was very much excited, and I saw a good many of them with clubs in their hands and flourishing them around, and they seemed to be very much excited, and I went to learn the cause. I learned that there had been a disturbance there. After that there was several colored men that came to the polls to vote the democratic ticket, and they had several of the leaders of the republican party with them, I suppose you might call them; they were men who took more interest in it than any others. They stood around the poll all the time, and examined every ticket. A colored man was brought up to see what kind of a ticket he was going to vote, and these colored voters that had democratic tickets had them taken from them. They were pulled off in the crowd and threats made against them that if they voted that ticket they would club them and beat them, and they had their clubs in their hands, and they were taken from them and torn up, and they were given republican tickets, and pulled back to the polls about in the same manner that they were taken away, and voted the republican ticket.

Q. Where was the United States supervisor all this time, and what effort, if any, did he make to prevent this interference?—A. He made some efforts early in the morning to quiet the crowd, but it seemed to have no effect. They did not seem to regard what he said as anything—paid no attention to him; in fact, became worse, if anything—more boisterous. He didn't do anything after that.

Q. What became of him?—A. He staid there. He was right by the ballot-box.

Q. Did he stay in the house?—A. Yes, sir; he staid in the house, took down every man's name that voted—kept a tally-list.

Q. Did any of the crowd through the house where the ballot was being taken?—A. Yes, sir. After 10 o'clock there was not less than 75 or 80 persons in the house. It was a room about 24 by 30.

Q. What were they doing and saying in there?—A. Well, sir, just jabbering around in the negro language, threatening and singing and hallooing and speaking and abusing the democratic candidates in every way—cursing and abusing certain men; taking a democratic ticket, and reading it over, finding Hagood's name, who was in the suppression of the Ellington riot; seeing his name affixed, and Butler's and Hampton's and others of the democratic candidates—using all kinds of language you could imagine and trying to prejudice the others against them, as I supposed.

Q. You speak of their threatening voters. Just state what threats you heard made there against colored men if they voted the democratic ticket.—A. They said that any colored man that voted the democratic ticket they would run him off the island; that he ought to be killed if he voted that ticket; stated that that was a republican poll; that no damn democrat had ever voted there before, and they had no business there now. That remark was frequently made.

Q. Did I understand you to state that they examined the tickets of voters as they came up, to see how they were going to vote?—A. Yes, sir. If they showed them peaceably, they examined them so; if not, they pulled their hands up and prised their fingers open and took the ticket out and looked at it, and if it was a democratic ticket they tore it up. There was at least a dozen, perhaps more, who were treated in the same way.

Q. Did you see them assault any person there that day?—A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. There was a disturbance during the time you were absent, but you did not see it?—A. No, sir; I did not see it. I did see two women pass a few blocks.

Q. Were there women there?—A. I suppose there was thirty.

Q. What were they doing?—A. They had a sort of a dinner. They were furnished a dinner by Congressman Smalls, and they had that up at the polls, and the women came out and had a sort of a jollification over it.

Q. You say Congressman Smalls furnished the dinner that day?—A. Yes, sir; I do not know it to be a fact, but I was told so by the man who cooked the provisions. The man was Grant who told me. I do not know his first name.

Q. State, in that connection, what the parties who were cooking and partaking of the dinner stated there at that time.

[Mr. Lapham objects to the declarations of third parties.]

A. They stated that that dinner was furnished for the republicans, and objected to any democrat eating any of it.

Q. What was the conduct of these negro women at the polls there that day; what did they say and do?—A. They were abusing the democratic negroes. There was one woman there who claimed to be a democrat, and she had a quarrel with the other woman; she had this little fuss with one other woman. They joined in with the men whenever they made any opposition to a colored man voting the democratic ticket, in abusing him and threatening him.

Q. Were there any considerable number of these men armed with clubs there?—A. I saw about twenty with clubs, sir.

Q. Who were the managers of the election there?—A. A colored man by the name of Scott—Dick Scott and Benjamin J. Young, colored, both colored men, and a Mr. Snyder, a white democrat, who was rather a conservative man. He has always voted the republican ticket until this election, so he told me. He was appointed as a democratic manager there.

Q. Did you hear any threats preceding the election made by these colored people against any colored men if they voted the democratic ticket?—A. Not on the island; not around that precinct.

Q. Anywhere around there?—A. I heard them frequently over at Port Royal threatening democrats—threatening to kill them and run them off from the place.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. How far is Port Royal from this precinct?—A. About six miles, sir.

Q. Is it in this precinct or some other precinct?—A. It is in another precinct.

Q. How came you to go there?—A. I went there in the interest of the democratic party.

Q. At whose request?—A. By no particular person's request—voluntarily. The United States supervisor of election asked me to go over, but I was going without his invitation.

Q. Did you stay until the canvass was completed?—A. You mean the canvass at that precinct?

Q. Yes.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the managers all sign it?—A. All signed it, sir.

Q. Any protest made with it?—A. None that I know of, sir.

Q. Do you know the population of that island?—A. No, sir; I do not. I suppose about 450 to 500, perhaps more; I do not think it is less than 450, though. I have been told by one or two of the inhabitants that there is about 600 people there. I do not think that there are that many, because there are not many children on the island.

Q. They are mostly grown people?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know what the voting population, over 21 years of age, is on the island?—A. No, sir.

Q. The most of them are people over 21, aren't they?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And most of them males?—A. No, sir; they are about equally divided. There are some children, but not very many; not as many as there are usually among that many people.

Q. Did you see the mixed ticket, as it is called?—A. I saw four or five different tickets.

Q. I ask you if you saw the mixed ticket; the Hayes and Wheeler electors, and the Hampton State ticket?—A. No, sir; I saw no such ticket there. There was none there to my knowledge.

Q. Please state the different kinds you did see.—A. There was no difference in the presidential electors at all; there was different county tickets mixed with county and State officers, and there was a straight republican ticket. I could not tell the whole ticket; it was a pretty long thing. The only difference was the probate judge, and there was also a democratic ticket; and there were two other county tickets with mixed names; all printed.

Q. Did you take any there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What?—A. The straight democratic ticket.

Q. How many?—A. I suppose about three hundred.

Q. Did you peddle out any?—A. I didn't give out any at all except to—I mean I did not peddle them out singly.

Q. What did you do with the tickets?—A. I gave them to four or five colored men.

Q. Give their names, please.—A. I gave some to John Bird; I gave some to Nelson Pixley and Morris Scott and Loudon Brian; those were all I gave any tickets to.

Q. Had they voted before you gave them these tickets?—A. They had not, sir; I gave them early in the morning.

Q. Did they vote among the first there in the morning?—A. They did, sir.

Q. You did not distribute any singly to electors?—A. No, sir.

Q. Where did you spend the time during the day?—A. Most of the time I spent near the ballot-boxes; sir; sitting down on one of the benches in the school-house.

Q. Did you keep any list?—A. No, sir; I did not keep any list.

Q. Did you see any ballot that was taken out of the hands of any colored man?—A. Yes, sir; I did;

Q. Give his name.—A. I do not know the name of the colored man who had this ballot taken out of his hand, this particular one; I know of several that were pulled away from the polls.

Q. I am inquiring in the case where you saw the ballot that was taken from the colored man.—A. I do not know the colored man's name that the ballot was taken from.

Q. Who took it from him?—A. One Sam Gilyard. He was one of the principals in taking it from him; there were several others.

Q. What time in the day was that?—A. That was about eleven o'clock.

Q. Where were you?—A. I was there, sir; in the house.

Q. Sitting down?—A. At the time I was standing up; I stood up in order to see what they were doing.

Q. Did you take the ballot in your hand?—A. I did not.

Q. What was done with it?—A. It was torn up and thrown on the floor.

Q. Did you pick up the fragments?—A. No, sir.

Q. You do not know the names that were on it?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see any other ballot that was taken from a colored man?—A. Yes, sir; I saw ballots taken from them frequently.

Q. That is not the question. Did you see a ballot taken from any other colored man?—A. Yes, sir; I saw some that were taken from them.

Q. Did you see the ballot taken from them?—A. After it was taken from them, do you mean?

Q. Yes.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Name one.—A. I do not know who they were taken from. I do not remember the names just now, because I never expected to—

Q. Where did you see the ballot?—A. I saw one of the parties—Charles Grant—take it from a colored man, exhibit it and say, "Here is one of the damn democratic tickets."

Q. Did you take it in your hand?—A. Yes, sir; I asked him to let me see it, and he showed it to me.

Q. Who was the man you received it from?—A. Charles Grant.

Q. Do you testify that you saw him take it from a colored man?—A. I did not see him personally take it from him.

Q. You have mentioned one case where you saw a ballot as it was taken from a colored man, and have given the name of the individual. Now was there any other case where you saw a ballot taken away from a colored man?—A. No, sir; I did not examine it after it was taken from him.

Q. In no case?—A. No, sir.

Q. Were you armed?—A. Yes, sir; I had a pocket-pistol in my pocket.

Q. Did the gentleman who was with you have one?—A. No, sir.

Q. You know that he was not?—A. I know he was not—that is, the supervisor of the election—I know that he had no arm at all.

Q. Did you see any other white men with arms?—A. No, sir.

Q. Where did you take your pistol from?—A. I took it with me from Port Royal. I have had it for some time.

Q. Is there a rifle-club at Port Royal?—A. No, sir.

Q. Had you ever attended an election at this precinct before?—A. No, sir.

Q. You saw no injury committed upon any one there that day?—A. No, sir.

Q. What were the women quarreling about; was it at the dinner?—A. Yes, sir; just before dinner.

Q. Were they not objecting to that woman eating there?—A. What woman do you mean?

Q. You said there was a woman there who was a democrat?—A. Yes, sir; I said there was a democratic woman there, but I do not know that she applied to eat. They said that no damn democrat could eat, and she said she had plenty at home; and that is what led to the difficulty.

Q. Did they draw blood?—A. Not that I know of. I did not go near the difficulty. They tore their dresses up a little.

Q. Pull hair any?—A. They do not have any. I did not see any on their heads, and I do not think they had any.

Q. Their heads were not shaved, were they?—A. No, sir; they were tied up in handkerchiefs.

Q. How long have you lived at Port Royal?—A. About five years, sir.

Q. Where did you live before that?—A. In Barnwell County, sir.

Q. How long have you lived there?—A. About 21 or 22 years.

Q. How old are you?—A. I am about 27.

Q. You were born in Barnwell?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you always been a democrat?—A. No, sir.

Q. When did you change?—A. Did not have much of a change to make, sir.

Q. You said that you had not always been a democrat?—A. I did, sir, and I do not claim to be a democrat now.

Q. You said you were.—A. No, sir; I did not; I never said that I was a democrat.

Q. Do you say that you are not?—A. No, sir; I do not say that I am not.

Q. What do you say; are you a democrat?—A. I voted the democratic ticket at the last election, sir—straight. I never done it before. I voted what we called the conservative ticket—republicans and democrats mixed. I voted at the last election before this for Gleaves and for Smalls, because I believed Smalls was the less of the two evils. I believe he claims to be a republican.

Q. Have you ever voted the republican ticket?—A. What republican ticket do you mean?

Q. Any republican ticket.—A. I have voted for the republicans; yes, sir.

Q. Have you ever voted the straight republican ticket?—A. No, sir; I have never voted the straight republican ticket. I never voted any ticket straight until this last one.

Q. When did you first vote?—A. It was in 1868 or 1870; 1870 I believe it was, sir.

Q. Who did you vote for?—A. I voted for Carpenter and Butler.

Q. Were they republicans or democrats?—A. Carpenter was a republican and Butler was a democrat.

Q. What were they running for?—A. Governor and lieutenant-governor of the State in 1870.

Q. Who was running against them?—A. Scott, I believe, sir, run against Carpenter for governor.

Q. Which was elected?—A. Scott, I believe, sir. They claim that he was elected. He served as governor.

Q. Where did you vote that year?—A. Graham precinct, Barnwell County, on the South Carolina Railroad.

Q. In what business is the population of this island engaged?—A. Well, sir, I think some of them are professional rogues, and some of them are fishermen. There are several along there that make it a business to steal old iron and traffic up to Savannah.

Q. Please give the names of those that you say steal.—A. I do not remember the names just now, sir.

Q. Name any one. You have sworn that a portion of them are professional rogues and steal.—A. I do not know the names of many of them. I know one, his name is Joshua Days. I committed him to jail twice for stealing.

Q. Name another.—A. That is about all I can give.

Q. You made the remark that some of them are professional stealers. Now, what is the business, so far as you know, of the people on that island?—A. I just commenced to answer that question. I told you that some of them were professional rogues. There are some that fish for a living, and some that pretend to farm for a living—that is, some of the women. The men never work much; they work sometimes over at Port Royal in discharging ships, to get a little money in that way. That is about all they do, sir—there is nothing else. I do not suppose they make fifty bushels of corn on the whole island.

Q. How many of them do you enumerate as being professional rogues?—A. I do not enumerate any particular number.

Q. You say some; that means more than one?—A. It does.

Q. How many do you say?—A. I do not know how many; I would not undertake to say. I can only express an opinion. I believe there is over half of them that steal for a living.

Q. Did you give the number of white people living there?—A. I do not remember whether I gave them or not.

Q. State how many white people live on the island?—A. I do not know sir. There are two white men that live there, three, I believe, that live there permanently; but as regards their families, I do not know how many they have in a family.

Q. Are there any mulattoes on the island?—A. I believe so, sir; I think there are a few mulattoes there; I am not positive about it.

Q. Do you know whether any of them were slaves in slavery times?—A. No, sir; none of them there that I know of.

Q. You do not know, then, whether they were or not?—A. Yes, sir; I know they were; they frequently told me so, as I now call to mind.

Q. Is there any one that you know who was a slave?—A. No, sir; never saw him while he was in slavery.

Q. You say you have lived five years at Port Royal?—A. Yes, sir; I have, sir.

Q. How often have you been on this island?—A. About six or eight times every year since I have been there, perhaps oftener, sir; I am not positive about that.

Q. You have never lived on it?—A. No, sir.

Q. Never transacted any business there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What?—A. Well, sir, I sold some wood and lumber, and went over there to collect my money from a white man by the name of Niver.

Q. Have you ever had any business with the colored population?—A. Some little, sir. I have sold them a little lumber.

Q. Have you had any difficulty with the laborers there on the island—any strike?—
A. No, sir; they never have any labor on the island.

Q. Has there been any difficulty with the people on the island as to the question of labor?—A. No, sir; there is no labor there. There are no men there that employ labor.

Q. You say some of them are employed at Port Royal?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have they had no trouble there about labor?—A. They had a strike or two a year or two ago.

Q. I mean this year?—A. No, sir; not this year. You can get them at any price you want now.

Q. The poll was opened you say about seven o'clock in the morning?—A. Yes, sir; it was something after seven.

Q. And was closed at what time?—A. At four o'clock, sir, or about four.

Q. Any objection made to closing the polls?—A. None that I heard, sir.

Q. It was done by consent, so far as you know. The people had gotten through voting?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. There was nobody there waiting to vote?—A. No, sir; not that I know of.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Do you know whether the supervisor of election there made a written affidavit with regard to the conduct of this election, or whether any one did?—A. I do, sir; I know that the supervisor made an affidavit and swore to it before me as notary public, and several others.

Q. With regard to the ballots that were taken from voters there, state whether you did not see ballots taken from parties going up to vote, and if so, what was said at the time?—A. I saw ballots frequently taken from voters, and at the time they were taken they were called "damn democratic tickets." They said that they should not vote any damn democratic ticket, that those parties who they took the ticket from should not vote any damn democratic ticket. The names of these parties I am not familiar with.

Q. Do you know whether there was any club organizations at Port Royal?—A. Not that I know of, sir. They have a longshoreman's union there. I do not think that is organized for political purposes, though.

Q. You say that you committed some person or persons there for stealing. Did you hold any office there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was it?—A. At Port Royal I held the office of trial-justice.

Q. For what time?—A. I held it from 1873, I think it was, sir, I am not positive about the date; for about three years I held the office. I resigned about a year ago.

Q. State whether before you as trial-justice any of these parties were arraigned for theft, and if so, how many.—A. This man Joshua Days was arraigned before me for stealing a boat, and there were several others on the island. I cannot think of their names now.

Q. Is there any planting or agricultural pursuits carried on on this island?—A. Very little, sir.

Q. You say that is principally done by the women?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the size of the island?—A. It is about three miles wide, and three and a half miles long.

Q. Since 1868 the trial-justices of this State have been appointed by the governor?—
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you receive your appointment from the governor of the State?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. How many persons are you willing to say you saw ballots taken from?—A. About twelve, sir.

Q. They all voted, didn't they?—A. Yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did they vote the ballot then that these parties gave them?—A. With two exceptions; or rather they said they voted democratic tickets afterward. I do not know positive what ticket they voted.

Q. The others voted the tickets which were given them by these parties?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Do you know what ticket any one of them voted?—A. None but one. I saw one vote the democratic ticket afterward.

Q. And he is the only one you can tell that did vote?—A. Yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. But you saw that these parties who took these ballots away from them handed them other ballots?—A. Yes, sir.

W. H. NIVER sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Question. Give your age, residence, and occupation.—Answer. I am twenty-nine years of age; planter by occupation; residence, Perry Island, Beaufort County, South Carolina.

Q. How long have you resided there?—A. About nine years, sir.

Q. Where did you attend at the late election?—A. Paris Island precinct.

Q. What time of day did you reach there, and how long did you remain?—A. I got there about half past six o'clock, I think, and staid there until about one or two o'clock—I could not say positively.

Q. What time were the polls opened there that morning?—A. About seven o'clock, to the best of my recollection.

Q. State what you saw and heard at the polls through the day, and whether there was any disturbance there or any interference with electors at the polls, and all that you saw and heard; what occurred from the time you got there until you left.—A. I got there about half past six o'clock. I went there and commenced talking with the managers of the board, and as fast as they came up—they told me before that they would vote the democratic ticket.

Q. Were they white or colored?—A. Colored. I approached them and spoke to them about voting, and in one particular instance I gave a ticket to a colored man, which was taken away from him and torn up. That was a democratic ticket.

Q. Who took it from him?—A. A young man by the name of Ned Bee.

Q. Was he a colored man?—A. Yes, sir; he was.

Q. Were there other colored voters around at the time; and if so, state what they were doing and saying?—A. They were standing around and making different expressions. I do not remember now what they did say, but it was that they should not vote the democratic ticket, and all those that did should be put out of doors. After they took this ticket away from this man I went and sat down, and then there was another man came in and he said, also, he was going to vote the democratic ticket, and I went to him and told him I would like to speak to him, and when he told me that, there was a mob gathered around me, took me and struck me on side of the head; then some colored friends I had there took a hold of me and said they would take care of me. They took me up and took me out of doors. I sat down, and I think in the course of five or ten minutes—I was sitting in the window then—this same colored man came up and struck me with a stick through the window. That was about eleven or twelve o'clock.

Q. Whereabouts did he strike you?—A. Around the head and shoulders.

Q. What sort of a stick was it?—A. Well, it was about three and a half feet long; it was about an inch and a half through, which gave me a headache all that day. I had not voted then yet.

Q. When he struck you what did he say?—A. I did not hear him say anything. There was such a row I could not hear what they did say, any of them. I had to wait some time before I could vote, and as soon as I did vote—between one and two o'clock—I went home.

Q. Why did you not vote sooner?—A. Because of the disturbance; I did not think it was safe; I did not feel in my mind that it was safe to vote.

Q. Did this crowd come in the house where the voting was?—A. Yes, sir; there is where they come for me. They grabbed me at the box first. I was about six feet from the box, sitting down, when I was first struck.

Q. How many were around you at the time you were first struck by this man?—A. I think there was 30 or 40.

Q. How many got hold of you?—A. That I could not tell; enough to take me by the body and throw me down if I had not jumped.

Q. Where did you jump?—A. I jumped up on the counter.

Q. What were they saying to you during that time?—A. They said that I was a democrat, and that the colored men should not be allowed to vote the democratic ticket; that they should not vote any ticket that I gave them, because I would not give them anything but a democratic ticket.

Q. Who was the supervisor of election there?—A. Allen, I think his name is.

Q. Where was he?—A. He was sitting down.

Q. Did he attempt in any way to intercede, to try to stop them?—A. No, sir; not that I saw.

Q. Did the managers of the election interfere or try to stop them?—A. Not that I saw.

Q. Was there any United States deputy marshal there?—A. Not that I know of; there was a colored man there, I do not know what he was. He seemed to be issuing out tickets. I think his name was John Proctor. He was issuing out republican tickets and telling them not to vote any other tickets but those that he gave them.

Q. Who is John Proctor?—A. I do not know him personally. I heard that his name was John Proctor. He was from Beaufort, I think. He used to be in the News office at Beaufort. I understand that he is in a printing-office at Washington now.

Q. Did those colored men there have many clubs there that day? and if so, state how many.—A. Yes, sir; most of them had clubs. One or two guns, I think.

Q. Did you see them handling them or flourishing them around there that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what way were they doing it?—A. Shaking them around and threatening that if any one should disturb any of the republicans, that they would whip them. They went so far as to say that if the republicans gained the election we could not stay there, that we would have to leave.

Q. How many white men are there on that island?—A. There was four of us at that time.

Q. What is the principal occupation of the colored men on that island?—A. They all plant.

Q. Are not some of them engaged in fishing?—A. They do that too; they plant and fish both.

Q. Who carries on the planting principally, the men or the women?—A. They both work at it. The women, I think, do the most work, and then they fish a good deal.

Q. What is the proportion of the women to the men on that island?—A. I could not say.

Q. Are they about equally divided?—A. I think they are about equally divided; that is my judgment.

Q. What is the population of that island?—A. That I could not say exactly; I think about four hundred.

Q. Men, women, and children?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see these colored men there at the polls take tickets from parties; and, if so, state how it was done, and all about it.—A. They were jerked out of their hands, what I seen.

Q. What sort of tickets were they that were jerked out of their hands?—A. Democratic tickets.

Q. You have stated in your testimony that some of these colored men had mentioned to you before the election their purpose to vote the democratic ticket. How many did you hear before the election express a desire to vote the democratic ticket?

[Mr. LAPHAM objects to the question as being incompetent.]

A. I estimated before that that we should have about thirty.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. How many did you get?—A. Twelve democratic votes—six colored.

Q. You had been making some effort to get the colored men to vote the democratic ticket?—A. Not in particular; no, sir.

Q. Before the election, I mean?—A. I mean before the election.

Q. Where did you get the tickets that you peddled on election-day?—A. I got those from Mr. Cooper, I think.

Q. How many?—A. I did not have but five or six myself.

Q. You did not have but five or six?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you distribute all those?—A. No, sir.

Q. How many did you distribute?—A. I think it was four.

Q. Was the supervisor there also a democrat?—A. Yes, sir; I think he was.

Q. Was one of the managers a democrat?—A. One of them was; yes, sir.

Q. You say that when you were attacked there, grabbed, as you express it, some persons interfered to protect you; were they republicans?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. They did protect you, didn't they, at that time?—A. I did not think so when I got the knock over my head.

Q. That was afterward; but for the moment they protected you, did they not? Their interference prevented any further violence at that time, or were you struck at that time?—A. They had struck me then.

Q. The blow was at that time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was all one occurrence, then?—A. No, sir; I was struck with their fists first.

Q. Which was the time when the republicans interfered to protect you?—A. After I was struck with the club.

Q. What time was that?—A. I should think about eleven o'clock—eleven or twelve o'clock.

Q. What led to the difficulty? Who did you have any words with?—A. I did not have any words with any one.

Q. Who first came in collision with you?—A. I went up to speak with this man—told him I wanted to speak with him.

Q. Who was he?—A. A man by the name of Moses Nelson, or Nelson Moses. I told him I wanted to speak with him.

Q. And then they gathered about you as you have stated?—A. They knocked me and grabbed me about the same time, and took me off my feet.

Q. Do you know who it was that struck you?—A. Yes, sir; a young man by the name of John Bull, as they called him. His name is John Burness.

Q. Have you made a complaint against him?—A. No, sir.

Q. Had him arrested?—A. No, sir.

Q. Never instituted any proceedings against him?—A. No, sir.

Q. Had you ever had any difficulty with him before?—A. No, sir.

Q. How long have you known him?—A. I have known him for about nine years.

Q. How near to you does he live?—A. About a mile and a half, I should think.

Q. Have you seen him since the election?—A. O, yes, sir.

Q. And talked with him?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Pleasantly?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many times?—A. I forget now; once or twice.

Q. Talked with him about what occurred on election-day?—A. I do not recollect that I have.

Q. You didn't say anything about it?—A. Not to my recollection; no, sir.

Q. Did you have any arms that day?—A. Any fire-arms, do you mean?

Q. Yes.—A. I always keep them.

Q. I asked you if you had any on the day of the election?—A. No, sir; not with me.

Q. I thought you always kept them?—A. I do at my store. It is but a short distance from where the polls are to my store. I had them at the store.

Q. Are you certain that you did not carry any on that day?—A. I am certain I did not.

Q. How far is your store from the polls?—A. About one-eighth of a mile.

Q. What arms do you keep?—A. A double-barreled gun.

Q. Have not you a revolver?—A. There is one there, but it is not mine.

Q. But you have the custody of it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you had a double-barreled gun and a revolver?—A. Ever since I came South.

Q. When did you come South?—A. About nine years ago.

Q. Where from?—A. New York, Columbia County.

Q. Did you see any of the ballots, that you say were taken from persons, after?—A. No more than the one they took that I give.

Q. Only in that one instance?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. All the persons voted, didn't they? You do not know of any one who did not, do you?—A. I do not know whether they all voted or not.

Q. You cannot name any one who did not vote, can you, who came there to vote?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know, of your own knowledge, what ticket any of them voted?—A. No more than myself; no.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Do you know of any parties who did not go there to vote?—A. Yes, sir; I know one particularly.

Q. Do you know why he did not go to that poll?—A. I think it was on account of sickness. His wife was sick.

Q. These arms that you speak of having at your store, you kept them there as a guard, I suppose, to protect your store?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were asked if you had this man who struck you, or any of them, arrested? State why you did not have them arrested.—A. Because I would not have got no justice, I thought.

Q. Why didn't you think you would get justice?—A. I could not get justice in South Carolina; not down there.

Q. You did not have them arrested because you thought that under the existing state of affairs there there would be no justice done you?—A. Yes, sir. I never voted the democratic ticket before this season. I have always voted the straight republican ticket until this season. I could not stand it any longer.

[Mr. LAPHAM objects to the last answer of the witness as being voluntary and not called for by the question.]

Q. You have always, you say, voted the republican ticket heretofore until this year?—A. I have; yes, sir.

Q. You determined to change and vote the democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir; under the present state of affairs.

Q. You were raised in New York?—A. I was born and raised in New York.

Q. You came from there here about nine years ago?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your age?—A. I am twenty-nine years old.

Q. Did you see any women there at the polls on the day of the election; and, if so, state about how many.—A. I did. I think there was about fifteen or twenty.

Q. What were they doing there?—A. They were pulling and hallooing and throwing democrats out of the house.

Q. Was that the house where they voted?—A. Yes, sir.

BALAAAM BERNARD (colored) sworn and examined.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Question. Where do you reside?—Answer. Right to Richmond, sir. It's about five miles from Strawberry poll.

Q. How long have you lived there?—A. It's two years now, sir, since I comed down from Combahee, Beaufort County. I have come down now two years ago.

Q. Where did you vote at the last election?—A. Strawberry, sir. I vote the republican ticket.

Q. Do you remember the first republican meeting held at Strawberry?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. About what time was it?—A. I couldn't remember the date now, sir, but it commenced at ten o'clock.

Q. Can you remember what month it was?—A. No, sir; I couldn't remember.

Q. It was the first republican meeting held this year?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was there to speak as republicans?—A. Mr. Sass and Mr. Bowen, and another man—I forget the man's name, but one Mr. Elliott, I think.

Q. You say the meeting began at ten o'clock?—A. At ten o'clock, sir.

Q. Did the democrats come there any time during that meeting?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. About what time?—A. Some went there in the morning before we got there. There be a large party there before we got there.

Q. How did they come?—A. Ride horses, sir; come in soldier style.

Q. How many?—A. One hundred cavalry.

Q. Were they armed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What arms did they have?—A. Had these seven-shooters, loading in the breech.

Q. Breech-loading rifles?—A. Yes, sir; breech-loading rifles. Every one had that.

Q. What did they do when they came there; where did they place themselves?—A. They places themselves right in front of the stand what we had to stand on, and every one laid their arms across their horse.

Q. Did they keep on their horses?—A. Yes, sir; they keeps on; never come off at all.

Q. Who was there on behalf of the democrats?—A. I don't know the man. The captain that salute the company I don't know. He come from a place they call Hell Hole; the cavalry come from there.

Q. They placed themselves around the stand, as you have stated; where were the colored men?—A. On the right of the stand. All the republican party was on the right of the stand.

Q. How many of them were there?—A. We had about four hundred, I think, sir, republicans.

Q. Were there any democrats except the cavalry?—A. O, yes, sir, plenty. There was about two hundred of them, colored democrats.

Q. Were these cavalry all white men?—A. Every bit white mans, sir.

Q. What did the democrats claim—what did they say they were there for?—A. They said they wanted to run the nigger a race to vote at the poll. They said they had the poll they made the speech on.

Q. Did they take part in the meeting?—A. Yes, sir; they take a part of the meeting. We give them a part, and Mr. Jervoy, the first man, had something to say.

Q. Was he a democrat?—A. A democrat, sir.

Q. He spoke first for the democrats, did he?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who else spoke after him?—A. After Mr. Jervoy, Mr. Rhett.

Q. Any one else?—A. And after Mr. Rhett then Mr. Barker.

Q. Where was he from?—A. He spoke from Charleston here, sir.

Q. No one else spoke on the part of the democrats?—A. They was the only mens I saw.

Q. Who spoke on the part of the republicans?—A. Sass and Bowen and one man more, three of them; but I couldn't call the man's name now. He stays here in town.

Q. There were three republican speakers?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did the meeting last?—A. The meeting last from ten o'clock till four o'clock in the evening, before they break up.

Q. Where did this cavalry stay during that time?—A. They stay there too, sir. They be there all the time.

Q. Having their guns there?—A. Yes, sir; all the time.

Q. Did you see any other arms except the breech-loading rifles you have mentioned?—A. No, sir.

Q. How was it with the republicans; had they arms?—A. The first time the republicans didn't carry no arms at all.

Q. They didn't carry any on that day?—A. No, sir.

Q. You spoke of some colored men who were democrats; did they have any arms, and, if so, what kind of arms?—A. Muskets, sir.

Q. Did you see any republicans have arms that day?—A. No, sir; none had no arms there at that time.

Q. I understand you that this was called as a republican meeting; notice was given for a republican meeting?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was the first one held this year?—A. Yes, sir; the first one.

Q. Were you at the polls on election-day at Strawberry?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time did you go there?—A. At ten o'clock, sir.

Q. How long did you stay?—A. I staid till four o'clock in the evening, sir. I been there till night, till they done calling the vote by candle-light, till they done counting the vote in the house there before I gone home. I didn't get home that night; I sleep up at a neighbor's that night.

Q. You staid until they got through counting?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you ever voted there before?—A. This was the first year, sir. This was the first vote at Strawberry.

Q. When you got there at ten o'clock in the morning, how many people were there?—

A. About two hundred, I 'speat, sir; white and colored.

Q. How many white and how many colored?—A. I 'speat about fifty white, as far as I could reach, sir.

Q. And the rest were colored?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did either of them have arms?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State what there was about that; where the arms were, and how many each had.—A. The republican party was 200, and they had arms; but they never carry their arms up to the poll.

Q. Where had they their arms?—A. About 500 yards from the polls, and they left some mans there to take care of them until we went up and vote and come back.

Q. Where did they leave them?—A. At the corner of Strawberry road. There is a turn before you gets up to the poll.

Q. Where did the white men have their arms?—A. Right up to the poll, sir.

Q. Carrying them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What kind of arms were they?—A. Some had muskets, and some had double-barreled, and some had seven-shooters.

Q. Seven-shooting guns or pistols?—A. No, sir; guns—breech-loaders.

Q. Was there any kind of disturbance there that day?—A. No, sir; no fuss there at all, sir.

Q. Did you see anybody come there to vote that didn't vote?—A. O, no, sir. They said four boys was demanded to vote, but they said they didn't come of age, and they didn't let them vote.

Q. The arms the republicans had, where 'did they remain through the day?—A. Right in the same place; at the corner of the road the whole day, till we adjourned.

Q. Do you remember how many votes each party got there?—A. Well, no sir; I didn't remember it, sir.

Q. Don't you remember anything about it; and don't you remember how many democratic votes were given there?—A. I think they said the democrats had 130 or 140 of them, sir.

Q. And how many did the republicans have?—A. I think they said the republicans had 250, as far as I could come at it, sir.

Q. Do you remember the names of the managers?—A. No, sir; I couldn't remember the names. The only man I could know, Mr. Sass; he was the only man I could recollect, and none else.

Q. How old are you?—A. I couldn't tell exactly; but it is somewhere between 50 and 40. I thinks it about that, sir.

Q. Did you attend any other meeting except this one at Strawberry before this election?—A. I 'tend two meetings before the election.

Q. After the one you have mentioned?—A. Yes, sir. I 'tend two meetings before I vote.

Q. You have mentioned one; you were at another meeting, were you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long after the first one?—A. It was not long before they call again. The democrats call that meeting, though.

Q. How long was it after the republican meeting?—A. About one month, sir.

Q. Where was that held?—A. Right at Strawberry, too, sir.

Q. That was a democratic meeting?—A. Yes, sir; the democrat people call that meeting.

Q. How many were there then?—A. A large quantity.

Q. How did they come?—A. Go in carts and ride horseback.

Q. About how many colored men in all were at that meeting?—A. I 's'pose about 300, I think, sir, altogether.

Q. How many white men?—A. Two hundred and some odd.

Q. How did they white men come?—A. The white men ride horseback and buggy, sir.

Q. Were there any republicans there except you?—A. O, yes, sir; a good deal of republicans; all mixed, no, sir.

Q. How was it about arms that day?—A. They didn't have no arms that time.

Q. Neither party?—A. No, sir; neither party. It ain't but twice they had arms at the polls—at the voting and at the first meeting.

Q. But at this democratic meeting there were no arms brought there?—A. The republicans didn't have none; no, sir.

Q. Was the democratic meeting interrupted in any way?—A. None at all, sir.

Q. Did any republicans speak?—A. Yes, sir; all speak.

Q. Who spoke that time?—A. Mr. Sass and these gentlemen. I can't call their names unless I had them on a piece of paper. I couldn't tell you.

Q. How many spoke on each side?—A. Three of them, sir.

Q. Do you remember who spoke for the democrats?—A. The same three men.

Q. The same three who spoke at the first meeting?—A. Yes, sir; the same three at the first meeting; the same three men speak again.

Q. Was there any disturbance there that day?—A. No, sir; not a bit.

Q. The day of this first meeting, the republican meeting, when the democratic cavalry came there, did you hear them make any threats?—A. No, sir; they didn't make no fuss.

Q. Did you hear them say anything about colored people?—A. No, sir; they didn't say anything at all.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. You say you came from Beaufort County?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whereabouts in Beaufort County did you come to Charleston County?—A. Down near the Cambahoe; the river county.

Q. How long have you lived in Beaufort County?—A. Bred and born there; raised there from a boy.

Q. How come you to come to Charleston County?—A. I come up here with a white man by the name of William Haskell. He be planting down on Cambahoe, and he fetched me up with him to live.

Q. Did you belong to any club in the last canvass?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was there not a club organization in your neighborhood; a club company?—A. O, yes, sir; there was a club there. I's always belonged to the same party.

Q. You belonged to it, did you not?—A. Yes, sir; I belonged to that same party.

Q. Where does that club hold its meetings?—A. Whitehall Station.

Q. Where did you meet?—A. We met there, too. I have forgot the name of the place.

Q. Did you have a room there to meet in?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How often did you meet?—A. Meet there twice in every month.

Q. Meet at night?—A. Yes, sir; meet at night.

Q. Who was the head of that club?—A. Where we met at the—I have forgot that man's name; Major Sharp. He is in Walterborough now, sir.

Q. Is he a colored man or a white man?—A. A white man. He were been in the army with us.

Q. What time did you join the club?—A. In 1862, I think, sir. We had that meeting down at Cambahoe when we commenced, and we commenced at seven o'clock.

Q. When did you join this club up at Strawberry, where you live?—A. O, we started at seven o'clock, I believe, sir.

Q. Did you join it this last fall or summer?—A. Yes, sir; right this same summer gone.

Q. Who swore you in as a member of the club?—A. No one ever swore me in. I never be teach'd by no one.

Q. Was that the club of which Sharp was the head?—A. O, that wa the democratic party; that club.

Q. Did you belong to the democratic club?—A. O, no, sir.

Q. Did you yourself belong to a club up there at Strawberry?—A. No, sir; I didn't belong to them.

Q. Did you belong to any club up there?—A. No, sir; to no club at all.

Q. There is a club of colored men up there, isn't there?—A. Yes, sir; a large club.

Q. But you did not belong to any club?—A. No, sir; it was the democratic party that made the club and I didn't want to jine them because I would have to say something I would not desire to say, and I would not go there at all. Perhaps if I went there I would have to say something that would not profit me at all, and so I staid at home.

Q. You did not belong to any club at all, neither of the republican party or any other?—A. No, sir.

Q. What time was it when you got to that first Strawberry meeting?—A. About eleven o'clock, sir. I got four mans with me besides myself to protect me, when Mr. Rhett and Mr. Colcock they come up and tell me I have no right to come up and speak with a democrat party, and that I have no right to persuade no man to vote on their party.

Q. You say when you got there at eleven o'clock both parties were there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many were there when you got to the ground at eleven o'clock ?—A. When I got there they were speaking.

Q. Who was speaking when you got there ?—A. When I got there Mr. Jervy was speaking.

Q. He was from Charleston ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Nobody came there after you got there ?—A. O, lots people come after I come. We got five mile to walk before we got there. The poll was going on while we get there.

Q. You did not hear the arrangement about speaking there, then ? They were already speaking when you got there ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was it you were going to state about what was said when you came there ?—

A. Mr. Rhett and Mr. Colecock, sir, says we have no right. I tell him, "Mr. Rhett, you have no right to bribe a man to come in and vote with him because your skin and my skin are not one." I says, "These are white mens and these are colored mens, and leave every man vote together." I says, "You bribe my man." I says, "We are not all of one color; my skin is black and I consider I have earned my black skin." I tell them I was a true republican; I would fight for my right, and I think I ought to stand up in my manhood.

Q. Mr. Rhett was just talking to you, was he ?—A. He was trying to resist me.

Q. Trying to get you to vote the democratic ticket ?—Yes, sir.

Q. Did not Mr. Rhett make a speech there ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. This talk of his was in his speech, was it ?—A. Yes, sir. He came down off the stand at the time I am telling now.

Q. He come down off the stand and talked with you ?—A. Yes, sir; and stand up at my breast and tell me what I speak.

Q. Does Rhett live in Charleston ?—A. I don't know whether he stays in town or stays away.

Q. What was it he said to you ?—A. I say to him, "Mr. Rhett, it's not allowable for you to go and bribe our colored, man to go and vote with you, because we are not all of one color—we are not one." Says he, "If you want what is fair, let him vote as he wants to." He turns around to me, and says, "What have you to do with it ?"

Q. You stated to Rhett that he ought not to bribe men to vote ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How came you to say to Mr. Rhett that he ought not to bribe men ?—A. I fetch up a body of men with me when I come up, and as soon as I got up there he gone back to the rear and begin to teach his man to come back. So he steals around and says, "Mens, all you have got to do is to keep up; if anything molest you I will see, but as soon as you stray off from me I can't protect you."

Q. You objected to Mr. Rhett taking these men off to talk with them ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that brought on the conversation ?—A. Yes, sir—dat brought on the conversation. As a Union man we come to vote one ticket, and he tried to steal this man off from me.

Q. And then it was that you made this remark to him about bribing men ?—A. Yes,

Q. And this language he used to you was after that ?—A. After dat, sir.

Q. You said something about these men that came up there driving people away; when was that ?—A. That was the first same time, sir.

Q. What time ?—A. I couldn't remember it.

Q. Who was that said by ?—A. Mr. Rhett and Mr. Barnwell.

Q. When did they say that ?—A. At the same time we vote, sir; the morning on the vote. All this conversation came on the same time—at the same time of the vote.

Q. Was Mr. Rhett there at the time you voted ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At Strawberry ?—A. At Strawberry.

Q. What was his first name ?—A. I couldn't remember, sir.

Q. Was that the same party that spoke at Strawberry ?—A. Yes, sir; the same party, sir.

Q. Do you say that these men that came to Strawberry on the day of this first speaking staid on their horses all day ?—A. All day, sir.

Q. Never got off of them at all ?—A. No, sir; never got off them.

Q. They remained on their horses from 10 o'clock until 4 o'clock ?—A. Till four.

Q. Never got off ?—A. Never got off.

Q. You saw no disturbance there that day ?—A. No, sir; no disturbance at all on neither party.

Q. Both parties made speeches ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. No interfering at all ?—A. No, sir; no interfering at all.

Q. They broke up quietly and went home ?—A. Yes, sir; and we went in and counted out the votes by fire-light.

Q. At Strawberry, where this first meeting was held, there was no disturbance ?—A. No disturbance; no, sir.

Q. After each had made speeches they all went home quietly ?—A. Quietly; yes, sir.

Q. You say these men were there on horseback, and that they came from Hell-Hole ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where is that?—A. Fifteen miles from Strawberry.

Q. That is a place up there called Hell-Hole?—A. Yes, sir; a place called Hell-Hole.

Q. How many colored people were at Strawberry that day?—A. A'bout four hundred, if I didn't make a mistake, sir.

Q. And how many white men?—A. I think about two hundred and some odd, if I ain't made a mistake; I ain't had time to remember them all up to count.

Q. You say you were there that day as a body-guard for George Sass?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many of them were there as a body-guard for him?—A. About ten men.

Q. How came you to go there as a body-guard for George Sass? Did you go there to act as a body-guard for him?—A. We come down to vote, and seeing them running on him—

Q. I am speaking about this political meeting at Strawberry?—A. The first meeting, you mean?

Q. Yes.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. There was no voting there at all.—A. Only a private meeting.

Q. That was the day you were acting as a body-guard for George Sass?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many body-guards did he have?—A. Three or four men came across the river. He was in Saint John, and he was in—I forget the county name now, but he was on the other side of Strawberry River, next to the depot.

Q. Had George Sass spoken before you got there or afterward?—A. No, sir; not till we got there.

Q. Mr. Jervey was speaking when you got there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who spoke next after him?—Mr. Jervey spoke first. I couldn't remember that man's name; he come from way back of the country.

Q. Who spoke after him?—A. After him, then this young man that stays in town here, a light-skin man.

Q. Mackey?—A. I think they so name him, if I make no mistake.

Q. Who spoke after him?—A. And after him, then George Sass.

Q. Then who spoke?—And after George Sass, then another colored man went up then. He stay up the road.

Q. Who spoke next?—A. Then Bowens gone up and wind up the meeting.

Q. He made the last speech?—A. Yes, sir; he made the last speech.

Q. Do you know the number of colored democrats that were at Strawberry that day?—A. Well, sir, I couldn't remember them precisely, because there was a large gang of them, and I didn't have time to count them.

Q. How do you know that all these colored men who had arms there were democrats?—A. Because they made a split from us, sir. The republicans and the democrats made a line.

Q. That is, the republicans stood on one side of the stand and the democrats on the other?—A. Yes, sir; all on the right you must call democrats, and all on the left you must call republicans.

Q. And you say there was about two hundred of those colored democrats there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did they live?—A. Right around Strawberry.

Q. You think there was about two hundred of them there?—A. Yes, sir; about two hundred, as far as I could remember.

Q. How many white men were at Strawberry precinct on the day of the election?—A. Well, there was not as many there as when they made the speech.

Q. Were there fifty at the election?—A. There was a little over, as far as I could see.

Q. A little over fifty at the Strawberry election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time did you get there?—A. I gets there about ten o'clock that morning at voting. We organized precisely at ten o'clock that morning. Sass sent word around the meeting would open at ten o'clock.

Q. And you all went at ten?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you take your gun with you?—A. Yes, sir; we all had a gun.

Q. Did he send word to you to bring a gun?—A. No, sir; the reason we bring a gun was the fuss at the Brick Church,

Q. George Sass sent word to you all to be there at ten o'clock, and you all took your guns with you?—A. Yes, sir; took our guns with us.

Q. Did all of you stay until the vote was counted?—A. No, sir; only fifty of them men staid there.

Q. What time did they get through counting?—A. They count by candle-light.

Q. About what time did they get through counting the votes?—A. About ten o'clock, I think I heard.

Q. When you got there how many colored men were there?—A. There was a large gang, sir.

Q. What did you do with your gun when you took it there?—A. We put it way back about five hundred yards from the polls and left a man to guard them till we got through voting.

Q. Where you stacked these guns was right on the big road, was it not?—A. Yes, sir; right in the corner of the road.

Q. You could see them from the polls?—A. From the polls; yes, sir.

Q. You say Mr. Sass was the only man you knew there at the polls that day?—A. He is the only man I could call the name precisely, but there was more I knowed by face; but I am not so familiar with their names as with him.

Q. Who gave you your ticket that day?—A. Mr. Sass; he gave me my hands full of tickets to issue to the rest of the boys.

Q. Where was that done; where you had your guns stacked?—A. No, sir; right at the edge of the road, and I came right up to him to the edge of the road.

Q. How many men were following you?—A. About one hundred and twenty.

Q. Where did they come from?—A. They came from one quarter, sir; all came from the same way I come from.

Q. Did they all come with you to the polls?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was the captain of that company?—A. The captain of that company? His name was Jeffery Bryan.

Q. George Sass handed these tickets to you, and you turned around and delivered them to these one hundred and some odd who were with you, and then you went up to the polls and voted?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Was it at the first meeting or on the day of the election that Mr. Rhett made this remark to you?—A. At the voting-day.

Q. Repeat what he said.—A. When I have my gang of men come up to vote he went back to the rear of the men and he says to these men, "Why didn't you come and vote with me." And I steal around and I says, "Mr. Rhett, I don't want you to bribe my man." And he come back and say, "What right have you to say anything to me, sir." I says, "I command these mens, and I think I have a right to say something when they comes up to vote."

Q. What further did he say?—A. He tells me if I didn't "Hush my mouth, sir, I will have you fiked off;" I say, "You can do it as soon as you please."

Q. Did he tell you what he would have done to you?—A. No, sir; he didn't repeat that to me. He only say that to me, and I walk off.

Q. So that was the only talk you had with him on the day of the election?—A. Yes, sir; that's the only talk I have with him.

Q. What time was that?—A. Soon after I gets there.

Q. While you were on your way to the polls?—A. Yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. At that time you were marching up these one hundred and some odd men you had?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you said, "I command these men, and you have no right to interfere with them?"—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. You speak of a democratic club that was formed in the summer; was it before the first republican meeting or after?—A. That club commenced on the first meeting.

Q. Was the club formed before the first meeting was held or after?—A. It was formed before the first meeting was held.

Q. How long before?—A. Three days before the meeting commenced.

Q. Do you know how many persons attended it?—A. No, sir; I didn't know, because I didn't went there at all.

Q. It was a democratic club?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that's the reason you didn't join?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you do not belong to any club this year?—A. No, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. How do you know that this club was formed three days before the election. Were you there?—A. The man that I works with, Mr. Haskell, he give it out.

Q. You do not know when the club was formed, except what you heard?—A. Yes, he tells me himself.

Q. You did not see it?—A. No, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Is Mr. Haskell a white man?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is his business?—A. Farming on the plantation.

Q. And you work for him?—A. Yes, sir; I works for him.

Q. Is he a democrat?—A. Yes, sir; he is a democrat.

S. P. STONEY, sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Question. Where do you reside ?—Answer. Near Mount Holly Station, on the North-eastern Road, in this county.

Q. What is your occupation ?—A. Planter, sir.

Q. How old are you ?—A. Twenty-six, sir.

Q. Where did you attend at the recent elections ?—A. Mount Holly precinct, sir.

Q. What time did you get there in the morning ?—A. About nine o'clock.

Q. How long did you remain ?—A. I remained until after three ; between three and four.

Q. About how many people voted there that day ?—A. Between 250 and 300.

Q. How many of them were colored voters ?—A. All, except about 25, sir.

Q. How many democratic votes were polled there ?—A. About 25 or 30. I forget the exact number now.

Q. Were the balance republican votes ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were there any parties armed there that day ; and, if so, state how they were armed ?—A. Yes, sir ; most of the colored men were there with arms.

Q. What sort of arms had they ?—A. Muskets, double-barreled guns, and clubs.

Q. Was there not a company of organized men there armed ? and, if so, state who they were.—A. About twelve o'clock I heard a cheering up the road, and I looked and saw, I suppose, twenty-five or thirty armed men marching up.

Q. Afoot or on horseback ?—A. Afoot, sir.

Q. That was an organized club or a military company ?—A. I think it was just merely organized for the occasion ; organized for the occasion, I think, sir.

Q. About how many out of this body of colored men who were there at the polls were armed ?—A. I suppose two-thirds of them were armed with guns, sir, and the balance with clubs.

Q. Where did they have their arms stacked there ?—A. Not stacked, sir. Every man had his own gun all the time and walking around at the poll, firing off fifty or sixty yards from the poll.

Q. State whether you heard any threatening language used toward voters there that day, and, if so, what you heard, and who used this language, and to whom it was used.—A. Well, sir, most of the threats that were made were made before they got to the polls. They sent messengers all round to the different places ordering fellows out, and threatening, if they didn't come and vote the republican ticket, all sorts of things would happen to them. They would be killed, whipped, and mobbed generally.

Q. What threats, if any, did you hear at the polls on that day ?—A. The only threats that I heard at the polls was at the time I sent a fellow on my horse to get a little feed for my horse, and as he passed through—

Q. Was he a white man or a colored man ?—A. A colored man. As he passed through the women congregated with clubs on the road, and as he had to pass right through them, and as he passed through, the women grabbed at him and said, " You voted that democratic ticket." And the fellow denied it and they let him pass on.

Q. How many women were there there ?—A. I suppose there was fifteen or twenty, sir.

Q. Were those women around the polls all the time you were there ?—A. Yes, sir, all day ; I left them there.

Q. What were they doing ?—A. Just congregated and cheering. As soon as a fellow came up and they knew what plantation he came from, they accused him with having promised the gentlemen he worked for to vote the democratic ticket, and the strangers there would say, " Let us see him do it ;" and a republican would step up and give him a ticket and walk up with him and see that he cast that republican ticket and no other. One or two came to me and said they wished to vote the democratic ticket, and they didn't wish to vote any other, and if it was not safe to vote the democratic ticket they would not vote at all, and asked me for my advice right at the polls, and I told them by no means to do it ; what I saw, and hearing the women, the way they were going on, that if any colored man voted the democratic ticket they would be mobbed.

Q. Do you know whether they voted or not ?—A. They retired from the polls and didn't vote.

Q. How many retired from the polls without voting ?—A. There were two that retired from the polls and didn't vote.

Q. Did they examine the tickets of voters who went up to the polls to vote ?—A. Yes, sir ; if a fellow had a ticket they would say, " Let me see that ticket," and look at it and say, " Here is a ticket for you to vote," and walk right up and see that he threw it in. One fellow that had promised me to vote the democratic ticket, and I had given it to him, and he said he intended voting it, and I asked him afterward if he had voted it—

Q. Did he go to the polls ?—A. He went to the poll. Only two colored men voted the democratic ticket at that poll. I could not find out who they were.

Q. This conversation you are speaking of you had with this party since the election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is his name?—A. Tony Allston.

Q. Where is he?—A. He is at Mount Holley.

Q. How many colored men, to your personal knowledge, in that neighborhood, who voted at that precinct, intended to vote the democratic ticket before the election?—A. Six or eight of them. One or two of them joined the democratic clubs.

Q. You say there were only two colored democratic votes cast that day?—A. Yes, sir; but the manager would not let me know who they were. He was afraid it would get out.

Q. Did you hear any threats made by the colored men in that neighborhood previous to the election against any colored man who voted the democratic ticket?—A. Only by what men on my plantation came and told me. I did not hear of any threats being made.

Q. How far from the polls was it where these parties were firing off their guns?—A. About fifty yards, sir.

Q. Is there a militia company in your neighborhood?—A. I think there is, sir. I do not know as they call themselves militia. They are just those fellows—colored men—around there who formed their own company. I do not know what they call themselves.

Q. They are all armed, are they?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. Do you mean to say there is any organization formed—any company formed—of colored men?—A. Yes, sir; there is.

Q. Where?—A. Formed right down in my own parish; Goose Creek is my parish, sir; near Goose Creek Bridge.

Q. What do you know about it?—A. I saw members of the company that told me there was such an organization.

Q. Do you know anything about it yourself?—A. No, sir; I have never seen them except at the polls. I saw a squad of them march up. That was the first I ever seen of the company.

Q. I understood you to answer the question by saying, "People who went to the polls were just organized for that occasion." They had no previous organization?—A. That is what I thought those men were formed for; those men were formed, I think, that day for that particular occasion. I do not think the whole company turned out that day. They just joined it as they came along.

Q. What time of day was this firing?—A. About one o'clock.

Q. Was it by persons who were going home?—A. No, sir; very few of them ever went home. They spent the night there.

Q. About one o'clock in the day you say the firing took place?—A. Yes, sir; in the day.

Q. How many guns did you hear fired?—A. Six or eight, sir.

Q. Was that done more than once?—A. Six or eight were not fired at one time, but just now and then they would fire.

Q. I ask you whether there was more than one gun fired at a time?—A. No, sir; I did not understand you; six or eight altogether. The managers of the election sent out and ordered it stopped.

Q. Was there more than one gun fired at a time?—A. No, sir.

Q. Can you give the name of the person who fired it?—A. No, sir.

Q. You do not know who it was then?—A. No; I do not know.

Q. Nor you don't know at what it was fired?—A. No, sir; it was not fired at anything.

Q. You don't know?—A. I was near enough to see that they did not fire at anything.

Q. Did you see the person who fired the gun?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he shoot into the air?—A. I think he did, sir.

Q. You saw that, did you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far from the polls were they?—A. Fifty or sixty yards.

Q. Was he in the road or in the field, or where?—Right in the road coming up to the poll. The road that led up to the poll; he was right in it.

Q. Then he fired off his gun before going to the poll?—A. No, sir; all of them were just lounging around.

Q. And he fired off the gun as he was going toward the poll?—A. He fired off the gun right in the road; the road led up to the poll.

Q. Do you know whether he had already voted or not?—A. I do not know whether he had voted or not. I could not see.

Q. How soon after was the next gun fired?—A. I did not examine my watch to see what time. They were all fired within, I suppose, an hour from each other. Within an hour of the first one, I suppose, they were all fired.

Q. Did you see any of the other persons who fired?—A. No, sir; I paid but little attention to the firing, and I never looked around to see who had fired.

Q. How long have you lived there?—A. Born and raised there, sir.

Q. How long have you voted at this precinct?—A. Two elections.

Q. What was the whole number of votes polled there?—A. Between two hundred and fifty and three hundred; I do not recollect the exact number.

Q. Do you remember what it was two years ago?—A. I think it was about the same two years ago.

Q. Do you remember what the vote was two years ago?—A. No, sir; I do not recollect; about the same, I believe.

Q. How was it divided, I mean?—A. Two years ago, I suppose the majority was about ninety—the republican majority.

Q. They were both republican that year, were they not?—A. They called one differently. They called one the republican ticket, and one the—

Q. They were both republicans who were voted for two years ago, were they not?—A. No, sir; not the whole ticket, sir.

Q. Greene was not a republican?—A. Greene was a republican.

Q. He headed the ticket, did he not?—A. He headed the ticket, but he was not known to be a republican by the majority of voters.

Q. Do you know of anybody who came there to vote who did not vote excepting these two you advised not to vote?—A. No, sir; only those two.

Q. How many men had you in your employ?—A. I had five or six steadily employed.

Q. At the election, how many had you?—A. At election time I had five.

Q. How many white people were at this poll?—A. About between twenty and thirty.

Q. Were they armed?—A. Not that I saw, sir; I saw none with arms but one going to the polls with arms. I met him on the road.

Q. What did he have?—A. A pistol. I saw none at the polls.

Q. Were you armed?—A. No, sir.

Q. What time in the day did you see this one with the pistol?—A. About twelve o'clock.

Q. Where were you?—A. I left that poll for a few minutes and took a little ride about three miles down the bridge, and this fellow was coming to the polls with a pistol.

Q. Four or five miles off from the voting-place?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you go to?—A. I just rode down to a place called Goose Creek Bridge, at a store there.

Q. Who was this man you saw with a pistol?—A. A man by the name of Ryan, who lives near there.

Q. A revolver, was it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he show it to you?—A. I saw the head of it sticking out of his pants-pocket. He didn't conceal it.

Q. Did you see him afterward at the polls?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had he the pistol then?—A. I think he had, sir. I think he had the pistol there.

Q. Are not the colored people in the habit of taking their guns with them? They walk a distance through the woods, don't they?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are they not in the habit of taking their guns?—A. Those who are fond of hunting, but as a general thing they do not carry their guns—just those who are fond of hunting. They will take their guns to shoot as they go along, but as a general thing they don't carry arms.

Q. Are not the colored people fond of hunting?—A. Some few of them; not as a general thing, though.

Q. Don't you know of any white organization in that vicinity?—A. No, sir.

Q. Have you never known of any?—A. I have never known of any; no, sir; there never has been an armed organization there since the war.

Q. The white men have arms, have they not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have arms, haven't you?—A. Two or three of them, sir.

Q. The men who are at work for you, do they have guns?—A. Yes, sir; one of them keeps one of my guns.

Q. You allow him to use one of your guns?—A. Yes, sir; he generally hunts with me, and I treat him just as I treat any other man who hunts with me.

Q. Did you remain until the vote was canvassed?—A. No, sir; I left between three and four o'clock.

Q. There was no disturbance there at the polls that day, was there?—A. No, sir.

Q. The supervisor was there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is his name?—A. I think his name is Moses Dingle.

Q. Was he the republican or democratic supervisor?—A. The republican supervisor.

Q. Was he there all the time you were there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who were the managers?—A. The democratic manager was a man by the name of Therin.

Q. Give his full name.—A. I only know him by his nickname, Doe Therin.

Q. Who were the other managers?—A. The republican manager was Thomas Evans; and I am thinking whether his name is William or Thomas. He is the colored preacher there. I forget now who the other manager was. I have forgotten the clerks and managers and supervisor, so I don't know who the other fellow was.

Q. They staid during the whole time you were there, didn't they?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you known Mr. Evans?—A. I have known Evans for about five or six years.

Q. Has he been a minister during that time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Methodist minister?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was the democratic supervisor?—A. I think young Pinckney; a fellow by the name of Pinckney.

Q. What is his first name?—A. Tom Pinckney, I think his name is, sir.

Q. A white or colored man?—A. Colored, sir.

Q. Was he there all day?—A. All the time I was there, sir.

Q. When you were going home did you meet people going to the polls?—A. No, sir; I met no one at all.

P. G. FITZ SIMMONS sworn and examined.

By Mr. EDEN:

Question. Where do you reside?—Answer. On the Northeastern Railroad, in Charleston County, about 30 miles from here.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. Planter, sir.

Q. What is your age?—A. I am forty-seven, sir.

Q. Are you a native of this county?—A. I am a native of this county.

Q. What is your voting-precinct?—A. Biggins Church, sir.

Q. How near do you live to Biggins Church?—A. I live three miles from it.

Q. State what you know, if anything, about any threats having been made toward colored voters who were inclined to vote the democratic ticket.—A. I came down on the occasion that General Hampton spoke in Charleston, with a company that was formed in my section of the country, what is known as Strawberry. After I arrived at the city that night there was no threats made.

Q. State the number of colored men that came with you in that company upon that occasion.—A. I cannot state it exactly.

Q. State about the number.—A. I suppose there were about sixty colored men—a hundred composed the whole company.

Q. How did you come down?—A. We came down on mules and horses.

Q. Did you come in procession?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State what occurred after you came here.

(Mr. Lapham objects.)

A. On the morning after we came out we formed in the principal street to parade. We put our horses in Mr. Comau's stables that night. The men staid in Queen street, at the democratic hall, I think. When we came out the next morning there were threats of all kinds; so much so that it was with the greatest difficulty we could bring the colored men out.

Q. What was the nature and character of the threats that you heard?—A. In consequence of them being afraid to come out—on account of the threats being made; colored men on the streets were saying they would put an end to them, or, to use their own expression, "We will stow you between here and what is known as Nine-mile Bottom, on the State road."

Q. In marching, how did the procession form?—A. We formed black and white all through.

Q. How were you placed in relation to the black men?—A. I had a black man on either side of me, and it was as much as I could do to keep them on their horses. In fact, I knew them both when they were boys. They were raised in my immediate neighborhood, and nothing but my presence kept them right in their position. One of them threatened to get off. He said to me, "If you think I am not safe I will get off of my mule and leave it here, and take it afoot back into the country."

Q. State what became of the colored men that came down with you.—A. They were guarded here by white men.

Q. State whether or not they went to the speaking.—A. No, sir; not one of them. You could not have hired one of them. Not a single one of them that come with us left that hall that day. You could not have got them to go out.

Q. Did they go back with you when you went home?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you state about what number of those colored men were voters at Biggins Church—about how many of them lived in that precinct?—A. I really cannot exactly state the number.

Q. About how many?—A. I suppose there must have been about forty, thirty or forty, of those who came with us who voted at Biggins Church.

Q. State if you know how many colored men you heard express a disposition before the election to vote the democratic ticket.—A. You could not have got the expression of a colored man there to vote the democratic ticket.

Mr. LAPHAM. I object to this whole line of examination.

Q. Did you see these same men at Biggins Church, those of them that resided in the precinct, at the election?—A. I did, sir.

Q. Do you know what ticket they voted?—A. They voted the radical ticket.

Q. What time did you go to the election?—A. I was there by half past six.

Q. What time did you leave?—A. I left there, I suppose—I cannot tell you exactly, but it was after dark. I could not tell the hour, I had no watch.

Q. What occurred from the time you went until you left? State all you saw and heard in the way of threats or acts.—A. I saw or heard of no intimidation except one man, John Mulligan. He plants at a place called North Mulberry. He is a rice-planter. He came up with a colored man who intended to vote the democratic ticket. As soon as he got up we were formed into two lines; one was on the side of the church and the republicans were on the other side, composed almost entirely of the colored people of the country. He was on horseback, and this man was walking alongside of him; and as soon as he approached, the man who had the republican tickets offered him one, and he shook his head, and came up and tried to push a ticket to him, and he refused. And Mr. Mulligan rode up then and said, "Allow him to vote as he pleases. I brought him here and I promised him protection, and let him vote as he pleases." There was some little demur, and after a while he brought him out; came along with him, and he walked up to the church, and the party who held the democratic tickets gave him one. Whether he voted it or not I do not know, but I saw him take the ticket.

Q. Being formed in line in that way, was it for the purpose of voting?—A. No, sir; they were drilling almost all the time we were voting—drilling with arms directly opposite.

Q. Who were drilling, the whites or the blacks?—A. No, sir; the colored men altogether.

Q. How many of them were drilling?—A. I should say at least eighty.

Q. About how many colored men were there there?—A. Well, I suppose there were 200 at any one time.

Q. What sort of arms, if any, did these men have who were drilling?—A. They had weapons of all kinds. Some had bayonets put on sticks, and these swords formerly used by the German hussars—swords with heavy brass handles—muskets, and double-barreled guns and single-barreled guns.

Q. How near were they mustering to the church while the voting was going on?—A. I should say 80 yards.

Q. How long did they continue mustering?—A. The whole time they were mustering. Several gentlemen called upon the supervisor of the election to put a stop to it.

Q. Was he a white man or a black man?—A. A white man.

Q. What were his politics?—A. He said, "Very well; let them alone as long as they are just drilled." It made no difference to us, unless they made some overt act.

Q. How many guns, according to your best information, of the various sorts did you see there in the hands of the colored men?—A. I did not see one colored man without an arm of some kind.

Q. There were a portion of them, as I understand, who had no guns. About how many did you see them have in their hands?—A. It would be impossible for me to say, sir. There was a great many guns. You see there was nearly three hundred there that voted and left, that lived in the immediate neighborhood.

Q. Did those that came and voted and went away have guns?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they take their guns away with them?—A. I judge so.

Q. About what number of white men were there?—A. Altogether there was one hundred and two that voted, but they did not all stay there.

Q. Who voted the democratic ticket?—A. Who voted the democratic ticket.

Q. And about how many who voted the republican ticket?—A. I think the whole poll, sir, was four hundred. There was three hundred there that voted the radical ticket.

Q. Were there any white men that voted the radical ticket?—A. One white man.

Q. Any colored men that voted the democratic ticket?—A. One man.

Q. If there was any firing of guns there in the neighborhood, please state.—A. No, sir; there was no firing.

Q. What was the conduct of the colored men in reference to the distribution of tickets?—A. They were quiet.

Q. What did they do with their guns when they went up to the polls to vote?—A. Well, I declare, sir, I cannot state that positively, because I was off some little distance—just about ten or twenty yards from the voting-precinct at the time. I had my wagon there, and I was looking after my mules.

Q. What time of day did you vote?—A. I voted directly after I got there; I suppose about a quarter to seven. I would state this, sir, if it is not out of the way, that one man came to me for advice.

Q. Was that at the election there that day?—A. No, sir; he went to what is known as Pineopolis.

Q. Was this a colored man?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did he live?—A. He lived on the plantation right next to me, about half a mile.

Q. What ticket was he going to vote?—A. The democratic ticket.

Q. If you know the reason why he did not go to Biggins Church, state it.—A. He went to Pineopolis because he was afraid of the crowd, and where he knew there was nothing but democratic voters. He was fearful of the consequences—I won't say they threatened him, but they had been pursuing him and persecuting him without actually threatening his life. They had done everything else they possibly could to intimidate him. He could not be intimidated very easily, I must say for him. Up to that time he had been a republican. This was the first vote he ever cast for the democratic party.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Give me the name of any person in this city who made the threats you have mentioned.—A. It is impossible for me to do that. I would be unable to recognize any of the colored people; they were strangers to me.

Q. Do you know whether it was a colored man?—A. I do, sir; from his color.

Q. You saw the person?—A. I saw the person, sir.

Q. Did you hear more than one person?—A. I heard a hundred say it.

Q. Using the same expression?—A. Not the same words, but using the same threats:

Q. You say you heard a hundred?—A. Yes, sir; at least.

Q. And you cannot name one of them?—A. No, sir; I cannot.

Q. Where was it that these things were said?—A. Most of these speeches were made—

Q. They were not speeches?—A. Well, threats.

Q. Where was it that they were made?—A. Opposite the Citadel Green, first, and then on the Battery.

Q. In what street?—A. Meeting street.

Q. This was said as the procession was passing?—A. No, sir; as we were standing waiting for the procession to move—after we had formed in line.

Q. How long did you stand there?—A. I suppose we were there at least an hour, sir.

Q. Where else do you say that you heard these threats?—A. On the Battery, where the line drew up before we dismissed.

Q. Did they march to the Battery?—A. We just went in procession.

Q. You marched to the Battery in procession?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was done there?—A. We were dismissed there.

Q. After the meeting?—A. No; we were dismissed there to go and hear the speeches that were to be delivered on the Battery, if we pleased.

Q. The speaking was on the Battery?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the colored men go there?—A. With us do you mean?

Q. Yes.—A. Yes, sir,

Q. All that came down with you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was the stand?—A. Right on the Battery.

Q. That is the point where the procession was dismissed?—A. We were dismissed at the corner of King street and the Battery.

Q. Who dismissed you?—A. I cannot tell you. We were under the charge of Mr. Haskell, on the river—that portion of the line in which I was.

Q. What portion did he hold?—A. He was simply a planter on the river like myself—just simply in charge of our immediate neighborhood.

Q. Does he not hold any position in an organization in this State?—A. Nothing, sir. He is a planter on Cooper River.

Q. Don't he belong to a company?—A. No, sir.

Q. Has there been no organization in your region?—A. None in the world except our political clubs.

Q. When was that formed?—A. That was formed last July.

Q. The members of that club have arms?—A. No, sir; arms are positively forbidden in our political meetings.

Q. Forbidden by whom?—A. Forbidden by the president of our club.

Q. Were there not white men with arms voting there at the church?—A. No, sir; none that I saw.

Q. You did not see any arms stacked there?—A. Not a gun.

Q. Were you inside of the church?—A. Yes, sir; in the church, and not more than twenty steps from the church any time I was there.

Q. You did not see a white man armed that day, then?—A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. You were not armed?—A. I was not; I had nothing in the world.

Q. Who was this supervisor?—A. His name—. I know very little of him. He is a planter.

Q. Is he a democrat or a republican?—A. He voted the democratic ticket, sir. I know him but very slightly. I have seen him but once before.

Q. Is he a white man or a colored man?—A. A white man, sir.

Q. You say he said, "Let these people alone until they do some overt act?"—A. Yes, sir.

Q. They were not interfered with, were they?—A. They were not interfered with.

Q. They did no overt act that you saw, did they?—A. No, sir; except their mere drilling.

Q. He did not call that an overt act?—A. No, sir.

Q. They did no overt act of violence that you saw, did they?—A. No, sir.

Q. You suppose Mulligan's man voted the democratic ticket?—A. I do not know what he voted. He took the democratic ticket in his hand.

Q. Notwithstanding what was said to him?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many men had you in your employ at the time of the election?—A. I had five, sir.

Q. Colored men?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you voted in that precinct?—A. About 18 years, sir.

Q. Do you remember what the vote was there two years ago, sir?—A. I do not.

Q. It is a republican precinct, is it not?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. EDEN :

Q. You were asked if you could name any of the men that made threats here in the city that day. I will ask you if you are acquainted with any of the colored men in the city?—A. I am acquainted with some of the colored men, but those I didn't know. A great many came over from the island.

Q. You did not know those who made the threats?—A. I did not.

Q. The persons who made the threats were colored men?—A. Yes, sir; they were colored men. If it is not out of place I will mention one incident that happened. There was a gentleman came down with me, Mr. Porcher, and he promised a colored man he would protect him; and he was threatened, and Mr. Porcher merely asked the name of this colored man who was threatening, and he immediately walked up with his stick, and it took two men to take him off.

Q. Where was that?—A. Right at the battery.

Q. You were present and saw it?—A. I was present and saw it. He said, "What do you want my name for?" Mr. Porcher said, "I simply want your name, because you have threatened this man, and if anything happens to him I will know who you are."

Q. You stated that the speaking was at the battery, and that your procession was disbanded near the battery. Where did these colored men go after you disbanded?—A. We took them back to the stable. The offer was made to them that every fourth man should lead the other three horses back, and the offer was refused. They said they were afraid to go—that they would rather return to the hall, where they knew they would get protection.

A. P. FORD (colored) sworn and examined.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Question. Where do you reside?—Answer. Saint James Goose Creek, sir.

Q. How long have you lived there?—A. I have lived in this county all my life-time, sir.

Q. What is your age?—A. I am forty-five, sir.

Q. What is your voting-precinct?—A. Whaley Church, sir.

Q. Are you a member of the legislature?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many years have you been a representative?—A. This is my third term, sir.

Q. When was your first?—A. In 1870; I was defeated in 1874.

Q. You were elected in 1870. When were you elected the second time?—A. In 1872; and then I was elected at this last election. Let me state here, concerning my residence, I claim two residences, one in the country and one in the city. When I am in the city I call it my residence, and when I am in the country I call that my residence.

Q. Where is your farm?—A. I plant about nine miles from the city.

Q. Do you own a farm?—A. No, sir; I rent a place.

Q. How large is the place?—A. The place is very large, sir. I suppose as much of it as I plant on is some fifteen or twenty-five acres.

Q. Do you rent the whole, or only a part?—A. No, sir; I only plant a part. I do not rent the whole place, sir.

Q. You only rent what you plant?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far is that from Whaley's Church?—A. That is about four miles this side of the church.

Q. You live there?—A. I live about there.

Q. When you live in the country, I mean?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you living there at the last election?—A. O, yes, sir; I lived there, sir.

Q. Is your house on this land you plant on?—A. Yes, sir; the house is there. The house is on the land. My friend and myself plant together. Of course I stay with him when I am out there.

Q. Have you a family?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What does it consist of?—A. My family consists of four, sir; wife and two children.

Q. Did any one call on you the Saturday night before the election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who?—A. Mr. C. H. Chors.

Q. What does he do?—A. He is a planter, too, on Saint James Goose Creek. He called on me on a Saturday night, about the 5th of November.

Q. The Saturday night before the election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he hold any office on election-day?—A. Yes, sir; he was the democratic United States supervisor.

Q. What time did he come to your house that Saturday night?—A. He came to my house between ten and eleven o'clock. I had gone to bed. That is in the city here.

Q. You were here then?—A. I was here in the city.

Q. You have a house here?—A. Yes, sir; No. 13 Lion street.

Q. Did you see him?—A. I did, sir.

Q. Where did you see him?—A. On my piazza, sir. He came into the yard.

Q. Did you get up and dress?—A. I came down-stairs after I heard he was there, dressed myself and came out to see him.

Q. How long did he remain there?—A. He staid about half an hour, sir, talking with me.

Q. State what he said.—A. Well, sir, his conversation was this: He told me that he had a set of tickets that he wanted to get up in the interest of the democrats, and wanted me—knowing that I would carry that precinct—to destroy the republican ticket. That if I would use my influence in the interest of these tickets which he had I was to name the sum—whatever amount I would name, he would go down Monday and have it deposited subject to my order, and I could just go there and get it.

Q. Did he describe what the ticket was?—A. The ticket was to head Wade Hampton as governor.

Q. And what electors?—A. Well, he was to put on all his men, and he would put on myself if I would use my influence for the ticket.

Q. Did he state who the electors would be?—A. Well, his electoral ticket would have been Tilden and Hendricks. I asked him over again, "Who did you say you were going to put on that ticket?" Then he said, "Hampton and Tilden and Hendricks and all the county officers," and of course he would put my name on the ticket. I told him right there and then that he mistake his man. I told him that I could not be a deceiver. And then he said to me, sir, that he thought it was a chance where I could make some money, and on that ground he thought he would give me an opportunity to do it. I told him life and liberty was more to me than all his money. He said to me, "Then if you do not propose to do it, between man and man not to make any mention of what transpired between me and him;" and I tell him, of course I would not call his name. But I tell him I thought he would not approach a man like me to try to do a trick like that, when the people had confidence in me. I tell him that. And then that was the last conversation between him and me. I tell him good night. He tell me if I made up my mind to do it, I could see him at the Pavilion Hotel on Sunday. Of course I didn't see him until that Tuesday morning—the morning of the election. I did not see him from that Saturday night until the morning of the election.

Q. Who of your family saw him on that night beside yourself?—A. My mother-in-law and my wife. My mother-in-law came up-stairs and told me some one wanted to see me.

Q. How long have you known Mr. Chors?—A. Well, I have known him before the war and during the war.

Q. Did he mention any sum of money?—A. No, sir; he wanted me to state what I would do it for.

Q. Did he state where the money was?—A. He even told me that the executive committee—that I would not have to go to the executive committee, but all I was to do was to say what I would do it for, and he would have it done.

Q. Was anything of that kind ever said by him to you or you to him before that?—A. No, sir. That was the first time he ever approached me on that subject.

Q. He knew what your politics were?—A. O, he know, sir; that is the reason he approached me.

Q. You have always been a republican?—A. Always, sir.

Q. Were you a slave?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When were you released from slavery; when the slaves were freed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were released by the emancipation proclamation?—A. I was, sir.

Q. Had you any education at that time?—A. No, sir.

Q. What means have you had for getting an education since?—A. Well, sir, in the night-time, sir.

Q. You have acquired what knowledge you have by your own effort; you never attended any public school?—A. No, sir.

Q. Have you taught school any?—A. No, sir.

Q. What time did you go to the election?—A. I got there about five o'clock in the morning.

Q. Did any one go with you?—A. Yes, sir; William Singleton and a young fellow by the name of Graves, who was acting as clerk at the poll that day.

Q. What position did Singleton hold?—A. Singleton was the republican supervisor.

Q. What time did you see Chors?—A. He came there about seven o'clock, or thereabouts.

Q. Did you have any conversation with him?—A. When he came he sent to call me, and I sent I hadn't time to see him.

Q. Did you have any conversation with him that day?—A. Well, sir, I had, about ten o'clock. There was a report made there that one Devoe was buying votes, and in that time there was some little excitement got up that this man was bribing the men by buying votes. This William Singleton he was supervisor, and he went, according to the statement that was made, to arrest Mr. Devoe; and after he was arrested Mr. Chors came to me and spoke to me in regard to it, that he didn't think Devoe was buying votes, and if I would not ask Singleton to let Devoe go.

Q. Mr. Chors said he didn't think Devoe was buying votes?—A. That is what Mr. Chors said. Then I told him that this man Singleton was an officer, and that I didn't like to interfere with it.

Q. Was anything more said?—A. In the course of about an hour or so Devoe went away in a buggy where he came from, and everything went on quietly after that.

Q. Had there been any disturbance that morning up to the time Devoe was arrested?—A. No, sir; not a word. They were more friends than anything else.

Q. How was the election conducted after Devoe went away?—A. I state on my honor that everything I seen went on quiet. I state that on my honor, sir; it was quiet, sir; it was quiet from that time until the polls were closed in the afternoon at six o'clock.

Q. Was there a person there about whom there was something said for voting the democratic ticket?—A. Away in the afternoon, about five o'clock—the polling-precinct is about one hundred yards from the State road—a young fellow was going off, and they said that he voted the democratic ticket, and he said he didn't care a damn about who liked it or not; and I seen the men were going to talk, and I went to them myself, and I said, "It has been peaceable all day; don't let us have any fuss."

Q. What was this person's name?—A. Mitchell.

Q. He was boasting that he had voted the democratic ticket?—A. He was boasting, sir.

Q. Repeat what he said.—A. I heard him damning and cursing. His word was, "By God, he would vote as he damned pleased, and who in the hell can better it?" I heard that word.

Q. What did the men do?—A. Then I seen the men commenced to go toward him, and I went at once and said, "Now, we have had a quiet day; now, don't let us have any interruption at all." And every man stopped.

Q. Do you remember at about what time the poll closed?—A. Precisely at six o'clock. When it closed it was six o'clock by Mr. Hurd's watch.

Q. Did he make the announcement?—A. Exactly; he did, sir.

Q. Was it yet dark?—A. Yes, sir; it was pretty dark. It was a clear day; I think it was a little darker than it is now.

Q. Getting dusk?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many votes were there polled there?—A. Six hundred.

Q. How many republican and how many democratic?—A. Five hundred and eighty-two republican votes and eighteen democratic, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Chors say anything to you after the poll closed, or about the time it closed?—A. Yes, sir; after the poll was closed Mr. Chors came and took me by the hand, and he says—

By Mr. EDEN:

Q. Was this conversation after the polls had been closed?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. How soon after?—A. Right away after.

(Mr. Phillips objected to the admission of the testimony.)

The WITNESS. After the poll closed, Mr. Chors grasped my hand and said to me, "Ford, let me congratulate you on the manly way you conducted the poll this day. We could not have had a fairer election in the State."

Q. What did you do then?—A. I raised the tune, "Hold the fort."

Q. You proposed that?—A. Yes, sir; I was singing, "Hold the fort."

Q. Was it a song?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hear anybody firing guns in the air during that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many?—A. Some two or three. I didn't count the guns. After I sung and got through, the boys all fired off and were going home.

Q. What time was this?—A. After the poll was closed, sir; the boys were all going home. That is the only time I had to sing.

Q. Was there any slugging or firing of guns before the polls closed?—A. No, sir.

Q. In which direction were the men going that fired?—A. They went right up the road.

Q. What kind of guns had they?—A. Muskets, sir, and different shot-guns, according to the different guns the country-people have.

Q. How long did you stay there?—A. I staid until they got through canvassing the votes.

Q. How long did Mr. Chors stay?—A. He staid the same, sir; until they got through.

Q. Do you remember whether the managers signed the returns?—A. Yes, sir; the managers all signed the returns, sir.

Q. Did you hear any complaint about the fairness of the election?—A. None whatever.

Q. What time did you first see guns there that day?—A. Well, that was away in the afternoon, sir. First there was not a man brought a gun on the ground.

Q. Do you remember who had guns there?—A. I cannot name the different ones who had guns, but the guns were over about one hundred and fifty yards from the precinct; about one hundred and fifty to two hundred yards.

Q. How many were there?—A. I do not know, sir; I was not able to count them.

Q. How many white persons were there?—A. I can almost name all who were there, sir. There were about twelve there.

Q. Do you know whether any of them had arms?—A. I did not see any arms, sir.

Q. Was there any use made of arms during the day there?—A. No use at all, sir.

Q. Do you know about the custom or practice of colored people taking their guns when they go to an election or public meeting?—A. When the colored people go to a meeting, of course everybody don't have guns, but of course a few have their guns with them. Sometimes they shoot on the way. You very often come to a gang of turkeys, and these men who carry guns carry them to shoot on their way through.

Q. What kind of guns have they?—A. These old-time muskets and shot-guns, according to what they can afford to have.

Q. Were there any rifles there that day?—A. There is not a militia gun in that section of the country.

Q. Did Singleton stay there all day?—A. He staid there until the polls closed.

Q. Did he not stay until the close of the canvass?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see or hear of any disturbance except when Devoe was arrested and the occurrence as to the other man?—A. There was none at all, sir.

Q. Did you see the character of any tickets there other than the regular tickets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were they?—A. The republican tickets on that day were printed in red ink and the democratic tickets with black ink. Of course they were both printed on white paper, but they had black ink and ours was red.

Q. What other ticket did you see?—A. Well, then they had a mixed ticket, with some few of our men on and headed Hampton for governor. He was the only man they had on that ticket. Myself and Bowen was on that ticket. Bowen was sheriff on that ticket.

Q. What electors?—A. Well, Tilden and Hendricks electors.

Q. With the exception of Bowen's name and yours, the rest of the ticket was democratic?—A. Yes, sir; democratic ticket.

Q. What time did you first see those?—A. The first one I seen Mr. Smith had it.

Q. What time was it?—A. That was about nine o'clock, sir.

Q. Were any of them put into the ballot-box?—A. Well, about six of those tickets were put in, sir.

Q. You say it was nine o'clock when you first saw it?—A. About nine o'clock when I saw the tickets.

Q. Please state whether there was any watch to see whether the republican voters voted that ticket. What did you do, if anything?—A. What I did when I seen that ticket? They came to me and wanted me to accept; to let that ticket, run and not to make mention.

Q. Who did?—A. Mr. Smith spoke to me.

By Mr. PHILIPS:

Q. What Smith was that? T. H. Smith?—A. No, sir; Henry Smith.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Was any one by when he spoke to you?—A. Several of them.

Q. Can you name any one?—A. Yes, sir; I can name Cyrus Grant; Joshua Washington was there, Ivan Carter, and several others.

Q. Where was it?—A. That was right about the precinct. I suppose about some fifteen feet off.

Q. What did you say to that?—A. I told him that I could not deceive the people; I could not advocate their ticket.

Q. What else did he say, if anything?—A. Well, he didn't want me to make any noise about the ticket. He asked me not to say anything to the people about that ticket. He said I would gain the vote. I told him I could not deceive the people.

Q. What did he then do?—A. Of course, then, his ticket was put into some few of the men's hands.

Q. Was there anything done to discover whether the voters had that ticket?—A. If there was anything done to see whether those voters voted that ticket, do you mean?

Q. Yes.—A. No, sir.

Q. What did you answer when he requested you to say nothing about it?—A. I just told Mr. Smith that I could not advocate that ticket.

Q. When he requested you to say nothing about it, what answer did you make to that?—A. I spoke for the ticket I had in my hand.

Q. What did you say?—A. I said here are the republican tickets; any other ticket is bogus.

Q. Did you say that aloud so all the electors there could hear you?—A. Yes, sir; I said my name on that ticket didn't amount to nothing. That is what I told them.

Q. Did you hold up the ticket as you said that?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Anything more said about it during the day?—A. No, sir, because everybody came and wanted a republican ticket.

Q. Do you know of any elector that was prevented from voting that day?—A. I do not know of any.

By Mr. PHILIPS:

Q. How long have you been living here in Charleston?—A. Well, sir, I was here ever since I was a boy about, say, fifteen years of age.

Q. In this town?—A. Yes, sir; and then I went into the country.

Q. How many members of the legislature are there from this county?—A. We used to have eighteen, sir.

Q. How many now?—A. Seventeen, sir.

Q. Is the county divided into election-districts? Are these members of the legislature elected from certain districts in the county?—A. No, sir, not particularly. The constitution don't say that. They are elected from the whole county. I was elected at large.

Q. How long have you been renting this place out in the country?—A. I have always been planting in the country since I grew up.

Q. I say how long have you been renting this place up here at Whaley's Church, where you are renting now?—A. I was planting there about—I commenced to plant in 1868.

Q. At this same place?—A. No, sir.

Q. My question is, how long have you been renting that place up there at Whaley's Church that you now have?—A. I commenced to plant in 1871.

Q. You just rent the place up there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you ever lived up there with your family?—A. Do you mean before now?

Q. My question is, have you ever lived up there with your family?—A. Yes, sir; I always did live in the country after I leave the city.

Q. You always did live in the country after you left the city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you leave the city?—A. You asked me first if I grew up here. I tell you yes, I grew up here in the city, and I went in the country, I suppose, when I was some fifteen or sixteen years of age, and of course I was in the country ever since.

Q. Have you been renting farms up there and planting ever since you were sixteen years of age?—A. I could not say that, because I had an owner. I commenced to plant for myself after emancipation.

Q. My question to you is, have you ever lived up there at Whaley's church with your family, where you are now renting land, as you say?—A. I do not live at Whaley's church.

Q. Wherever your place is, has your family lived there? Have you lived there within the last two years?—A. My family live in the city, and I plant there myself.

Q. Your family have not lived with you up there on this place within the last two years?—A. No, sir.

Q. They remained here in the city all the time?—A. Yes, sir; that is all right.

Q. Were you not living with your family here in the city just before the election?—A. Yes, sir; my home is here.

Q. Answer my question. Were you not living with your family here just before the election?—A. Yes, sir.

- Q. You are renting, you say, about fifteen or twenty acres?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Were you attending to that place last fall?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. What were you doing on it?—A. I planted.
- Q. Planting in the fall?—A. In the fall?
- Q. Yes.—A. Nobody plant in the fall; everybody plant in the spring.
- Q. What was going on at that place of yours last fall?—A. Everybody harvests in the fall.
- Q. You were not staying at that place out in the country last October, were you?—A. I tell you I plants out there all the time.
- Q. You planted on that place in the spring?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Did you stay on it through the summer?—A. Whenever I am out there I am there, sir.
- Q. My question is, did you stay on it through the summer?—A. I did not, sir.
- Q. Do you work that place yourself or have it worked?—A. I and another friend plants together.
- Q. My question is, do you plant the place yourself?—A. I works myself when I am there—plows my horses and work myself. Of course I do not work all by myself. I have got a party to work with me.
- Q. Who attends that place for you—those fifteen or twenty acres? Do you hire anybody to work on it?—A. No, sir; I do not hire. We work in partnership.
- Q. This person you speak of lives there in a house with his family, does he?—A. Yes sir.
- Q. You just go out there occasionally, don't you?—A. O, no; I am out there every week.
- Q. Do you stay all night?—A. Sometimes.
- Q. How far is it from the city?—A. We plant just about ten miles.
- Q. Ten miles from here is the place you rent?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Did you ever vote there, at Whaley's church, before this year?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. When?—A. I voted there in 1870.
- Q. Is that the last time you voted there?—A. No, sir; I voted in 1870 and I voted in 1872.
- Q. Where did you vote in 1874?—A. At the same place.
- Q. Did you vote there in 1874?—A. Yes, sir; I voted at Whaley's precinct.
- Q. When you ran for the legislature in 1874, did you run at large in the county?—A. We gets a set of delegations from these precincts, and my delegation come right from the precinct.
- Q. Are you nominated by one single delegation, or all over the county?—A. O, no, sir; we meet in a convention.
- Q. Here in the city?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Did you vote at Whaley's church in 1874?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Attended the election there?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. What was the vote at Whaley's church in 1874?—A. Lot me see. We had, I think, in 1874, about some 300 odd. I cannot remember now exactly. It was something over 300, I know.
- Q. That was the year that Chamberlain and Greene ran for governor?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. What was Chamberlain's vote there in 1874?—A. Greene didn't get but sixty-two votes, I think it was.
- Q. And the balance of the 300 Chamberlain got?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Who carried this county in 1874—Chamberlain or Greene?—A. Greene, I think.
- Q. Greene carried this county by about 3,000, didn't he?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Had you seen Chors here in the city at any time recently, before he came to see you that Saturday night?—A. No, sir; not until that Saturday night he came to my house. I seen him occasionally. I cannot say I seen him at all to speak to him until that time—not until that night.
- Q. You never spoke to him before that night?—A. I have spoken to him before that night. We are well acquainted.
- Q. How long have you known him?—A. I have known him during the war, I think.
- Q. Have you known him since the war?—A. O, yes.
- Q. What business is he engaged in here?—Q. He used to plant not over two or three miles from where I used to plant.
- Q. Is that all the business he is engaged in?—A. I think he is a kind of a merchant down here.
- Q. A merchant here in the city and plants in the country?—A. I think so. I am not certain about the merchandising at present. But I know he used to have something to do with some merchandise here.
- Q. You say that when he came to see you that night that he told you that you would carry that precinct anyhow?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Did anybody hear that conversation besides you?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Who heard it?—A. My mother-in-law heard it.
- Q. Where was she?—A. She was right in the next room. Me and Mr. Chors speak on the piazza.

- Q. Where was she?—A. She was in the room.
- Q. Did you see her at the time you were talking with Mr. Chors?—A. She didn't leave me far, because she didn't know what Mr. Chors came at that time of night for.
- Q. Did you see her when you and Mr. Chors were talking?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You could see her from where you were talking?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Was the window or the door open?—A. The door was open.
- Q. Were you standing in the door?—A. We were about mid-part of the piazza.
- Q. How far were you from that door that you say was open?—A. Not far.
- Q. About how many feet?—A. About five or six feet.
- Q. You were standing right opposite the door?—A. Not quite opposite.
- Q. You could see your mother-in-law through the door from where you and Mr. Chors were talking?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Was there a light in the room where she was sitting?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. The light was turned on and you could see her by the light?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. How far was Mr. Chors standing from you?—A. Me and him was about mid-part of the piazza.
- Q. How far was he from you?—A. He was right by me.
- Q. Was he facing the door of this room where your mother-in-law was sitting, so as to see where she was sitting?—A. Whether he was looking at my mother-in-law, I could toll that. Mr. Chors stood with his back to me in this way, and I stood so with my face facing this way; I could look directly in my room. He stood before me in that way, and of course I could look directly in the room; I could look in his aud at the same time I could look in the room.
- Q. His back was to the room?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. When he called for you, you say you sent your mother-in-law to him?—A. I was in my bed. When she heard the knocking she went to the gate to see who it was, and it was this man Chors who wanted to see me.
- Q. She came and said Chors wanted to see you?—A. She didn't tell me what he wanted to see me about.
- Q. She first saw Mr. Chors, who spoke with her before she went in to see you?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Was the light burning in the hall?—A. I brought the light down myself.
- Q. Did your mother-in-law come down-stairs with you?—A. She came down before I did.
- Q. How long before you?—A. When she heard a knocking at the gate she went to see.
- Q. How long did she go down-stairs before you?—A. I suppose about ten minutes, not quite that.
- Q. When you come down Mr. Chors was standing on this piazza, was he?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. When your mother-in-law came down the stairs did she pass into this door near, where Mr. Chors was standing?—A. No; she stood up right in the door. I could see her right through the crack of the door.
- Q. When you came down-stairs where was your mother-in-law?—A. She was in what I call my dining-room.
- Q. Right in the door?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. How far was Mr. Chors standing from her when you came down?—A. Mr. Chors was then in the piazza.
- Q. I ask you how far Mr. Chors was standing from your mother-in-law when you came down-stairs?—A. When I came down-stairs Mr. Chors was about the middle of my piazza, and she was in the room.
- Q. How far from him—how many feet?—A. I did not measure the feet; I do not know.
- Q. About how many feet—four or five feet?—A. Over five feet, I suppose.
- Q. When you came down your mother-in-law was standing right in this door?—A. She was in the door—yes, sir; in the room.
- Q. You brought the light down with you?—A. I brought the light down, sir.
- Q. You say that Mr. Chors requested you to say nothing about this?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. What did you say to him?—A. I said, when he first told me, I tell him he mistake the man; I could not be a deceiver.
- Q. When he made that request to say nothing to anybody about it, what did you say?—A. I did not say anything. He tell me if I made up my mind to do it, I could see him at the Pavilion Hotel on Sunday.
- Q. He said that as he was leaving?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Who did you first tell about this?—A. Well, I speak to several persons; but I didn't name no person.
- Q. Whom did you first tell about this affair?—A. I tell several persons; I don't know who all.
- Q. Can you mention one?—A. Yes; I could mention one; I tell my folks at home.
- Q. Whom did you tell at-home about it?—A. I tell my wife about it.

- Q. Who else?—A. Well, I would have to go and find out.
- Q. Can't you tell any one?—A. I just tell you one, just now.
- Q. Can't you tell the name of any person to whom you told this?—A. I tell several persons. I tell several persons of a certain gentleman that came to me last Saturday night and offered me a bribe to do certain things; but I didn't name the man at that time.
- Q. Whom did you tell that to?—A. I said several.
- Q. Who?—A. I can't name them.
- Q. You can't name any one you told it to?—A. I tell that to different parties, as I tell you.
- Q. You can't tell the name?—A. I told Charley H. Broughton.
- Q. Who is he?—A. The man that plants with me.
- Q. When did you first tell him?—A. I suppose I told him just the day before the election.
- Q. Whom else did you tell?—A. I tell Mr. Grant.
- Q. What Grant?—A. Cyrus Grant.
- Q. Who is he?—A. Well, he is a man that planted in the country.
- Q. Lives up there in that neighborhood, near Whaley's church?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. When did you tell him?—A. I suppose I tell him the same day—just before the election.
- Q. Where did you see him up there?—A. Up there, sir.
- Q. Where?—A. Right there on the road.
- Q. Did you see him at his house?—A. He was at my house.
- Q. And you told him this at your house?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Who was present when you told him?—A. I did not particularly notice who all were present.
- Q. Anybody else besides him?—A. I don't know.
- Q. Whom did you tell here in town first about it?—A. Well, I speak to several.
- Q. Who?—A. I told one Washington—R. K. Washington.
- Q. Who is he?—A. He is here in the city.
- Q. I asked you who R. K. Washington is?—A. He is a colored man, sir.
- Q. When did you tell him?—A. Well, I must say right here that I had no particular time to notice what time I told anybody this thing. We were only speaking over the times, how the thing had went on.
- Q. Where did you first tell him?—A. I told Washington that in my house, in the city here.
- Q. When?—A. I can't remember what day I told him, sir.
- Q. Did you ever tell any white person about it?—A. No doubt I tell them the same as I stated to you.
- Q. Did you ever tell any white person about it?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Who?—A. I suppose I speak it to several white friends, too.
- Q. Give us their names.—A. I think, if I am not mistaken, I tell Major Stone.
- Q. Who is Major Stone?—A. Major Stone down here.
- Q. Who is he?—A. He is a white gentleman.
- Q. Does he hold any office?—A. He used to act here as an attorney comptroller general.
- Q. Attorney-general of the State?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. When did you tell him?—A. I think I told him yesterday; I think so.
- Q. How came you to tell him yesterday?—A. Well, I was summoned here as a witness, and I only state what I know.
- Q. Who summoned you here as a witness?—A. I don't know. I am here to-day. I don't know how I came to be here. I was informed down there that I was summoned.
- Q. Did anybody read a summons to you?—A. No.
- Q. How came you, then, to tell Major Stone about it?—A. I heard he wanted to see me, and I went to him.
- Q. He sent you word that he wanted to see you?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. What did he want to see you about?—A. I don't know any more than I tell you here.
- Q. Did you tell him about this matter after you had seen him?—A. I tell him just what I tell you here.
- Q. You told him this yesterday after you went there?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Did he ask you about it, or did you voluntarily tell him about it?—A. I was asked if I was up to Whaley's Church on the day of the election, and I said, yes, I was there.
- Q. Did he ask you about it?—A. I done stated it. That is all I can say I knowed.
- Q. Did he ask you about it himself, or did you voluntarily state it to him?—A. Did he ask me what occurred at Whaley's Church, do you mean?
- Q. Did he ask you about this matter that occurred between you and Mr. Chors?—A. He didn't know anything about it until I tell him.
- Q. How came you to tell him about it?—A. Because I was talking about the matter, and I tell him.

Q. He was the first white man you told about it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you talked it all over with him, did you?—A. I tell you that he was there talking to me, and I tell him exactly what transpired between me and Mr. Chors.

Q. Was he the first man you gave the name of the party to?—A. No, sir; he was the first white man.

Q. You said that you told several men about having a conversation of this sort with a certain man, but you didn't give his name. Now, did you ever give Mr. Chors's name to any colored man as having had that conversation with him?—A. No doubt I did.

Q. Who?—A. I can't remember.

Q. Can't remember any colored man?—A. No, sir.

Q. Major Stone was the first white man you ever told about it?—A. Yes, sir; the first white man I ever speak to about it.

Q. When did you come down from the legislature at Columbia?—A. I came down on last Saturday.

Q. And you told this to Major Stone on yesterday, which was Tuesday? When did you get information that you would be required to testify before the committee?—A. I heard it yesterday.

Q. For the first time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you go right straight to Major Stone's office when you heard you were to testify?—A. I did, sir.

Q. Did you see men with arms in their hands at the election?—A. At the voting-precinct? No, sir.

Q. Did you not see the men when they came there?—A. O, yes.

Q. Didn't they have guns?—A. Not at the polling-precincts, sir.

Q. Did you see them when they came?—A. I seen several men there, as I said at first. They had guns. They had put the guns about one hundred and fifty yards—

Q. I ask you the question, did you see any men go there with guns?—A. They didn't go to the polling-precinct with guns.

Q. You didn't see men coming there with guns?—A. No, sir; they didn't come there to the precinct.

Q. Did you see them stack those guns there in the road?—A. Yes, sir; I could see that.

Q. You could see them from the polls?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you go to where the guns were?—A. Occasionally in the day. You know a person walking around—

Q. Did you go down to where the guns were stacked?—A. I did.

Q. How often did you go down there?—A. I don't know. I had no particular call to go there and see.

Q. You can't tell how often you went?—A. No, sir.

Q. How often did you go where they were?—A. Well, walking around, I remember one instance. I went across to get some water, and these guns had been at a house on the other side of the road. That is the way I come to see them.

Q. Was anybody with the guns?—A. I suppose each man that had a gun.

Q. Was anybody down there where the guns were stacked in the road?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many?—A. I didn't count.

Q. About how many?—A. I could not say. I did not count. I am on my oath, and I cannot lie.

Q. I have not asked you to lie. I am asking for the truth. You can't form any opinion as to how many men you saw with guns?—A. No, sir.

Q. Can you form any estimate of the number?—A. No, sir.

Q. How were they stacked?—A. What I did see was men lying down on the side of the road and had their guns with them.

Q. You didn't see any guns stacked?—A. No, sir.

Q. Then the guns you saw there were in the hands of men and they were lying down on the road-side?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you didn't see any guns stacked?—A. No, sir.

Q. And you can't tell how many there were?—A. No, sir.

Q. They had their guns in their hands?—A. I tell you what I did see was aside of the road.

Q. You say they were not stacked, but men had them lying down. Is that so?—A. I say that.

Q. Then the guns were in the hands of the men, were they?—A. I tell you I didn't see any guns stacked.

Q. That is not answering my question. My question is, were the guns in the hands of the men?—A. Well, I must state to you exactly what I see. I can't state anything else; no more than what I see. You ask me whether I see these guns in these men's hands. I say I seen no guns in the hands of the men at the polls.

Q. How were the guns placed, then? You say they were not stacked. Have you not stated that the men had guns lying down?—A. Those saw that I did see; those that I did see, they were aside of the road.

Q. Men with them?—A. I suppose so.

Q. Don't you know whether the men were with them or not?—A. I suppose men were there.

Q. You suppose so; don't you know?—A. I can't be certain.

Q. Have you not just said that you saw men down there when you went to get a drink of water?—A. I say that is the way my attention was called to those guns. I tell you that is the way my attention was called.

Q. Did you not stop there and talk with those men?—A. We were always friendly.

Q. Did you not stop there and talk with those men that were there with the guns?—A. I don't know whether I did or not. I might have done it.

Q. How far did you pass from them?—A. The spring is nearly three hundred yards from the voting-precinct.

Q. How far did you pass from them going to the spring?—A. They was on the stage-road.

Q. You passed right by them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when you passed there were no guns stacked in the road, but you saw the guns and the men with them?—A. I never tell you I didn't see no guns.

Q. You say you didn't see the guns?—A. Yes, sir; but can't positively say I didn't see any at the polls.

Q. The men that were there at the polls had these guns down on the road-side, and you saw the guns and the men as you went to the spring, did you not?—A. If I see the guns and the men certain when I passed to go to the spring—I say this: I say that when my attention was called, going to the spring, I saw a few of these muskets. They was aside of the road.

Q. Were not the men with them; have you not just stated that the men were with them—that the men had them?—A. I say I didn't see them stacked up.

Q. Have you not just stated that the men were with these guns?—A. I suppose I did say that.

Q. You did say it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you cannot state whether they had them in their hands?—A. I seen guns there, but I could not say who had them. I seen one or two guns lying there aside of the road.

Q. They were lying aside of the road? Then nobody had hold of them?—A. I might take my gun—

Q. Answer my question. Did the men have hold of the guns?—A. I am trying to answer your question.

Q. Can't you answer the question directly, whether the men had hold of the guns or not?—A. That I can answer. I am satisfied I seen some few on the ground.

Q. You are satisfied now that you saw some few on the ground?—A. I tried to state that before.

Q. Did you not state not more than a minute ago that the men hadn't those guns, and that they were not stacked?—A. The men were there.

Q. Didn't they have the arms in their hands and holding them? You stated a moment ago the men were lying down in the road.—A. I say that now. When I did see them they were sitting down with the guns in their laps.

Q. Why couldn't you answer that before?—A. Well, I tried to tell to you all I could.

Q. You were a candidate there that day on the republican ticket for the legislature, were you not?—A. I was, sir.

Q. Were you distributing tickets there that day yourself?—A. Well, no; they always have a committee that take the tickets. I had the bulk of the tickets.

Q. Did you not hand them to the men yourself?—A. No; other men handed them.

Q. Did you hand any tickets yourself to any men there that day?—A. I did.

Q. To vote?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have rallyings there, as you call them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who by?—A. The colored men, sir.

Q. Who were they?—A. I had several, sir. I had Ivan Carter, Mr. Washington, Lisbon Bernan. I had John Edwards, Thomas Grant, Samuel Luftenant—those I gave tickets to distribute out.

Q. What time did they get through canvassing that night?—A. Well, sir, at the poll at eleven or twelve o'clock, as nigh as I could give it, but not later.

Q. How many men were there when the canvass closed; that is, when they got through counting the vote, and it was all over?—A. Twelve o'clock at night.

Q. How many men were there at that time?—A. Well, there was Mr. Chors, Mr. Smith, Mr. Hard, and of course they staid until we got through. Singleton, he was one of the supervisors, and this young fellow that acted as a clerk, Mr. Grays, and some others were aound.

Q. But all the voters went away?—A. Some few on both sides staid to see.

Q. You mentioned some three white men?—A. Yes, sir. Mr. Bogg was there, too.

Q. Then, about how many colored men?—A. Well, I suppose about—let me see; myself, Singleton, Bernan, and C. Grays, and Prailor. I think we staid there. It might be more, sir; but I can't be certain.

- Q. The balance had all gone home?—A. Yes, sir; the voters had all gone home.
- Q. Were you all inside of the house?—A. We were in the church.
- Q. After you got through there that night at 12 o'clock, that was the time Mr. Chors talked to you about the fairness of the election, wasn't it?—A. O, no; I didn't say that. I said when the poll closed that afternoon Mr. Chors speak to me about the well management and quietness that had occurred there that day.
- Q. Where did that occur?—A. Right at the church, sir.
- Q. Who was present when it occurred?—A. Well, several.
- Q. Do you know of any one who was present?—A. I suppose several were present. I can't name no one.
- Q. You say it was then about dark?—A. That was after the poll was closed.
- Q. Was that about dark?—A. Six o'clock. At that season it was pretty dark.
- Q. How many of the voters were there at that time?—A. I don't know. Not much. Pretty much all had went home, excepting those few that stopped to see the vote counted.
- Q. They had pretty much all gone home, except those you have mentioned, who remained to see the vote counted?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. When did you strike up the tune about holding the fort?—A. That was just after the poll closed.
- Q. It was after this conversation between you and Mr. Chors, was it not?—A. O, no; these men had gone then when Mr. Chors speak to me.
- Q. Did you not state in your examination-in-chief that after Mr. Chors said that to you that you then struck up the tune "Hold the Fort"?—A. O, no; I didn't say that. I tell you after the poll closed I struck up "Hold the Fort."
- Q. Do you now say that you did not, in your examination-in-chief, state that after Mr. Chors had spoken to you and congratulated you upon the peacefulness of the poll, that you then struck up this song about holding the fort?—A. Do you mean after Mr. Chors speak to me?
- Q. Did you not state it that way?—A. I say after the poll closed that afternoon I struck up "Hold the Fort." These men that fired off the guns did it to salute me, because they didn't know the song.
- Q. You sang the song alone, did you?—A. Yes, sir; they didn't know it.
- Q. You sang it by yourself?—A. I called on this young fellow, Singleton, because I beloved he could sing with me.
- Q. You and Singleton were the only ones that sang?—A. Yes, sir; they didn't know it.
- Q. Then after you had sung this song they fired off these guns?—A. Yes, sir; they were standing around me while I was singing.
- Q. How many of them?—A. I declare I didn't count them.
- Q. About how many?—A. I could not say.
- Q. Give some opinion about it. Was there a hundred?—A. No, sir; there was not a hundred.
- Q. Seventy-five?—A. No, sir.
- Q. Fifty?—A. I don't think it was over twenty-five.
- Q. Did they all fire off their guns?—A. No; because all didn't have guns.
- Q. How many fired off guns?—A. I can't say positive how much guns was fired.
- Q. Did anybody have command of those men?—A. No, sir.
- Q. No one?—A. No, sir.
- Q. Was anything said about reloading after the firing?—A. No, sir; not a word.
- Q. Not a word that you heard?—A. No, sir; I never heard it.
- Q. That was about dark?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. How many white men were there then?—A. Mr. Chors and Mr. Hard was there, and I think Mr. Smith. I do not think Mr. Smith went by yet—Henry Smith. I know Mr. Smith and Mr. Hard was there, because I spoke to them.
- Q. You say there were only about six of those mixed tickets with your name and Bowen's name on them put in the box?—A. Yes, sir; that is all.
- Q. Were they included in the twelve democratic votes that you speak of?—A. No, sir; they got eighteen altogether.
- Q. They made up the eighteen votes?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. There were twelve, then, straight democratic votes besides those other six?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. All the balance were straight republican votes?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You preach sometimes, don't you?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Where do you preach?—A. Out there, sir.
- Q. Out where?—A. Out on Saint James, Goose Creek, sir.
- Q. At what place?—A. At a Baptist church. One is at Eight-mile Hill; I call it Eight-mile chapel; and the other one is at Whaley's.
- Q. Do you preach at Whaley's?—A. Where we vote is the Methodist church, and my church is right back of the railroad.
- Q. What is your denomination?—A. Baptist, sir.
- Q. Were you preaching there last fall?—A. I have been preaching there the last eight years.

Q. Have you been preaching ever since you have been in the legislature?—A. Before that.

Q. How long before?—A. I was licensed in 1864.

Q. Do you preach regularly?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At that church?—A. At different churches.

Q. How often do you preach up there?—A. I preach up there every week on Sunday, and when I am in the city I goes out.

Q. Then you preach there every Sunday?—A. Yes, sir; every Sunday.

Q. Did you preach there all through the fall, during the canvass?—A. Yes, sir; I preaches all the time.

Q. You have been preaching since 1864?—A. Yes, sir; I was licensed, and the latter part of 1867, I believe, my license was renewed, and ever since—

Q. You were asked about your education. What is the extent of your education?—A. Very limited, sir; I do not boast of any at all.

Q. Can you read and write?—A. I can read my own name, sir.

Q. Can you write your own name?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you write aside from being able to write your own name?—A. I don't claim myself to be much of a pensman.

Q. Can you write aside from being able to write your own name?—A. I am not a good pensman.

Q. Can you write anything besides your own name?—A. I answered the question. I tell you I am not a good pensman.

Q. I am not asking you whether you are a good pensman. I am a miserable pensman myself. Can you write anything other than your own name? You can sign your name, can't you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you write now anything else besides that? Can you write letters?—A. Well, I am not much of a writer.

Q. Then you can't write a letter, can you?—A. No, sir; I can't write much.

Q. Can you write any aside from your name?—A. Well, I answered you in a direct question; I am a very bad writer.

Q. Can you write anything but your name?—A. I told you already. Now, what do you want me to answer?

Q. You know what I mean. Can you write a letter? You have answered that no, have you not?—A. No, sir; I can't write a letter properly.

Q. Can you write one at all so anybody can read it?—A. I can write it my way; yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever write a letter to anybody?—A. Yes, sir; I believe I have.

Q. When?—A. Well, I don't keep the dates what time I writes.

Q. Do you write letters so frequently that you can't remember them? I simply want to get the truth. Is it not true that you can't write at all except to write your name?—A. Well, I will accept that; yes, sir.

Q. Can you read?—A. Yes, sir; I can read some.

Q. To what extent?—A. I don't know, sir.

Q. Can you read ordinary print, such as a newspaper?—A. Do you want me to read something for you? If you want me to read something, you can give me the paper.

Q. Can you read a newspaper or a book?—A. Yes, sir; I read the newspaper.

Q. And book-print?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you any education beyond that?—A. Well, I can't say; no, sir. We can't boast about our education.

Q. Did you ever see arms (guns) carried to an election before this fall?—A. Well, I have said that I didn't see any, only one person there—

Q. My question is, did you see any arms at any election before this year?—A. Well, the folks about the country have guns—

Q. Answer my question directly. Did you ever see any arms at an election before this year?—A. I have.

Q. When and where? When did you ever see arms at an election before this year?—A. You want to know from me if I ever saw arms at an election?

Q. You have just answered my question, in which you say you have seen arms at an election before this year. Now, I ask you when and where?—A. I tell you at first; I did not see even any arms at this poll.

Q. I am not asking about this election. You have stated the fact, and if it is not so you can correct it, that you have seen arms at an election before this year, at some other election. Now, I ask you when and where?—A. Let me state now: I say that the folks that goes to a meeting or an election more or less take their guns along with them. That is what I tried to state to you. On the way there going either to a republican meeting or election, they just take them along with them.

Q. Did you ever see men with guns at an election?—A. No, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. The chairman means at the poll.—A. I mean at the poll.

Q. Do you remember whether you gave the name of Mr. Chors to any one to whom you spoke about this until you told Mr. Stone?—A. Yes, sir; I told it to Mr. Stone yesterday.

Q. I understood that; but had you ever given Mr. Chors's name to anybody before that?—A. I think I seen you before.

Q. But before you saw Mr. Stone did you give the name of Mr. Chors to anybody?—A. No, sir; no man.

Q. When you were asked whether you saw guns at an election, what do you understand by that?—A. I understand when he say if I saw folks go to the polls and carry a gun. To that I say, no.

Q. But have you seen people who came to attend an election have guns?—A. Yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did you see them bring their guns to the election?—A. I never seen no one carry guns to the polls, sir.

Q. Did you ever see any person before this year going to the polls with guns; going in the direction of the polls; going there as voters, with guns?—A. That I am not positive able to say.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. From whom did you get your license to preach?—A. From the Baptist association, sir.

Q. From the Baptist association of this State?—A. My church, of course, licensed me.

Q. But the license came from the Baptist association of this locality? Was it a written license?—A. My license is printed, sir.

Q. Do you remember by whom it was signed?—A. Yes, sir; it was signed by the former pastor, who was at that time chairman of the executive committee.

Q. What was his name?—A. The Rev. Charles Smalls.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Was he a colored man?—A. Yes, sir. He is dead now.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. You state it was renewed in 1867?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. By whom was it renewed?—A. By the church.

Q. Who signed that license?—A. The Rev. Julian Chase.

Q. Where does he live?—A. He lives here in the city.

Q. Is he a colored man?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you never preached in the Methodist church?—A. I preach in the Methodist church in the country.

Q. Did you ever preach at the Methodist church at Whaley's?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When?—A. We invite each other to preach often.

Q. When, if you remember?—A. The last time I preached in the Methodist church I think, if I am not mistaken, it was about last July. The question was asked me concerning the election, the time when Judge Greene ran, and the number of votes that Chamberlain got. I want to state that at that time we had a precinct at Shiloh church. It composed a portion of the voters that go to Whaley's church. Since that time they moved the precinct, and all the voters that voted at Shiloh church voted at Whaley's church.

Q. How many were there there?—A. About three hundred, sir.

Q. That is the way the other vote goes to Whaley's?—A. Yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Do you remember where those voters went at the last election; whether they all went to Whaley's church or whether some of them went elsewhere to vote?—A. I know the faces of the people that voted at Shiloh church.

Q. Do you state that all those who previously voted at this place came to Whaley's church and voted?—A. I could not say all; I say the majority came up there.

The committee adjourned to meet to-morrow, (Thursday, the 28th of December, 1876,) at 10 o'clock a. m.

CHARLESTON, S. C., December 28, 1876.

The committee met pursuant to adjournment.

ABRAM P. JENKINS (colored) sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Question. What is your age?—Answer. I was twenty-seven the 15th of last October, sir.

Q. Where do you live?—A. I live in the town of Beaufort.

Q. How long have you lived there?—A. I have lived there all my life, sir.

Q. Where did you attend the late election in that county?—A. Ladies Island, Woodlawn poll, about five or six miles from the town of Beaufort.

Q. Were you a candidate at the late election for any office; and, if so, state what it was?—A. Yes, sir; I was a candidate for the general assembly.

Q. On what ticket did you run?—A. On the democratic ticket, sir.

Q. State whether you belong to any club, and, if so, what club?—A. Yes, sir; I am a member of the Beaufort democratic club, sir, and took an active part in it, frequently; having a meeting every week just before the election.

Q. State whether the colored republicans ever interfered in any way with that club?—A. Yes, sir; the first night that I joined that club they met me on the street and wanted to know if I was going to join. I told them yes, I was going to join, and they advised me not. That a black man like me should not join the democratic party, because I was in slavery, and had sores on my back where they whipped me, and so on. And I told them, "Never mind, I was going to join the club, and am going to support the democrat party from the head of the ticket to the tail end," and on that night I heard the constitution read and signed to the roll; and that very night they came in there, and they picked at me in the room, and cursed me in the room while I was into the meeting.

Q. How many of them came into the room?—A. About a dozen or more, sir, came in. They broke up our meeting that night. We had to adjourn or else there would have been a fuss there. We could not put them out, for we were afraid there would be quite a disturbance. We had to adjourn sooner than we wanted to adjourn.

Q. State what was the conduct of the colored republicans toward you and other colored men during the canvass who desired to vote the democratic ticket?—A. There was a heap of intimidation, sir; men could not walk the street without being cursed by the republicans. And they threatened me that if they cannot get me before the election they will get me after the election if it was six months to come. They would get me on account of my politics. I always gave them to understand that I was over twenty-one, and the United States and the State of South Carolina gave me the privilege to cast my vote—to advocate who I pleased to.

Q. Did they continue those threats against you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You lived in Beaufort all the time?—A. Yes.

Q. Keep house there?—A. Yes, sir; I have a family.

Q. Did they make any threats towards you other than those you have already given? Before that time did they do any threatening act toward you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they ever send any letters to you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that?—A. That was about the 10th of October, sir.

Q. State the facts about it.—A. The letter was in my piazza, and I came out in the morning and I saw the letter with my name on it, and I picked it up and commenced to read it, and I could not read it much myself, and I called my wife, and she helped me to read it.

Q. Have you got that letter?—A. Yes, sir; here it is. [Producing same.]

Q. The letter you present here to-day is the letter you received at that time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know who wrote that letter?—A. I do not know, sir; I do not know the handwriting, sir.

Q. That was on the 6th of October?—A. No, sir; this is on the 10th of October.

The CHAIRMAN. We introduce this letter in evidence.

The letter reads as follows:

"BEAUFORT, S. C., Oct. the 10, 1876.

"Abram P. Jenkins, you dam democrat son of bitch. How dare such a dam black negro like you to go democrat? If you don't change your political opinion by Saturday night we will kill you; but you must walk very strate; if not, we will kill you, if it is not until 6 months. We want Smawles to be our Congressman, and you vote for Tillmon. We are going to vote for Hayse and Wheller and the I dare you going around and telling the people to vote for Tillmen and Hendrix. If we can't get you before the election we will get you after, if it is six months to come."

Q. You proceeded to make a statement subsequent to that time, on the 25th; proceed to state what you were about to say.

A. On that Wednesday, on the 25th, up in the county to Early Branch, in Beaufort County, where General Hampton and other officers was going to deliver a speech—they spoke there that day—I took a very active part in carrying the club I belonged to up there, and went up there and stood by the color of the flag—the banner we had there—and took a very active part in it, in trying to get all the voters I possibly could. Everybody that wanted to go from Beaufort, and was not afraid to go, they went with us, though it was not many colored ones that went from Beaufort, because they stated there that the democrats just wanted them on the cars, and wanted to kill them all, and that time we did not get many up.

Q. Who made that statement?—A. That was the republicans. We had a programme all along the island there to get as many to come up on the cars. We chartered cars on that day, and they sent out notice to the colored people that they must not go up to attend that meeting, because it was just a trap for them to upset; run the cars off, and kill them all. So by that there was not many went. So I went, and a good many that belonged to the club went; and I came back that night, and just as we got in, General Hampton and the rest of the gentlemen were in carriages, and it was not convenient for us all to ride up, and so I walked up with a lot of the boys who could not ride up; and just as we got abreast of the Sea-Island Hotel—I was along with the banner—they commenced to fling dirt on us, and begun to curse us—that we just followed the democrats all over the county for our support, and all the insulting words like that. I was not a very hard person to get mad, and so I did not mind that at all. So the meeting was called at 11 o'clock the next day, on the 26th, for General Hampton to speak in Beaufort. That day I was coming along, had locked arms with one of the colored men that General Hampton had with him, by the name of Grant, from this city. They stopped at my house all night. Four of them stopped at my house; I accommodated them at my house that night; and the next day we were hurrying to get down to the meeting called at 11 o'clock, and I looked arms with him and was passing a barber-shop, and the barber stood out on his platform.

Q. What was his name?—A. Amos Barnes. He goes also by the name of Amos Polite. He answers by either name. He was in the Army, and his name is Barnes; but he gave his name as Polite after he went into the Army. He is addressed by either name. He asked me to stop, and I told him I did not have time to stop; but I would stop when I came back. We went to the meeting, and General Hampton, McYeomans, and Judge Mackey, and one Mr. Gates, from Columbia—I do not know his initials—they spoke, and we had a good many speakers to speak, but the radicals broke up our meeting there, and we had to adjourn sooner than we wanted to.

Q. What did they do?—A. They came up there and questioned the speakers, and every word the speaker would say they would say, "you lie," and all such things like that; they said they just wanted to get us back in slavery, and went on in that way; and then that day two or three of the democrat boys went there to quiet them, and tried to get them to stop, not to insult them while they were speaking, and the first thing the policeman take the democrat boys to the jail.

Q. Were those policemen there colored men?—A. Yes, sir; they took the colored men to jail; then they went on with such a disturbance there that the county chairman had to break up the meeting; so on my way back from the speech Amos Barnes was standing right on his platform—

Q. The same man who spoke to you as you went to the meeting?—A. Yes, sir; and he called me in; we were always very friendly.

Q. He was standing on the platform where?—A. At the barber's shop; we had always been very friendly; he always addressed me by Lieutenant Jenkins. I am lieutenant of a militia company down there, and he addressed me lieutenant all the time. My first word was, when I went in, "Old man, what you say now?" He says, "Come in," and I went in. The first word he said, "You damn democrat son of a bitch, how dare a damn black man like you to be a democrat; but," he says, "never mind, I will get you if it be six months to come." So I came out of his shop and went on to my home, and the latter part of the afternoon I came out. Then the radicals had a speech that night on Bay street. I went down there to the speech there that night on the 26th; so we brought a brass band with us on the 25th, to play for us on the 26th, and that night they were serenading the hotel; and that night while I was listening to the speech there, and I heard the band play down to the hotel, and so I rushed from the speech down to hear the band play, and he was right in his shop door, this Amos Barnes was, and he called me in again, and I told him that I did not have time; that I had some business to attend to at the hotel, and that I would call when I came back; and so he insisted upon me that he had something very particular to tell me, and I must stop; so I walked backward and talked with him about forty or fifty feet across the street. After he told me he had something very particular to tell me, I turned back and went into his shop, and come into his shop, and he cursed me then for a damn black democrat son of a bitch. I could not see what he wanted to curse me so. I took it all because I did not want to raise any disturbance; it is not my character to do anything like that, so I took it all and came out from him that evening, and met him again on the next day, and I told him "good morning," and he would not speak to me; so after that I never had anything more to say to him at all until the 3d of December.

Q. Did anything else occur to you before the election?—A. No, sir; except constant cursing the democrats. I had a good many colored men belong to my club who promised to vote, and they was intimidated by them.

Q. How many had you?—A. About fifty colored men belong to my club, sir.

Q. Did you have any other trouble before the election? Was your house— A. Yes, sir; I had my house brickbat, sir.

Q. When did that occur?—A. That was the night before the election.

Q. State the facts about that; was there any meeting in town that night?—A. Yes, sir; it was a radical meeting, sir. The democrats had a meeting at our club-room; and we broke up there soon, and we went on home; and eleven o'clock that night, when the meeting was broke up down there, the radical meeting broke up. Our meeting broke up first, and we came on home, and the radical meeting never broke up until about quarter to eleven. And I was sitting in the house, and my wife was sewing to the machine there, and my mother was sitting down, and my father had gone to bed. My house is situate this way: my front is toward the south—

Q. Which way does the street pass?—A. The street passes the south part of my house. I am situate right on the corner. They fired into my house with brickbats. It lasted about five minutes. It seemed like it was about half a dozen of them, just like a "volley" of shots fired in. The blinds was shut. We could not even open the door or window to go out to see who was there until after they ceased; and then we went out, and heard them running out West street.

Q. You started to state about seeing this man "Polite" again; when was that?—A. On the 3d December, sir, this month; on a Sunday night.

Q. Where had you been?—A. I was on my way from church; I and my wife went to church, and she went on home and I came on behind her.

Q. What time of night was it?—A. This was about between half past ten and eleven.

Q. What kind of a night was it; dark or clear?—A. No, sir; the moon was very shiny.

Q. Proceed with your statement of what occurred.—A. I crossed the street; as I crossed the street coming toward the college, the white college there, I saw two men standing right up on the green, the base-ball green, it is always called. I was coming this way, and they were standing right here. I was crossing the green there, and one of the party, after I got opposite, one party went on toward the west side and the other came directly to me, and walked behind me. I had no idea who it was, and I had one hand in my hip-pocket and the other in this pocket; and I had on my dress-coat, and it was buttoned up.

Q. You had on your Sunday clothes?—A. Yes, sir. As soon as the parties got aside of me, on my left side, they caught me by the collar, that way, and said, "You damn democrat son of a bitch, you; we long wanted to get you, and I will give you hell to-night;" and about that time I was on the ground.

(Mr. Lapham objects to the witness stating occurrences of violence since the election, as immaterial.)

(The witness, proceeding:) It was so quick I did not recognize who it was before I found him on me. I got down to the ground so quick, and he hit me half a dozen licks or more before I could get my hands out of my pockets; he lay right astraddle of me.

Q. You were on your back?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. He got astride of you?—A. Yes, sir; and he pounded me. I was jammed right up to the fence; my head was right up to the fence, and he stood up and pounded me in the face and eyes; he almost killed me, sir, and I know he would have killed me, and I halloosed "murder," and the policeman heard me hollering, and he came up. He said that he heard the halloosing on Bay street.

Q. How far off is that?—A. That is about half a mile, from Bay street to Washington street.

Q. He came up and took him off?—A. Yes, sir; he came up and took him off of me.

Q. Where was this second man during this time?—A. He came up while I was on the ground; that party came right up about nine feet of us, looked right at us, and I halloosed "murder," and he went right straight off again.

Q. How long did this man beat you?—A. He must have had me down there upwards of fifteen minutes, sir; as near as I can judge about fifteen minutes or more; I put the lowest at fifteen minutes.

Q. Did he draw any blood from you?—A. Yes, sir. I have my shirt here to show you, sir, [the witness here producing a shirt;] that is the shirt I had on, sir, and the collar.

Q. Is it bloody; and, if so, to what extent?—A. Yes, sir; this is the shirt I had on, and it is bloody, sir. This was blood that was drawn from me.

Q. State to what extent you were injured, and the nature of your injuries.—A. I was badly injured, sir. Hardly anybody could recognize me. My face was about this way, and I went home that night, and went in the house; I went in crying, and my mother and them they did not know what to think of me, so they took me right down to Dr. Stewart. Dr. Stewart examined me that night and told me what to do; told me to go on home; afraid I would catch cold if I went out. The next morning I went down to him again, and he told me what to do again. I could not see; I had to be led down; my eyes were swelled up; I could not see out of the eyes at all. It was upward of ten days before I could see any light at all. I had to be shut up in a dark room. My nose here—I can feel it now—they thought that my nose was broken. I could not shut my mouth; I had to keep a cloth wet before my mouth; I could not shut it at all ; I could not hide my teeth, and Dr. Stewart even say he never see a man more beaten up than I was. The intendant of the town, Alfred Williams, said so before the court of examination. They summoned me before him the next meeting, and I went before him, and he said he would not touch the case at all, because he could not give me justice, and therefore it was for some higher court.

Q. Did you take it before any one else ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who ?—A. I took it before C. H. Wright, the commissioner—the United States commissioner.

Q. Has anything been done with the parties ?—A. The party was bound over, sir, to attend the court here, the first court of January.

Q. The United States court ?—A. Yes, sir ; at this place.

Q. You attended the election at Woodlawn precinct, on Ladies Island ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time did you go there ?—A. I went there in the morning, sir.

Q. At what time ?—A. I went there I think about half past six o'clock that morning.

Q. How many votes were polled there that day ?—A. It was three hundred and twenty votes that was cast at that poll.

Q. How many white men were there ?—A. Two, sir.

Q. The balance were colored men ?—A. The balance was colored ; yes, sir.

Q. How many democratic votes were polled ?—A. I think it was eight, sir.

Q. How many republican ?—A. Three hundred and twelve.

Q. State whether you have any knowledge of any number of colored men who attended that precinct desiring to vote the democratic ticket, and whether they did it or not.—A. We on that island had a club of colored mens, fifty-five in number, that was to support the democratic ticket.

Q. Were those men at that election that day ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know how many colored democratic votes were polled there ?—A. Well, to my knowledge, sir, I think it is no more than about seven—seven colored democratic votes, to my knowledge.

Q. To your personal knowledge there were eight democratic votes altogether ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. One of those white men there was a republican ?—A. I do not know really what Mr. Dale is, but J. F. Cole he is a democrat, advocating the democrat ticket.

Q. State how the election was conducted ; whether the colored republicans there made any threats, and what their conduct was.—A. Yes, sir ; they did make a good deal there that day. I went to a good many of the mens who belonged to the club and gave them tickets, and they would snatch them out of their hands, and tell them they could not vote such a ticket ; if they did they would have to go off the island ; and the way the poll was situated—they had two mens at the gate that looked at the ticket of every person.

Q. Did they have to approach the poll by the gate ?—A. Yes, sir ; and to show the democrat ticket, and take one of those other tickets.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. What military company do you belong to ?—A. I belong to the National Guard, sir ; Company E—second lieutenant.

Q. How long has that company been in existence ?—A. I belonged to that, I guess, about six years ; ever since the administration of Governor Scott.

Q. It is the State militia ?—A. Yes, sir ; State of South Carolina militia, sir.

Q. How many members are there in the company ?—A. I had at one time—the company was upward to about eighty-five and a hundred members.

Q. How many members had you this fall ?—A. Well, it is partly disbanded, sir.

Q. That don't quite answer my question. How many were there in that company during the fall ?—A. During the fall ? I do not know, sir.

Q. What arms did you have ?—A. We have what I think they call—I do not know exactly—the breech-loading rifles.

Q. Seven-shooters ?—A. No, sir.

Q. Single-shooters ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Breech-loading rifles ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you not have any of the six or seven shooters ?—A. No, sir.

Q. What office did you hold in it ?—A. I am second lieutenant, sir.

Q. What portion of them are colored and what portion white ?—A. All was colored, sir. All my company the field-officers is white, but the line-officers is colored.

Q. Who are the field-officers ?—A. Sheriff Wilson—William Wilson ; he is colonel.

Q. Where does he live ?—A. He live in Beaufort, sir—sheriff of Beaufort County, sir.

Q. Who were the other commanding officers ?—A. The commanding officers is W. C. Morrison, colored ; he is lieutenant-colonel.

Q. No ; I mean white men.—A. Only one white man, I said, sir ; the colonel.

Q. Did you also have a parade ?—A. We have not had a parade for two years, sir. We ordered last 4th of July to have a parade, but we could not get out mens enough to parade ; therefore we did not have a parade.

Q. Do your men retain their arms?—A. Yes, sir; they have got their arms.

Q. You retain yours?—A. Yes, sir; I retain mine.

Q. Had you anything besides a gun?—A. I have no gun, sir; I have a sword, belt, and sash.

Q. When was the democratic club, to which you referred, formed in Beaufort?—A. I think over since some time in September, sir; I do not know exactly the date, but that is the month.

Q. Was the republican club formed before that?—A. They have no republican club, sir, that is organized. They call their meeting by county chairman, or precinct chairman, and they meet.

Q. Was there not a republican meeting advertised to be called at Beaufort on the day you mentioned—the 26th of October?—A. I never heard of any advertisement at all. That night I went—

Q. For that date, I mean.—A. No, sir; not as I know of, sir.

Q. Who spoke at the republican meeting?—A. Mr. Langley—L. S. Langley—spoke there on the night of the 26th.

Q. Only one speaker?—A. More than one speaker, sir; F. D. J. Lawrence—

Q. Is he a white or colored man?—A. Colored, sir.

Q. Both of them colored?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far off was this band playing—serenading, as you say?—A. About half a mile; from one end of Bay street to the other end.

Q. And you left the meeting to go and hear the band?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was the band serenading?—A. They was serenading Colonel William Elliot, acting chairman of the democrat party.

Q. Had General Hampton left?—A. Yes, sir; he had left at 4 o'clock that afternoon; started to Colleton.

Q. How came you to go to this island on election-day?—A. I was put on the committee by my club to go over there to distribute tickets. I was executive committee of the club.

Q. You know the people of the island, did you not?—A. Yes, sir; a few of them, sir. I have some relation on the island, sir.

Q. They had always been republicans, had they not?—A. Well, sir, I do not know, sir, really whether they was or not. Do you speak of me, sir?

Q. No; the people on that island.—A. Well, I could not say exactly. They always gave the majority of republican vote until two years ago, when Hon. Judge Green run. Green beated Chamberlain on that island.

Q. He was a republican, was he not?—A. They claimed him to be a democrat. They say he was a democrat. I voted for him.

Q. How many white men live on the island?—A. I do not know how many live on the island; it is a great many. There is a Mr. Cole—

Q. Give the number; I do not care for the names.—A. I do not know, sir. I know it is about some five or six white men live on the island.

Q. What is the population of the island?—A. I do not know, sir.

Q. Can't you tell anything about it?—A. I do not know the population, sir.

Q. Do you know what the vote was in 1874?—A. No, sir; I do not know, sir, what the vote was there.

Q. How late did you stay there?—A. I staid there until after the poll was closed; about 6 o'clock.

Q. Did you stay through the canvass?—A. On that day of the election, do you mean?

Q. Yes. Did you stay until the votes were counted?—A. Yes, sir; I staid until the votes was counted, and took the vote to Beaufort to my club.

Q. Did the managers sign the return?—A. I do not know, sir, whether they signed it or not. I did not see the return. I went to the door, and when they was got through I asked the number, and they told me that Chamberlain was 312 and Hampton is 8, and so I took that and went right back to Beaufort.

Q. How did you go up from Beaufort?—A. I went over in a boat and walked; crossed over about a mile, and had about two miles to walk to the poll from where I landed.

Q. Do you know of any one who came there to vote that day who did not vote?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who?—A. A man by the name—I did not know his first name—by the name of Tanton. He did not come to the poll. He was afraid to vote. He promised me he would vote.

Q. But he did not vote at all?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know of any other case?—A. No; I do not know of any other.

Q. That is the only one you know of?—A. That is the only one I know of certain.

Q. Where did he live?—A. He lived on Ladies Island, sir.

Q. It was after dark when you started home, was it not?—A. Yes, sir; it was after dark.

Q. And you had to go how far?—A. I had to go two miles and a half to take my boat and cross over.

Q. Did you go alone?—A. No, sir.

Q. Who was with you?—A. A man by the name of Stepney Gaddis. We went back together.

Q. You walked two and a half miles on the island?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you went in the boat how far?—A. After I took the boat it was about a mile across the river, sir.

Q. Then how far had you to walk to Beaufort?—A. The boat landed right in Beaufort.

Q. I thought you said the island was six miles from Beaufort?—A. No, sir; I did not say it was six miles, sir.

Q. How far is it?—A. It is a mile across.

Q. The voting-place, I mean?—A. To go to the polls, do you mean, sir?

Q. Yes.—A. I should say about three miles, sir, or three and a half.

Q. Does this man Barnes, or Colite, as you call him, hold any position in the party, or is he merely a voter?—A. No, sir; he holds no office at all; just merely a private voter.

Q. A private in the ranks?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who is the commissioner before whom you had him arrested?—A. Mr. C. H. Wright, sir.

Q. Is he a republican?—A. Really, I do not know what he is, sir.

Q. Is he a white or a colored man?—A. White man, sir.

Q. He bound him over to court at Charleston?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The policeman that parted you, was he a colored man or a white man?—A. Colored, sir.

Q. A republican?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Don't you know whether the commissioner is a republican?—A. I really don't know, sir. I could not say whether he is a republican or democrat, sir. I never heard him say what he was, sir. I worked with him, and I don't really know what he is, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. In returning from that poll that night, did you go back the route you went by?—A. No; I did not go exactly the route that I went. When I came over I went through the "pine-land" way to get to the poll, and on my going back I went around what they call the "river-side" part, to go round the plantation around the river-shore; and it was dark, and I was not acquainted to go the way I came, so I took the river-side around. I knew I would not get lost by taking the river-side around. Sometimes I would walk next to the shore to where my boat was. The usual ferry, called the Big-House ferry—

Q. How many more votes were polled on that island this year than two years ago?

Mr. LAPHAM. I asked the witness that question, and he said he did not know.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did you see the vote there two years ago?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you state the number of votes polled?—A. No, sir; it is about 200 odd, sir.

Q. You do not know the exact number?—A. No, sir; I do not know.

Q. And this year it was 320?—A. Three hundred and twenty; yes, sir.

Q. Judge Green carried it two years ago against Governor Chamberlain?—A. Yes, sir; against Mr. Chamberlain.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. There was a larger vote polled this year than two years ago?—A. It was larger in Beaufort County. I cannot say as to any other place.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. How much larger this year was the vote in Beaufort County than two years ago?—A. I think it is about three thousand, sir; about three thousand more votes polled in the county more than ever has been polled.

Q. What was the republican majority in that county this year?—A. I really do not know, sir, exactly.

Q. Do you know how much larger it was this year than two years ago?—A. No, sir; I really do not know exactly the figure.

JAMES G. THOMPSON sworn and examined.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Question. Where do you reside?—Answer Columbia.

Q. How long have you lived there?—A. I have lived there nearly three years.

Q. Where did you reside before going to Columbia?—A. In Beaufort, in this State.

Q. What is your age?—A. Forty-one.

Q. What office, if any, do you hold?—A. I am now a United States commissioner.

Q. Did you attend any of the republican meetings during the canvass?—A. Yes, sir; I attended three of them.

Q. Where was the first meeting held that you attended?—A. At Edgefield.

Q. When?—A. I think it was the 14th of October.

Q. Was it before or after the proclamation of Governor Chamberlain disbanding the rifle-clubs?—A. I think it was after the proclamation.

Q. When did you reach there?—A. About nine o'clock in the morning we got to Pine House, I should think; may be not so late as that. We left Columbia before daylight—no; it was not so late as that. We got into Edgefield at nine o'clock, I should think.

Q. How long did you remain there?—A. We left Edgefield Court-House about five o'clock, I think, in the afternoon.

Q. Please state the occurrences of the day there without my asking particular questions.—A. I went there as a United States commissioner. There were five or six United States deputy marshals also with the party. This was the first meeting called by the republican executive committee after the nomination of Governor Chamberlain, and they made a point to have these meetings undisturbed, if possible, by the efforts of democrats to what they called "dividing time." They did not intend at that time to divide any time. They intended to have the meeting their own. When the meeting was called for this Saturday by the republican executive committee, the democrats in Edgefield postponed several of their meetings, and requested—

The CHAIRMAN, (to the witness.) State only facts of your own personal knowledge, and not what you heard.

WITNESS. I know this from publications in the newspapers. I saw the notices myself. I am the editor of a newspaper. I saw the notices in the newspapers that the democrats were invited to be present at this meeting. It had been asserted in the newspapers that Governor Chamberlain was to address this meeting. He had been advertised to address the meeting, and when we got to Batesville, or Batesburgh, as it is sometimes called, on the Augusta and Columbia Railroad, when the train stopped at the station, two or three men came into the cars with uniforms of red shirts, and one of them carrying a pistol in his hand, and walked through and examined everybody in the car. I think three got on there, and there was others outside of the car, on the platform, looking in at the windows and in at the ends of the car, and asking for Chamberlain.

Q. Was he aboard?—A. No, sir; he was not aboard. At other stations, all the way along, these men would get into the car and walk through the car and examine the passengers.

Q. Were these men armed?—A. Yes, sir; armed with pistols.

Q. And uniformed in red shirts?—A. Had their red shirts on. When we got down to Pine House, which was the station you get off at to go to Edgefield, which is eight miles from the railroad, we found a company of United States troops there, and there we got into hacks and drove off, and passed a body of United States troops going into the village. The streets of the village were filling up with bands of men coming in from different sections, on horseback, mounted and in uniform.

Q. What kind of uniform?—A. Red shirts; that is the only kind of uniform they had; soft black hats and red shirts.

Q. You went, then, to the meeting?—A. Yes, sir; we went to the meeting, and got to the meeting about eleven o'clock, I should think. A large gathering of the republicans was held at what they called Academy Grove—an old, dilapidated school-house.

Q. How many were assembled there?—A. I should think there was twelve hundred of them. After one or two speeches had been made, probably an hour and a half after the meeting had assembled, General M. C. Butler rode up to the meeting and asked Colonel Low (who was the chief marshal) if he might bring his men around the republican meeting. Colonel Low replied that he could act on his own responsibility about it; so he rode away, and in a few moments the cavalry commenced filing down the hill toward the meeting. They rode four abreast, and they came down and passed up near where I was standing, and finally encircled the whole meeting. They made a complete circle right around the meeting.

Q. Encircling the stand and all?—A. O, yes, sir; the meeting was right in the center, and they passed completely around it.

Q. Did they include the speakers' stand?—A. Yes, sir; the speakers' stand was in a grove under the trees, and they just encircled the grove, and then they halted a moment, and General Gary proposed three cheers for Hampton and Tilden, and they continued to cheer for a quarter of an hour, I suppose.

Q. How many were there there?—A. I should say there was as many as fifteen or sixteen hundred.

Q. All mounted?—A. All mounted.

Q. How were they uniformed?—A. Every one of them had their red shirts on.

Q. What arms, if any, had they?—A. They had no arms, except pistols, that I could see.

Q. How did they wear their pistols?—A. Generally strapped around them on the outside by a belt.

Q. Each one, or more?—A. Some had more than one, some had two, and some of them had them in their boot-legs.

Q. Revolvers, were they?—A. Yes, sir; they were under excellent discipline.

Q. Who had the command?—A. General Butler was in command. He had General Gary and four or five others as aids, like.

Q. What further occurred?—A. They then marched away.

Q. Where to?—A. They went back to the town.

Q. How far away?—A. I should think it was a quarter or half a mile off. General Butler asked the president of the meeting to allow them to speak, to allow the democratic speakers to speak, but the president of the meeting would not allow him to speak; then the republican meeting very soon broke up and dispersed. The marshals and commissioners and speakers went back to the hotel. Most of the rifle-club men had gone home, a few remained; some of them rode up and down in front of our hotel, and fired pistols and hurrahd for Hampton, and so on. We got into a carriage and rode back to the depot. On the way back to Pine House, after leaving Edgefield Court-House, I saw two men riding on horses, with red shirts on, talking to four or five negroes on the side of the road.

Q. Did you hear what was said?—A. Yes, sir; as we came up to them, one of them rode up toward the carriage—one of the red-shirted men—and said that the other man had been shot in the knee. One of the negroes said that he had been fired at and returned the fire; that one of these men had shot at him, and he had fired back; but whether anybody was wounded I do not know. That is the only case I saw of shooting at people.

By Mr. EDEN :

Q. You did not see that, did you?—A. No, sir; I did not.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. Did you return to Columbia?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any entry of the cars on your way back?—A. Every station we stopped at going back—after we stopped at Pine House—the men came into the cars, armed men, dressed in red shirts, some of them with pistols in their hands; one man I saw had three pistols; he had one in his hand and two strapped to him. They came through the cars and asked for Smalls, a member of Congress, who spoke over there at that time.

Q. Smalls spoke at Edgefield, did he?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they ask for any one else?—A. At one place they recognized Brayton, and one of them said he wanted to have Brayton out—take him out of the car.

Q. Was he a colored man?—A. No, sir; he is a white man. They asked him if he had spoken ever at Edgefield, and he said, "Yes." They had a great deal of talk there. I cannot tell all of it now; I do not remember it.

Q. Did he go out?—A. No, sir; one of them said he had saved him this time, and he would not save him again.

Q. Was the person armed who said that?—A. I do not know; I did not notice at the time particularly; one of them was; I do not know which one it was that said it.

Q. Where was the next meeting you attended?—A. The next meeting I attended was at Abbeville Court-House. That was on the following Wednesday.

Q. What day of the month?—A. That would be the 18th of October, I think.

Q. Was that a republican meeting?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time did you reach there?—A. We got there the day before; we had to start from Columbia the day before. There was no attempt by the democrats to divide time at that meeting.

Q. State what did occur.—A. They had a meeting of their own in town, and the republicans held theirs at a distance.

Q. How far apart?—A. About a mile apart, I should think, sir.

Q. In what numbers were they there?—A. There was about twelve or fifteen hundred republicans, I guess, and sixteen or eighteen hundred in the rifle-club procession.

Q. How were they uniformed and armed?—A. They were all uniformed, most of them in red shirts, some of them in white, I think, trimmed with red, and some in white trimmed with yellow, but they were all uniformed.

Q. What weapons had they, if any?—A. Nothing but pistols.

Q. Were they on foot or horseback.—A. All mounted that I saw.

Q. Was there any parade there that day?—A. Yes, sir; they paraded.

Q. Who commanded them?—A. I do not know who commanded them.

Q. Where did they parade?—A. They passed down out of town around to where the United States camp was situated, and up by another road into town again.

Q. Before the meeting, or after?—A. During the meeting; while the meeting was in progress.

Q. While which meeting was in progress?—A. While the republican meeting was in progress.

Q. How near to where the republican meeting was held?—A. Well, it was some distance; it was half a mile, I guess.

Q. So they could be seen; it was in sight of the republican meeting?—A. I do not know. I was not at the republican meeting when this parade took place, and I did not see it. I could not tell whether the republicans could see the parade or not.

Q. Anything occur that day?—A. No, sir; everything passed off very peaceably.

Q. There was a military company there, you say?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many men composed that company?—A. I think about twenty-five men. At Newberry I attended a meeting of the same character.

Q. On your way to or from this meeting was there any entering of the cars?—A. In going up from Columbia, we were accompanied by L. Cass Carpenter, a candidate for member of Congress in that district, and at a station called Cokesberry the whole car was filled up by men who came in to insult him.

Q. What kind of men?—A. Men dressed in red shirts, some of them, and some of them not. This was the day before the meeting. There was not but two or three dressed in red shirts; most of them were not. That was while I was going to the Abbeville meeting.

Q. Going home from that meeting was there any disturbance?—A. No disturbance.

Q. The next meeting was, you say, where?—A. At Newberry.

Q. What day was that?—A. I do not recollect. I think it was the Saturday following that meeting; I think it was.

Q. What time did you get there?—A. We got there about eleven o'clock.

Q. Was there any military companies there?—A. There was one or two companies there of United States soldiers.

Q. How many men?—A. I really do not know; thirty or forty. When we arrived at Newberry there was a very large crowd of both blacks and whites at the station; the whites were uniformed and on horseback.

Q. How many of each, giving your judgment?—A. Well, I should think there was four or five hundred of each.

By Mr. EDEN:

Q. That was at the depot?—A. Yes, sir; right at the depot. As soon as the speakers got out of the cars they started immediately to get to the court-house, where the meeting was to be held. That was right in the middle of the town, and they went up onto the front steps of the court-house to speak. The cavalry moved up on one side of the court-house, and gradually forced the crowd away from in front of the court-house.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Were they on horseback?—A. Yes, sir; these red-shirted men.

Q. How many of them were there?—A. Well, I should think there were eight or nine hundred of them by this time, coming in all the time. The republicans were gradually forced around to the side of the building, or to the end of the building rather, so that the speakers could hardly be seen; could not be heard at all. They made a great many attempts to speak; but the noise was so great, and the interruptions were so frequent, they could not be heard.

Q. Noise by whom?—A. Noise by this cavalry in front of the court-house. They were cheering for Hampton, and it was impossible to hear the speakers, and they finally gave it up. A great many attempts were made by the democrats to get the cavalry to go away and let the republicans have their meeting.

Q. That is, by the citizens you mean?—A. By citizens of the town, yes, sir. A great many of them endeavored to do so, but it was impossible; they could not get them to move.

Q. What did they say as to their purpose, if anything?—A. I do not know. I did not come very much in contact with them so as to hear them speak. I saw them several times ride through the republican meeting; bodies of them forced their way through the crowd, and finally the republicans were all driven pretty much out to the edge—to the rear of the building.

Q. How were they armed?—A. I did not see any arms except pistols.

Q. How did they bear their pistols?—A. Well, most of them had them strapped to their waists. They were fastened to a belt; just an ordinary belt around the waist.

Q. How many pistols did they carry?—A. Some had one, and some two.

Q. Revolvers?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know who was in command that day?—A. No, sir; I do not know who was in command.

Q. How many were there there at any time; what was the largest number who appeared there?—A. I do not think there were more than eight or nine hundred at the Newberry meeting.

Q. Was the republican meeting given up?—A. It was for that day. Another was ordered for the next week.

Q. What else did this cavalry do, if anything, after the meeting dispersed?—A. Nothing particular came under my observation afterward.

Q. Was there any entering of the cars going to or from that meeting?—A. Going back from the meeting, there was one or two places where a few men came aboard the train.

Q. Uniformed men?—A. Yes, sir; with red shirts; men who had been at this meeting and rode down just below to the station. They did not abuse anybody except Cass Carpenter.

Q. He was one of the speakers, was he?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did they say or do to him?—A. Well, they would invite him out, and call him names of different kinds.

Q. Do you remember what epithets they applied to him?—A. The favorite epithets was to call him a "Clory Carpenter"—some kind of a nickname they had got up on him. He is a very red-headed man, and red-bearded, and they would occasionally call him a "red-headed son-of-a-bitch," or something like that.

Q. This cavalry that you saw at these various places, were they all white men?—A. No, sir; not all white men. At Edgesfield I counted all the colored men there were in the parade, and I could only perceive nine.

Q. All white except nine?—A. That is all the colored men I could see.

Q. How was it at the other places?—A. I did not see any at Newberry; there may have been some, however; there was no parade at Newberry.

Q. You did not see any there?—A. No, sir; I did not see any.

Q. How was it at Abbeville?—A. At Abbeville there was some; I guess as many as a hundred. I did not count them, but I should think there was as many as a hundred at Abbeville—colored men.

By Mr. EDEN:

Q. That is, with red shirts on?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Did you see any arms in the hands of the republicans who attended these meetings?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see them have any arms?—A. I did not see any; there may have been republicans who had arms, but there was none exhibited.

Q. At either of the meetings?—A. No, sir.

Q. You were not at any of the earlier meetings of the canvass, were you?—A. No, sir. I attended another meeting afterward at Newberry.

Q. You adjourned to another day; did you go at the day appointed?—A. Yes, sir; it was the following week, I think. At that meeting there was no demonstration made by the rifle-clubs at all.

Q. They did not appear there?—A. No, sir; as United States commissioner, I had taken about one hundred and fifty or two hundred names of men who had been there.

Q. How large a meeting was it?—A. At this second meeting, do you mean?

Q. Yes, sir.—A. Not near as large as the first one.

Q. About how large?—A. I should not think there was more than six or seven hundred.

Q. How many were there the first day when the meeting was broken up?—A. Near twice as many, I should think.

Q. What do you know, if anything, about rifle-club armed men being in Columbia on the Sunday and Monday prior to the arrival of the congressional committee there?—A. I do not know the exact date the committee arrived; I know they arrived.

Q. On the Sunday and Monday prior to their coming, if you know anything about rifle-club armed men being there, state what you know about it.—A. I know that a large number of men arrived on the trains on Monday morning previous to the arrival of the committee.

Q. Do you know whether they were armed?—A. They were armed, but not uniformed.

Q. Armed with what?—A. Most of them that I saw had rifles, guns at least.

Q. How many would you judge came into Columbia at that time; give your best recollection?—A. I should say fully two thousand.

Q. White men?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You publish the Union Herald there, do you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been proprietor of that paper?—A. Since the 7th of November.

Q. How long have you been connected with it?—A. About three years.

Q. Do you know Mr. Haskell, the chairman of the democratic State committee?—A. I do.

Q. Was there a correspondence between him and Governor Chamberlain during the canvass as to the conduct of the canvass?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you publish it?—A. It was published in the Union Herald office; yes, sir.

Q. A correspondence between Haskell as chairman, and Chamberlain as governor?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it published in pamphlet form also?—A. Yes.

Q. See if that is a copy of it. [Handing a pamphlet to the witness.]—A. Yes, sir; this is it, down to page 15; down to page 15 is the correspondence you speak of.

Q. Including the signature of Governor Chamberlain?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What does the balance relate to?—A. The balance is simply the resolutions of the convention and platform.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Who was the author of the head-line of this pamphlet?—A. I do not know; I suppose I may have put it on. It was published in the paper. I do not recollect whether I wrote it or whether it was written when I came to the office. It was printed at the office, but I did not do the printing.

Q. Who got up that heading?—A. It may have been Governor Chamberlain himself, I do not know.

Mr. LAPHAM. Of course I do not claim to put in anything except the two letters.

Q. Did Mr. Haskell ever make any reply to this letter of Governor Chamberlain's?—A. I never heard of any.

Q. Did anybody?—A. I never heard of anybody.

The CHAIRMAN. Let the paper be filed as it is.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. How many of those pamphlets were printed and circulated?—A. I think there was a thousand of them printed and circulated.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Where did you live before you went to Beaufort?—A. Philadelphia.

Q. How long did you live in Beaufort?—A. I went there in June, 1862.

Q. From Philadelphia, Pa.?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What business were you engaged in in Philadelphia before you went to Beaufort?

—A. I was in the printing business.

Q. What business did you engage in in Beaufort?—A. When I went to Beaufort I went as a clerk in the commissary department.

Q. Did you remain there during the war as a clerk in the commissary department?

—A. Yes, sir; from June until the close of the war.

Q. Then from June, 1862, up to the close of the war, until you went up to Columbia, what business were you engaged in?—A. I was engaged a part of the time in the printing business; had a newspaper there called the "Free South."

Q. Were you editing it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were you engaged in aside from that?—A. Well, I kept a store there for a while.

Q. What sort of a store?—A. A hardware store, sir.

Q. How long did you keep a hardware store?—A. About a year or so.

Q. What year was it?—A. 1866 or 1867.

Q. After that what did you do?—A. I think in 1868 I went to Philadelphia again.

Q. How long did you stay at Philadelphia?—A. I stayed there until 1870.

Q. What were you doing at Philadelphia from 1868 to 1870?—A. I was on the Philadelphia Day, a newspaper there.

Q. In what capacity?—A. Assistant editor, part proprietor, proof-reader, &c.

Q. You left there in 1870?—A. Yes, sir; the paper failed there.

Q. Then what did you do?—A. I came back to Beaufort.

Q. What did you do then?—A. I bought another newspaper in Beaufort.

Q. What was the name of that paper?—A. The Beaufort Republican.

Q. How long did you publish that?—A. I published that until the spring of 1874.

Q. At Beaufort?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you leave there then and go to Columbia?—A. I left there then and went to Columbia, and went on the Union Herald.

Q. You have been engaged on the Union Herald at Columbia since that time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When were you appointed United States commissioner?—A. In 1872, I think, while I was at Beaufort.

Q. Were you appointed while you were at Beaufort?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you ever been re-appointed?—A. No, sir.

Q. You have held that office ever since?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you leave Columbia for this place?—A. Last night.

Q. You have been at Columbia, have you not, during all the session of the Congressional committee there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you give any evidence at Columbia?—A. I did not.

Q. You got here this morning, did you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you come here to testify?—A. No, sir.

Q. How came you to come here and testify?—A. I saw Major Stone this morning after I arrived here.

- Q. Who is Major Stone?—A. Assistant United States district attorney.
- Q. For this place?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. What transpired between you and him?—A. He asked me in regard to whether I had testified in Columbia in regard to this meeting I had attended. I said, "No;" and he said he would have me come up and testify here.
- Q. And so you came up here at his request?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Where did you meet him? Did you call to see him?—A. Yes, sir; I went to his house.
- Q. His private residence?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Did you stop there?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Did you have any communication with him before you came down?—A. No, sir.
- Q. Who went with you from Columbia out to this meeting at Edgefield—how many men?—A. There were six deputy marshals.
- Q. Who else?—A. And the four speakers.
- Q. Who were the speakers?—A. Mr. Brayton—
- Q. Who is Mr. Brayton?—A. He is candidate for solicitor in that circuit.
- Q. In Edgefield, in the Columbia circuit?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Does he live at Columbia?—A. Yes, sir; he lives in Columbia.
- Q. Who else went with you?—A. Mr. Fillebrown.
- Q. Who is he?—A. He is a clerk in the comptroller-general's office.
- Q. Was he one of the speakers?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Is he colored or white?—A. White.
- Q. Who else went with you?—A. Robert Smalls, candidate for Congress in that district.
- Q. Does Robert Smalls live at Columbia?—A. No, sir; he lives at Beaufort.
- Q. Who else?—A. Henry Hayne, secretary of state.
- Q. Any one else?—A. The correspondent of the News and Courier.
- Q. Is that your paper?—A. No, sir; mine is the Union Herald. The Charleston News and Courier.
- Q. What was his name?—A. His name is Carl McKinley.
- Q. Where does he live?—A. At Columbia.
- Q. You spoke of some men entering the cars, on your way from Columbia to Edgefield, at Batesburgh; how many men came into the cars on that day?—A. Two or three.
- Q. You say they inquired for Chamberlain?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. What did they say—asked if Chamberlain was on board?—A. Just asked if Chamberlain was aboard.
- Q. Is that all they said?—A. I think that was all that occurred there.
- Q. Then, at Pine House, where you stop to get off to go to Edgefield, you found a company of United States troops, and they went into Edgefield with you?—A. No, sir; we drove on; they did not accompany us. They were afoot, and we drove in a hack.
- Q. You say before you went to this Edgefield meeting that you noticed from the papers that the democrats also proposed to have a meeting there that day, too?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. That was published in the papers. What papers did you see that in?—A. The Edgefield Advertiser.
- Q. Any other paper?—A. I will explain what I mean by that. There had been regular democratic meetings advertised at other places in the county for that day before the republican meeting was announced, and these meetings were postponed in order to have the democrats assemble at Edgefield.
- Q. What did the Advertiser state?—A. That is about all it stated that I recollect.
- Q. Just stated that the meetings in the country would be deferred, and that there would be a meeting at Edgefield on that day?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Now you speak of these men being in red shirts. Don't you know the fact to be that that was the uniform of the democratic clubs of the State in the last canvass?—A. No, sir; it was the uniform of all the rifle-clubs.
- Q. You call those men rifle-clubs?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Did they have any rifles?—A. No, sir.
- Q. Was not that the recognized uniform in this State of the democratic clubs?—A. I suppose it was. That is the way I always saw them.
- Q. How many republicans were at that meeting in Edgefield?—A. I should think there was about twelve hundred.
- Q. Do you know that there were more democrats there than republicans?—A. Yes, sir; I think there were more.
- Q. Did you not form your estimates of the numbers of those men that you have named in your testimony in chief from their being on horseback?—A. Well, of course I took that into consideration when I made my estimate. The way I made my estimate was after the meeting was over, in endeavoring to come at something like a fair count without counting them. I estimated the distance that they took up, just as you would a cavalry regiment, and I estimated the distance from one end of them to the other as they circled around the meeting and lapped over a little on the other road, which was about a mile.

Q. You formed your estimate of these men from seeing them on horseback?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you not know it to be a fact that you are very liable to overestimate the number of men when on horseback?—A. Well, of course you would if you did not take into consideration that they were on horseback. I know that they might be overestimated very largely by many people; but I have seen a good many men on horseback. I think if you would refer to the newspaper accounts of that meeting you would find that I underestimate them to you.

Q. Don't you know, as a newspaper man, that newspaper men are very much given to overestimating facts?—A. I know they are, very much.

Q. And especially in political times each party is liable to exaggerate the numbers at joint political meetings?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is done for political effect, is it not?—A. Yes, sir; but I should not do so now. I do not think it is very wise at any time.

Q. Now, when you all went to that meeting at Edgefield, you say that General Butler rode up to where your meeting was. Was your meeting then in progress?—A. Yes, sir; it was then in progress.

Q. The speaking was going on?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say he asked this man, Colonel Low, who was the chief marshal of the republican meeting?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the republicans form any procession to go out to this speaking?—A. No, sir; they all just straggled out there.

Q. What were they doing with the chief marshal?—A. He was not the chief marshal of that meeting; he was the United States deputy marshal.

Q. Colonel Low was a United States deputy marshal?—A. Yes, sir. He was well known to General Butler.

Q. General Butler rode up and requested him to have a joint meeting?—A. No, sir; not to him. He just asked him whether he might ride around the meeting with his men.

Q. He asked him if he might bring his men to the republican meeting?—A. Well, he did not want to bring them to the republican meeting. He said he wanted to ride around the meeting to show his men.

Q. Did you not understand that that was merely for political effect, as is usual in political campaigns?—A. I understood it was to create a political effect, of course.

Q. Are not political parties at such meetings in the habit of displaying their numbers, in order to impress the other party with an idea of their strength?—A. I never saw, until I saw these meetings, any such display.

Q. Never saw any processions?—A. I have seen processions.

Q. Have you not seen processions go by day and night in political campaigns?—A. Plenty of them.

Q. Is not the object of such displays to impress the public mind and the other party of the strength of that party?—A. Yes, sir; I suppose so; but I never saw anything like that before.

Q. You never saw men on horseback?—A. O yes, sir; I have seen a great many men on horseback, but I never saw one party ride around another party in that way at a political meeting.

Q. It may be your experience has been limited.—A. I have had a pretty wide experience in politics, but I never saw anything like that.

Q. What did Colonel Low say to General Butler?—A. He said he must take the responsibility of doing so himself; that he would not give him any permission to do so.

Q. These men came down to the meeting, you say. Where did they march?—A. They marched entirely around the meeting.

Q. How far off did they march?—A. Well, they marched within ten yards, I should think, of the outskirts of the meeting.

Q. How were the men seated?—A. The men were not seated; most of them were standing.

Q. There were some twelve hundred of them, you say—your estimate of the republicans?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. They were just scattered around over the ground, were they?—A. Yes, sir; but there were trees in the center. It was a very handsome grove, and under these trees was the stand, and these men were under the trees; and as the cavalry came down and passed along where I was sitting on the porch of the old dilapidated school-house, they passed right around the meeting, and down another road, and back into the same road that they came by.

Q. And went on back?—A. And went on back.

Q. Did they halt?—A. They halted a little while.

Q. How long did they halt?—A. Well, I should think ten minutes or a quarter of an hour.

Q. And gave three cheers for Tilden and Hampton?—A. Yes, sir; it was a continual cheering. May be you have heard one of those cheers. It was a yell.

Q. Were you ever in line of battle?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where?—A. At the battle of Bull Run.

Q. Where else?—A. At Centreville, before Bull Run.

Q. Were those the only two battles you were in?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. After that you went into the commissary department?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you did not quit it until the close of the war?—A. No, sir; I had as much as I wanted.

Q. You say those men were under excellent discipline?—A. Yes, sir; they seemed to be under very good discipline.

Q. They went off after that, did they?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see that every one of these men were armed with pistols?—A. No; I did not see every one of them was, but I saw a great many of them.

Q. You saw a great many armed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How were they dressed; have on any coats?—A. No, sir; they had no coats on.

Q. Had on this uniform you speak of?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How were the republicans dressed? Were they in any uniform?—A. No, sir.

Q. They had on coats, had they not?—A. Some of them had.

Q. You do not know whether they were armed or not?—A. No, sir; I did not see any of them armed.

Q. General Butler came down there and requested them for the privilege of making a speech?—A. That was after his men had all gone away when he came back.

Q. After his men went away he came back and requested to join in the discussion and was refused?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then did he go off?—A. Yes, sir; and then he went away.

Q. Do you know whether the democrats had any speaking at their point or not?—A. Yes, sir; they had. I heard they had.

Q. How many speeches did the republicans have there upon the stand?—A. Four.

Q. They did not break up, then, until they got through speaking?—A. No, sir.

Q. There was no disturbance there?—A. No, sir; I know of no disturbance.

Q. You say that when you went to the hotel that most of these democrats had left the town?—A. Yes, sir; most of them had gone away.

Q. You say some of them rode up and down the street. How many rode up and down the street?—A. Well, various parties of them; six or eight of them; sometimes three or four. I presume there were fifty in all, probably, that passed by the house.

Q. Were they not passing out of town and riding down the street; was there anything unusual in their riding along the street?—A. Nothing except that they fired their pistols.

Q. How often did they fire their pistols?—A. I did not count them. I suppose thirty or forty times.

Q. You heard that?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you?—A. Standing on the porch of the house looking at them.

Q. Standing on the porch right where they were passing?—A. Well, there was a small garden in front. I could see them plainly.

Q. But you were out in full view looking at them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you were not alarmed, were you, standing out there looking at them?—A. No, sir; not particularly alarmed.

Q. They were just shooting their pistols off in the air?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say as you went from Edgefield back to the depot you saw two men on the roadside?—A. There were two men on horseback on the roadside talking to or rather gesticulating to three or four negroes.

Q. Did you see those negroes have any arms?—A. No, sir; I did not see any arms.

Q. One of the white men came up to your carriage and said he was shot in the knee?—A. No, sir; he said the other man had been shot in the knee.

Q. Where was the man who was shot in the knee?—A. They were taking him away.

Q. Who was taking him away?—A. Another man had ridden up from below there, the same as if he had joined him, and he was on horseback moving off in another direction.

Q. He said a man had been shot in the knee?—A. Yes.

Q. Was this conversation that you had with the colored men, in the presence of these white men?—A. No, sir; they rode away then.

Q. Then you went on to the colored men?—A. Yes, sir; and one of them just halloed out that this man had fired at him. I do not know whether it was him or not. You see we were riding along and did not stop.

Q. And he halloed that to a man without your saying anything to him?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And said that they had been shot at, and he returned the fire?—A. Yes, sir; that he had fired back.

Q. That they had shot this man?—A. Only just what they said. I did not see the wound at all; I was not close enough to it.

Q. All you knew about it is what this colored man called out as you passed by?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. On your way back, you say, a man came into the cars and asked for Smalls?—A. Yes, sir; they came into the cars at one place.

Q. Where was that?—A. I think it was at Ridgespring.

Q. What did they say?—A. Well, they said they wanted a lock of Small's hair.

Q. Was that all they said?—A. That is about all they said.

Q. Was there any protest taken by Smalls to that?—A. Smalls did not say anything.

Q. Smalls is a colored man?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was he at that time?—A. He was there, sir. I do not suppose they knew him, though.

Q. This rifle-club procession—you call it a rifle-club procession—did they have any rifles?—A. No, sir; I didn't see any.

Q. Were they mounted on horseback?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in this uniform that the democrats usually wore at their meetings?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Some of them had red shirts, and some white trimmed with red and yellow?—A. Yes, sir; I think they were white. The only place I noticed any variety in the uniforms, there was one company that had some green facings on them, the only companies I noticed at any of these meetings except the red-shirts.

Q. They had about a hundred colored men in that procession?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. They formed a procession, you say, and marched—where to?—A. They came out from the court-house square and passed down around a hill on which the United States camp was situated, and passed around it.

Q. Passed down to where these United States soldiers were encamped?—A. Yes, sir; and went up another road and went back to the town.

Q. Was there anything unusual in that procession?—A. No, sir; I do not know of anything unusual about it.

Q. They did not come to your meeting, did they?—A. No, sir.

Q. Their meeting was half a mile off, you say?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many pistols did you see there?—A. Well, I do not know. I did not take any particular notice of them. I did not pretend to count them.

Q. Was there anything disorderly in that procession—anything unusual about it?—A. No, sir; very remarkably orderly, as much so as if they had been a United States cavalry regiment.

Q. Everything passed off quietly through the day?—A. Yes, sir; no disturbance.

Q. You saw Carpenter there, the candidate for Congress in that district?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did he live?—A. At Columbia.

Q. Abbeville is in the same district that Columbia is?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You saw men come into the cars and talk to Carpenter?—A. They came in asking whether Clory was aboard, and some would point him out. The car was entirely surrounded at Cokesbury by people, looking in at the windows, calling out to him and abusing him, asking him to come outside and daring him to come out; and asking him to take his head out of the window and to come out on the platform. Well, they would make such remarks as, "There is the little red-headed son of a bitch," and such things as that. And one man came into the car and said he wanted to ask him one question; that if he would answer him one question he would go home and let him alone. And he said, "Yes," he would answer if he could; and this fellow leaned over and he says, "Where are you going to sleep to-night?" He said he did not know where he was going to sleep. "Well," he said, "that is what I wanted to know; I wanted you to tell me where you was going to sleep."

Q. Were you armed with the blanks necessary to make arrests?—A. I was.

Q. How many did you have with you?—A. I do not know; I had a hundred, I suppose.

Q. And there were six deputy marshals?—A. Yes, sir; there were five or six.

Q. Who ran against Carpenter?—A. D. Wyatt Aiken.

Q. Which of those men were elected?—A. D. Wyatt Aiken.

Q. This meeting at Newberry, on the 21st of October, was attended by large numbers of whites and blacks, was it not?—A. Yes, sir; the first meeting was.

Q. Did both political parties meet you at the depot?—A. They were congregated about the depot to see who was coming, I suppose.

Q. There was nothing unusual about that, was there?—A. Nothing particularly. The democrats do not usually go to republican meetings and republicans to democratic meetings. That is the only thing that is unusual about it. They were there, uniformed and mounted; that was not unusual here; it would have been, I think, unusual in other places.

- Q. Why do you think it would have been unusual in other places for men to be uniformed?—A. As a usual thing, democrats do not attend republican meetings.
- Q. Is it unusual for parties to have joint political discussions?—A. No, sir.
- Q. You stated there were four or five hundred of each party there at the depot?—A. I should think so; a mere estimate.
- Q. Were there any colored men among the democrats?—A. No, sir; I did not see any.
- Q. Were these colored republicans that met you at the depot?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Altogether colored men?—A. No, sir; there were some few white men.
- Q. How many?—A. I should not think exceeding ten or a dozen.
- Q. Did you say there were two companies of United States soldiers stationed there?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. How far off were they from this court-house?—A. They were right on the outskirts of the town, on the edge of the town; probably a quarter of a mile or one-third of a mile away.
- Q. Were they in sight of the court-house?—A. No, sir; they could not see the court-house.
- Q. Were any soldiers or officers about there?—A. No, sir; none at all.
- Q. Did you see them yourself?—A. I went up to the camp to see them.
- Q. When?—A. After the meeting.
- Q. Did you send to them during the meeting?—A. No, sir.
- Q. Were you at the meeting at the court-house when it began?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Who made the first speech?—A. I think Mr. Carpenter tried to speak first.
- Q. How long did he speak?—A. Well, he did not speak more than five or ten minutes. When he tried to speak no one could hear him.
- Q. Who spoke next?—A. I do not recollect whether it was Professor Greener, a colored man, or not.
- Q. Who was he?—A. He was a professor in the South Carolina College.
- Q. At Columbia?—A. At Columbia; yes, sir.
- Q. How long did he speak?—A. Well, I suppose, he was altogether a quarter or half an hour.
- Q. Who spoke after him?—A. I think Mr. Carpenter made another attempt to speak; there was so much confusion that I could not see exactly.
- Q. Did any one else speak?—A. No, sir; no one spoke at all, no more than tried to make a speech.
- Q. You say the democrats there tried to get the men who were on these horses to retire?—A. Some of them did; yes, sir.
- Q. How many?—A. Well, there was Mr. Pope. I think he was the intendant of the town; I am not certain, though.
- Q. Who else?—A. I do not know of any one else by name, but I have heard of a number of other people. I do not know how many of my own knowledge there were, but there was quite a number who were anxious to have the rifle-clubs go away and let the republicans have their meeting in peace.
- Q. You call it a rifle-club?—A. That is what we call them and what they call themselves.
- Q. Did they call themselves rifle-clubs after they were disbanded by Chamberlain's proclamation?—A. I do not know whether they did or not.
- Q. Did they take their designation as rifle-clubs from their organization that preceded Chamberlain's proclamation?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Don't you know that Governor Chamberlain wrote letters of approval of the existence of those rifle-clubs and became an honorary member of them himself, and that they sent him a notice that he was elected an honorary member?—A. He did. Two sent him notice that he was elected an honorary member. I do not know of any more than those two.
- Q. Don't you know he was received by the rifle-clubs when he came to this city last summer?—A. Yes, sir; but those were not political clubs.
- Q. And had he not complimented the rifle-clubs here in a speech?—A. I do not know. I was not here.
- Q. Did you not see it stated in the papers?—A. I saw it so stated in the papers.
- Q. You say as you returned from this first meeting at Newberry, on the 21st, that men who had been at the meeting came into the cars?—A. I supposed they had been to the meeting.
- Q. How did you know that they had?—A. I did not know that they had.
- Q. You just assumed that?—A. I just assumed that they had been.
- Q. They were the men who inquired for Carpenter?—A. Yes, sir; men who came in; we just stopped at one or two stations below there.
- Q. They came in and spoke to Carpenter?—A. They would generally stand at the door and point him out and call at him.
- Q. Were you at the second meeting at Newberry?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. That was all quiet there; no trouble there?—A. No, sir.

Q. At the first meeting at Newberry there were a thousand or twelve hundred republicans there?—A. Well, I should say there was at least twelve hundred.

Q. Possibly more?—A. Yes, sir; possibly more. They were more scattered than is usual at meetings.

Q. With regard to these men that you saw at Columbia just before the congressional committee came there, what was the occasion of their coming there?—A. Why did they come?

Q. What was the occasion upon which they were there?—A. I do not know; they were ordered there, apparently. They all came in one day.

Q. What was the occasion that brought them there?—A. I do not know why they came there; it was generally thought that they came there to inaugurate Hampton.

Q. I ask you whether it was not generally expected through the country, among Hampton's friends, that he was to be inaugurated at that time, and did not these men come there to witness his inauguration?—A. I do not know; that is what they said. They said they came there to inaugurate Hampton.

Q. And the Hampton inauguration was deferred, was it not?—A. Yes, sir; it did not take place at that time.

Q. What was before Chamberlain's inauguration, was it not?—A. I do not recollect the date of Chamberlain's inauguration.

Q. Was not Chamberlain inaugurated on that very day—Monday or Tuesday?—A. I think not; I do not recollect.

Q. Do you recollect the date of his inauguration?—A. I think it was before that; it was not on either of those two days. I do not think it was; I am not certain.

Mr. LAPHAM. Mr. Chamberlain was inaugurated the day we arrived.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Was it not expected that this inauguration would take place on the Tuesday before we got there? We got there on Wednesday night, and was it not the general expectation and general custom to inaugurate the governor at that time? Was it not the expectation that the inauguration would take place at that time?—A. That is what they said they came in there for—to inaugurate Hampton.

Q. Who did you hear say that?—A. Well, it was so stated in the papers, I think—the general talk.

Q. Your information as to what brought them there was what you learned from the papers?—A. Yes, sir; the supposition and private talk.

Q. Supposition among your private friends, was it not?—A. By both parties; people of all kinds.

Q. At that time the republican party had charge of the capitol, had they not?—A. Yes; the governor, of course.

Q. Was not the capitol full of Chamberlain's constabulary and soldiers at that time?—A. Yes, sir; they had soldiers stationed in it; I did not know of any constabulary there.

Q. Did you never see any there?—A. I have seen some since.

Q. When did you first see them there? Was not that constabulary established in the capitol at the time the legislature was first organized?—A. No, sir; I do not think there was any constabulary there then; I think the first of it I ever saw was after the democrats had been spending those three or four days in the capitol, in the legislature. You know they staid there for four days.

Q. Who first excluded the democratic members from the house when they first went there; was not the constabulary there then?—A. I do not know; I was not there; I was not at the capitol at that time, or very much there at any time.

Q. Did not the colored men come in from the country that day, too, when these men were there?—A. I do not know of any.

Q. Did you not see colored men with them?—A. No, sir.

Q. You did not?—A. No, sir; no colored men with any of them.

Q. You did not see any at all?—A. No, sir.

Q. Where did these men come from?—A. They came in on the railroads.

Q. Was there not quite a large number of people of both political parties gathered there at that time from all over the State?—A. I do not know that there was any special gathering of republicans there.

Q. You do not?—A. No, sir.

Q. Wasn't there any more than usual there at that time?—A. No more than is usual at the meeting of the legislature.

Q. The United States troops had charge of the capitol at that time?—A. Yes, sir. I have seen a good many more republicans there than there was at this time.

Q. There was no disturbance there that day, was there?—A. No, sir; none that I heard of.

Q. This pamphlet that is presented, purporting to be a correspondence between Colonel Haskell and Governor Chamberlain, did you print that?—A. It was printed in the Union Herald office; yes, sir.

Q. Did you bring this pamphlet here with you?—A. No, sir.

Q. You do not know whether you made this heading to it or not?—A. No, I do not know; I am not certain whether it was not copied out of the newspaper.

Q. Who had it printed?—A. Governor Chamberlain had it printed himself.

Q. Did he get up this heading?—A. I do not know whether he did or not. It is possible that it was copied right out as it was in the newspaper; I am not sure; it was printed, you know.

Mr. LAPHAM. I do not ask for the whole paper to go in unless you desire it.

The CHAIRMAN. I want the whole thing to appear just as it is here.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Governor Chamberlain had this printed, you say?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At his own expense?—A. It was set up originally in the newspaper.

Q. He had this pamphlet printed at his own expense, had he not?—A. If he did, I do not think he ever paid for them.

Q. Who did?—A. I think it was done by the newspaper—I am not sure—by the company, and taken out of the newspaper.

Q. Taken out of what paper?—A. The Union Herald.

Q. Is that your paper?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At its own expense?—A. I think so.

Q. You then had it printed at your own expense?—A. Well, the paper does not belong entirely to me.

Q. Who does it belong to?—A. At the time that was printed—

Q. Who does it belong to?—A. It belongs to myself and a gentleman named Coven-der.

Q. Where does he live?—A. At Columbia, sir; I now own it, but only since the 7th of November.

Q. Who owned it at the time this was printed?—A. At that time Mr. Chamberlain owned a part of it, myself, and so did Cordozo.

Q. Governor Chamberlain, Cordozo, and yourself owned the paper?—A. Yes, sir; at that time.

Q. And you printed all these pamphlets, about a thousand copies, and circulated it as a campaign document?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. For the purpose of circulating Chamberlain's letter?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Haskell's letter occupies a little over two columns?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Chamberlain's occupies twelve columns?—A. Yes, sir; we thought it was a very good campaign document.

Q. So you thought all his speeches were?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You thought your editorials were, too, did you not?—A. Yes, sir; we tried to make them so.

Q. How long will you be in Charleston?—A. I want to get away to-night.

Q. Where are you going?—A. Back to Columbia.

By Mr. EDEN:

Q. Where did you see these two thousand guns that those men had who came to Columbia just before the committee arrived there?—A. Well, I did not see two thousand guns. I said I thought there was about two thousand men had come into the city.

Q. Did you not say something about them having guns?—A. Those I saw had guns.

Q. How many did you see that had guns?—A. Well, I saw several companies of them.

Q. What do you mean by companies? Were they in military array?—A. They got out of the cars together and marched up together. The first ones I saw were at a hall just above my office; they brought their guns up there and laid them in this hall, where the most of them slept while they were in town. I saw another company that went out past the post-office to the fair-grounds, who came back after a while without their guns.

Q. The State fair was in progress there at the same time, was it not?—A. No, sir; it was intended to be fair-week, as they called it.

Q. Was there not a fair there?—A. No, sir.

Q. Well, people came in from different parts of the State to the fair, did they not?—A. No other people but these people.

Q. There certainly was a fair there?—A. Well, I went out there myself twice, but I saw no signs of any fair.

Q. Did you not publish in your paper an account of the fair?—A. No, sir; I published that there was not any.

Q. Did you not publish in your paper that there was to be a fair prior to that time?—A. Yes, sir; we published the announcement, the regular official announcement that there would be a State fair.

Q. And the time covered the period when these men came in?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you announce that there would be no fair?—A. I did not make the announcement at all. I made the announcement afterward.

Q. How many times did you go down to the fair-grounds during the period the fair should have been in progress?—A. Twice.

Q. On different days?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The congressional committee taking testimony at Columbia have open sessions, do they not?—A. I do not know; I have never been in one of the committee-rooms.

Q. You have been publishing their testimony; I mean the testimony of the House committee?—A. No, sir; I have not taken any.

Q. Did you not know before you came down here that the committee was taking testimony in reference to the conduct of the canvass in Edgefield, Barnwell, and Abbeville?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The committee there were taking the evidence of men of both parties, were they not?—A. Yes, sir; I believe so.

CHARLES BAKER (colored) sworn and examined.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Where do you reside?—A. No. 10 New street.

Q. In this city?—A. Yes, sir; I have been working in the country.

Q. Where did you reside during the fall?—A. I have been living at No. 10 New street all the fall.

Q. Who did you work for here in this city?—A. Mr. Oakman.

Q. What is his first name?—A. R. Oakman, I think.

Q. What is his business?—A. He keeps a horse-stable; he sells horses and mules.

Q. Where is Mr. Oakman's place of business?—A. Corner of Church and Broad.

Q. How long have you worked for him?—A. I cannot exactly tell—between two or three months, as near as I can come at it.

Q. Do you work for him still?—A. No, sir; I do not work for him now.

Q. When did you leave?—A. At the time General Wade Hampton was coming through on the Savannah Railroad to have a parade here; and Mr. Oakman said something to me about parading that day, and gave me a badge, and wanted me to ride the horse called "Charley;" and I told him I did not like to do it. Well, he said, that is the way I might vote the ticket. I told him I did not know whether I vote or not. Well, he said, if I was not going to parade with Mr. Hampton I could do as I chose about it—parade or I could go—that he did not want any one to work for him who did not support and stand by the ticket.

Q. What ticket?—A. The Hampton ticket, sir.

Q. You declined to go in the procession, you say. What was done? Were you discharged, or not?—A. They told me to take my discharge.

Q. State whether you were discharged by Mr. Oakman.—A. Yes, sir; he gave me my chances to stay, to stay and support the ticket and parade, or go; and so I went.

Q. And have not worked for him since?—A. No, sir; I met him once since; he said he did not think I had treated him right.

Q. Have you worked for anybody since?—A. No, sir.

Q. Have you been out of employment ever since?—A. O, yes, sir.

Q. How old are you?—A. I will be twenty-seven the 15th of February, sir.

Q. Have you a family?—A. Yes, sir; a wife, sir; no children; just a wife alone.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge of any other persons who have been discharged?—A. No, sir.

Q. How long was this before the election?—A. This was just at the parade of Mr. Hampton.

Q. About how long was it before election-day?—A. Monday was the parade. They vote the Monday a week—they parade on Monday and vote that Tuesday week. Saturday night I had this choice.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. How long have you been living here in Charleston?—A. I think it was the 4th of February, or somewhere along there.

Q. This last February?—A. This last February gone will make a year since I have been in town. This coming February will make it two years.

Q. Where did you move from when you came into town?—A. From the country.

Q. Whereabouts in the country?—A. Wadmalaw Island; but my native home is up in the State.

Q. How long did you live at Wadmalaw Island?—A. When I first came down here I came down here in '65. I have been a soldier for one year. From Beaufort I came to Mount Pleasant, and then I came here to Charleston, and then I went up on Wadmalaw Island, and made that my home.

Q. What were you doing at Wadmalaw?—A. Doing different things; part of the time waiting in the house.

Q. You came here to Charleston last February a year?—A. From the country on the island.

Q. And have lived here ever since?—A. O, yes; I call this my home.

Q. Where have you worked during the time you have lived here; have you staid in the city all the time?—A. O no, sir.

Q. What have you been doing?—A. Going to Sullivan's Island, across here, and working part of the time.

Q. What were you doing over there?—A. Clean house, and roll sand over gentlemen's lots, and water trees, and all;

Q. What else did you work at?—A. Well, I never done anything else over there.

Q. Where else did you work?—A. I have been up to Colonel Craig's, where they dig rock, and worked there.

Q. How long did you work there?—A. Well, I have been there some considerable time.

Q. Who were you working for there?—A. For Colonel Craig and Mr. Bowen.

Q. Is Bowen the sheriff of this county?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did you work for him?—A. Well, I have been there about a year, back and forward; come home every Saturday night; sometimes every two weeks.

Q. When did you quit working for them?—A. Let me see—this winter will make a year ago.

Q. Then what did you do?—A. Well, I knocked all about town here, catching up work wherever I could.

Q. Sometimes you would be out of work altogether?—A. Yes, sir; for a time.

Q. For how long a time?—A. Well, sometimes two weeks, three weeks, and sometimes a week, and sometimes four or five days; and sometimes I got a half a day's work.

Q. And sometimes you would be out of work for three or four weeks?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was the case when you went to this livery-stable, was it not?—A. That was about in August; business was dull, of course.

Q. How long had you been out of business then—out of any employment—when you went to the livery-stable?—A. I suppose I had been about a week then, as near as I can come at it. I guess I came over from Sullivan's Island then.

Q. You had been over there trying to get employment?—A. I had been working over there.

Q. What had you been doing over there?—A. I told you, sir.

Q. I thought that was before you went to work with Mr. Bowen in his phosphate works?—A. I told you that I was at Sullivan's Island when I went to the livery-stable; that is where I came from.

Q. When you were over on that island, were you doing such little jobs as you could get them?—A. I was hired there to work.

Q. How long did you stay over there?—A. I staid until I ended the job rolling sand, &c.

Q. How came you to quit there?—A. I got out of work, and I had to.

Q. Then you were out of employment how long after you quit over there?—A. About a week, sir.

Q. Then you hired at this livery-stable?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What were you getting there?—A. I was getting fifty cents a day, sir.

Q. And boarding yourself?—A. Yes, sir; he told me that times was so hard he could not afford to pay much more.

Q. That is very usual in this country here, fifty cents a day and finding yourself, is it not?—A. No, sir; a dollar a day; the original price is a dollar and a quarter.

Q. Has not that been very usual this last summer; you say times were hard?—A. Yes; I spects so, but I never work for fifty cents before in town.

Q. Why did you work for fifty cents then?—A. Well, it was better than doing nothing.

Q. You could not get a dollar elsewhere, could you?—A. At that time do you mean, sir?

Q. Yes.—A. Not as I knows of, sir.

Q. You were out of employment, and you took that rather than do nothing; was that it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you ever had any talk with Mr. Oakman about politics before this time—before this Hampton parade?—A. O yes, sir.

Q. What did you talk about?—A. He axed me about it.

Q. What did you tell him?—A. I told him I had nothing to do about it, and I did not care much who was elected.

Q. You gave him to understand that you were rather indifferent about poiltics as to who might be elected?—A. I told him all I wanted was my work—something to do; I was not a politicianer.

Q. Did he ever talk to you more than once?—A. No, sir.

Q. Just asked you who you were going to vote for?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you told him you did not know what you were going to do; and the Saturday before Wade Hampton came here to make his speech they were going to have a parade, and he just told you that you could take the horse, Charley?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you not lead Mr. Oakman to believe before that that you would probably vote with him?—A. No, sir; he told me this: that I must either take my chances—

Q. He never told you anything of that sort before that evening, did he?—A. No, sir.

Q. Had you not in your talk with him rather led him to believe that you were going to vote with him?—A. I told him I had nothing to do with politics, but I did not care much who he elected.

Q. And when that parade came on he told you you could take the Charley horse and join in the parade?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you say to him?—A. I told him I did not think I could do it. I told him I did not feel like it. Well, he said, I could take my chances. He said, "Of course any one, unless he is going to support the ticket he is not going to give him work."

Q. He said he did not feel disposed to give any one work who did not support the ticket, and you could take your chances?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you left?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say that since that you have met Mr. Oakman, and he said he did not think you had treated him right?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What brought about that conversation?—A. I do not know, sir; I suppose about the way I come off.

Q. Where did you meet him?—A. I met him on the street.

Q. What was the first remark he made to you when you met him?—A. I said, "Good morning, sir; and he said, "Charley, I don't think you treated me right;" and he did not say no more, and I went on.

Q. He complained that you had not treated him right in leaving him?—A. Yes; sir.

Q. Did you tell him you were going when you went away?—A. No, sir; I just went off and never came back. He told me I could not take my chances, so I went off and never came back.

Q. How long after that talk was it before you left?—A. When he told me that I did not treat him right, do you mean?

Q. When he told you you could take your chances. That was Saturday evening, was it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that in the day-time or in the night?—A. Night.

Q. How long after that conversation was it before you went away?—A. Well, it had been about five or three minutes; along there.

Q. Did you tell him you were going?—A. Did I tell him I was going? I just told him good night. He paid me up.

Q. He paid you up every Saturday?—A. Yes, sir; he just paid me and told me I could take my choice.

Q. Did he tell you you could take your choice before or after?—A. When he was paying me.

Q. This occurred, then, when he was paying you?—A. Yes, sir; he paid me every Saturday. He says, "Well, Charley,——"

Q. The time he had this conversation with you about going in this parade, was that after he had settled with you?—A. Before he had paid me, and after he had paid me.

Q. He talked with you then after he had paid you about going in the parade?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was it that he told you you could take your chances? That was after he had paid you up your week's work?—A. He told me both times, after and before. He said that is the kind of a man he is, straight-out.

Q. Did you tell him when you left there that you were going away?—A. For good, do you mean.

Q. Yes?—A. No, sir; I did not say that.

Q. The next time he met you he made the remark that you had not treated him right in leaving him?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What have you been doing since that time?—A. Well, I have not been doing anything since that time; knocking around here trying to get work.

Q. Have you done nothing at all?—A. No, sir.

Q. Where do you live?—A. No. 10 New street.

Q. Have you done nothing at all since that time?—A. No, sir.

Q. Not a thing?—A. No, sir; I have been around to some places trying to get in, but could not get nothing.

Q. Times are very hard here, are they not?—A. Yes, sir; harder now than I seen it for some time, sir.

Q. Is there not a great deal of surplus labor here in the city; men who cannot get employment?—A. O yes, sir.

Q. Have you been to the country trying to get work since the election?—A. Yes, sir; after the election I have been to the country once.

Q. Where?—A. Up to Ten-Mile Hill.

- Q. Where did you go up there?—A. Up to Colonel Leech's.
- Q. Who was he?—A. He keeps the Charleston Mining Company.
- Q. What were you doing up there?—A. Digging and washing.
- Q. You have been at work since the election?—A. O no, sir; trying to get work.
- Q. How long did you stay up there?—A. Went up there one day; come back the next.
- Q. Were you at any plantation trying to get work?—A. No, sir.
- Q. Who have you talked to about this?—A. All that I said here do you mean?
- Q. Yes?—A. About this working, sir?
- Q. Yes; did you tell anybody that you had been turned off?—A. O, yes.
- Q. Who did you tell?—A. I did not speak to anybody particular to tell. I tell any of my colored friends.
- Q. Can you name any one that you told this story to?—A. O yes, sir; Henry Evans and Murray.
- Q. What white men did you first tell about it?—A. Well, I tell some of my white friends.
- Q. Who?—A. Mr. Orphandorff; he is clerk of the court.
- Q. He is Bowen's deputy sheriff?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. When did you first talk to him about it?—A. When I first got discharged. It is so long I forget exactly, but some time after I was discharged I told him about it.
- Q. Since the election?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Who else did you talk to; what other white men?—A. Well, sir, I cannot remember.
- Q. Who told you to come here and testify?—A. O, I come.
- Q. Who told you to come here and testify?—A. Nobody never tell me. I went to a friend of mine, who I did told—Singleton—was another colored man. He said they wanted all the men who had been discharged to come to the office.
- Q. What office?—A. To Lawyer Stone's.
- Q. Major Stone's?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Did you go there?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. When did you go there?—A. I went there last week some time.
- Q. Did you talk to him about it?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

- Q. What was it that Mr. Oakman said to you as he was paying you that Saturday night? Use his words.—A. He said I could still take my chances.
- Q. Chances about what?—A. Stay and support the ticket or leave; that is all, sir.
- Q. Support what ticket?—A. The Hampton ticket, sir.

By Mr. EDEN :

- Q. Did you belong to any club here in the city?—A. No, sir.

WILLIAM H. SINGLETON (colored) sworn and examined.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

- Question. Where do you reside?—Answer. Right here in Charleston.
- Q. Where were you born?—A. I was born in the city of Charleston.
- Q. What is your age?—A. Twenty-one going on twenty-two, sir.
- Q. Did you hold any official position during the election?—A. I did.
- Q. What was it?—A. United States supervisor.
- Q. At what precinct?—A. Whaley's Church, sir.
- Q. Who did you get your appointment from?—A. Mr. Wallace, the general supervisor got it. I saw my name in the papers, and I went there.
- Q. Have you got the paper here?—A. No, sir; after I got through I made my returns to Mr. Wallace.
- Q. Did you attend any political meetings during the campaign?—A. Yes, sir; I attended one of them.
- Q. At what place?—A. I attended one, sir, at Six-Mile House.
- Q. How far is that from Strawberry?—A. That is a good ways from Strawberry. That is just right down here in the city.
- Q. When was that?—A. That was just about the opening of the campaign, sir.
- Q. Was it a republican or democratic meeting?—A. Republican, sir.
- Q. It was called as a republican meeting, was it?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. How many people attended it?—A. About three or four hundred, I think, sir.
- Q. Colored or white people?—A. Colored; the majority of people around there is colored folks.
- Q. Were there any white people at the meeting?—A. Yes, sir; one or two, sir.
- Q. Was there any disturbance at that meeting?—A. No, sir; there was not any, sir.
- Q. Who spoke at that meeting?—A. A great many of the colored men, and I spoke.
- Q. Where was the next meeting that you attended?—A. I never attended no other until—not until the night before the election. I attended a meeting at Whaley's Church, sir, where I was appointed.

Q. Where was it held; at what place?—A. It was held in one of the old men's houses, sir.

Q. Was it a republican meeting?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many were at that meeting?—A. A great many, sir; there was a crowd of men—I suppose about a hundred or so. Some was on the outside, and some was on the inside.

Q. Was there any disturbance at that meeting?—A. No, sir; none at all.

Q. Did you attend a meeting at Strawberry?—A. No, sir.

Q. You were not at any meeting where there was a joint discussion, then?—A. No, sir.

Q. What time did you go to Whaley's Church on election-day?—A. The election was to come off on the 7th, and in order that I should be in time I went up on the 6th of November. I got to Whaley's Church about five o'clock, I think, in the morning.

Q. On the morning of the day of election?—A. The morning of the election-day, sir.

Q. Who were there when you got there?—A. There was a crowd of men there, sir.

Q. How many?—A. There was a great many, sir. I did not take notice, because I was being supervisor. I wanted to get a good look at the box, and let it go through the examination, as we generally do, and I seen the managers was all there.

Q. What time did the voting commence?—A. It commenced at six o'clock, I think it was. Mr. Hard had the watch open at the hour.

Q. Was there any disturbance during the day at that election?—A. Well, sir, I set down there and was keeping poll-list, and setting down there, and I did not saw any disturbance or hear of nothing not until about the middle of the day. I think it was about the middle of the day.

Q. What occurred then?—A. My attention was called by some colored men to one John Devoe, they call him, I think; a white man. They said he was buying votes, and the men was afraid to go up and speak to him—say anything to him. So I asked the man if he seen him give any one money, and he said yes, and other two men said they had seen him give money; and so knowing my appointment didn't allow me to arrest any one outside of where there was 20,000 inhabitants, I went up to him and tell him that I was here to see justice; that he was buying votes, and that he would have to go into the hands of some of these deputies. And then there was a little disturbance there.

Q. What was the disturbance?—A. The colored men say that they was afraid of him, so then I went up to him myself; and after I went up to him, I told him what he had done. And so he said he didn't have no money about him. So I told him I wasn't to know that. So after I told him that, he said he was going off from the poll. He said that he had already voted, and was going off. So I tell him, "Well, you can stay here, but don't carry on such games as that." That was all the disturbance around the poll there, sir.

Q. Did he go away?—A. O, yes, sir; he got in his buggy and rode off a piece.

Q. Was that all that occurred between you and him?—A. All, sir; that is all the disturbance there.

Q. Did you see a person there by the name of Mitchell?—A. No, sir; I never seen no one there named Mitchell. He might have been there, but I don't know him.

Q. Did you hear anything about a colored man who voted the democratic ticket; about the men pursuing him?—A. No, sir; I didn't hear nothing like that; I heard a talking out in the road.

Q. Could you hear what was said?—A. After hearing this talking out in the road I went out to see what it was, whether it was a fight or not; because I wanted to have peace there, and as soon as I got up there—got near to the place—I heard one A. P. Ford speaking to some men out there, saying the election had went off peaceable as far as it has gone; and he said, let us have peace to the end. So after seeing him out there, knowing he be a minister, I returned and came back.

Q. Was there any talk or disturbance after that in regard to this person?—A. No, sir; I never hear anything.

Q. Did you stay there until the polls closed?—A. I did, sir.

Q. And until the votes were counted?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hear the song "Hold the fort," sung there any time that day?—A. I heard a song sung, sir, about when the polls closed. The polls was closed, sir, and after the polls was closed there was a few rallying committees—they had them out. The folks up there don't know the song much, and they commenced singing the song, and they sung the song of "Hold the fort for Hayes and Wheeler."

Q. Who sang it?—A. Mr. Ford he raised the song, and I assisted him in singing it as I knew every word of it.

Q. Where did the men go to then?—A. The men all retired home, all went down the road. As soon as I had got through singing the song I learned that the candles had come. We had sent for candles to count the votes, and I learned the candles had arrived, and I leave right off and went to see how the votes was getting on.

Q. Did you hear any guns fired?—A. Whilst I was in the house, sir, I heard some guns fired.

Q. After you had sung and gone into the house?—A. Yes, sir; after I had went into the house.

Q. Was there any singing during the day, while the election was going on?—A. No, sir; I heard none.

Q. Or any firing of guns?—A. No, sir; I didn't hear any firing of the guns.

Q. But both of those things did occur after the polls closed?—A. Yes, sir; after the polls closed; because I was inside the house.

Q. What do you know about colored men having guns there that day?—A. Well, sir, I went there, pretty early in the morning, as I before told you, and I never seen any guns. I seen some of the men walking around there, but I never seen one gun—not around the poll whilst I was there, sir. When I heard the shooting, I was in the house. I said to the clerk—it was a young man that was clerking—"Do you hear that shooting?" And he said, "Yes." So we thought at least they was coming there.

Q. In which direction was the report of the guns?—A. Going to the roadside, sir. There was a rumor I hear in the day—

The Chairman objects to the witness stating what he heard

Mr. LAPHAM, I offer to show by this witness that there was a report current there through the day, that a force was coming there in the evening to commit violence upon the officers engaged in the canvass; and that when this witness heard the firing as he has stated, he spoke to the clerk of the board, Mr. Gray, and said to him, "They may be coming as reported, but let us stand here and do our duty, if we are killed."

[Offer overruled on the ground of irrelevancy and incompetency.]

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. How long were you engaged in the canvass; how long was it before the count was completed?—A. Well, sir, I cannot exactly remember, but I know it was at a very late hour at night before we got through counting the votes.

Q. Do you remember what the vote of each party was?—A. I think there was six hundred votes cast at that poll.

Q. How many republican and how many democratic?—A. I disremember.

Q. How many white people were there at the polls that day?—A. Well, sir, when the polls was first opened there was a great many white folks there; I don't suppose over ten or fifteen.

Q. Was there any larger number than that at any time during the day?—A. No, sir; they commenced to dwindle off.

Q. How many were there, while you were counting the votes?—A. There was Mr. Hard, Mr. Chors, and Mr. Hard, the man that brings his buggy; he was a white man. There was but three there that I seen in the church. They generally counts the votes in the church.

Q. Do you remember whether there were any other ballots in the box except the republican and democratic ballots?—A. There was a ticket in the box there—Hobson's choice, as you may term it—that the democrats had, with the name of A. P. Ford on it for the legislature.

Q. All the rest were democrats?—A. All the rest were democrats.

Q. Do you know how many of those ballots there were in the box?—A. Well, sir, I could not state how many, but I know there was a good many, because as every vote as would count for the different men that was running, they would put in canvassing them a zero for each one of those ballots—those Hobson's choice ballots—that was the one that voted more than the regular Hampton ticket.

Q. There was more than one such ballot?—A. Yes, sir; there was three tickets in the field. The republican ticket was a red ticket, and that was the only way you could designate it for the people; and the other ticket was a white ticket—the democratic ticket was a white ticket—and then they had another white ticket running in between with Ford's name on.

Q. Did the managers all sign the returns?—A. O, yes, sir; the managers signed the returns.

Q. Had you seen any of those tickets during the day?—A. I think it was about twelve o'clock when we caught up to the tickets, and my attention was called to it. One of the colored men asked me to read one of the tickets. So I turned round and tells him, "I can read the ticket for you, but there is Mr. Ford, he is loose, and I am an officer, and therefore go to Mr. Ford;" and I called Mr. Ford to me and tell him, "Mind, Mr. Ford, there is another ticket here running in the field, and you had better look after it;" and Mr. Ford went out to where the colored men was eating in the road, and said, "Here is our republican ticket, a red ticket. Wherever you see this ticket, a red ticket, you will know it." He said that in the road. Then all the people there on the ground would not vote anything but the red vote.

Q. Was that before this report about Devoe had come to you? Was it before you had been called out to see Devoe, or after?—A. This was before.

Q. How long before?—A. A good while. The Devoe occurrence happened a good while before that.

Q. It was before the occurrence between you and Devoe?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know anything about persons being discharged before the election, or threatened with a discharge for not voting? Have you heard any one employing men make that threat?—A. No, sir; I never heard it from any one; I only heard it from others.

Q. You were not at the Strawberry meeting, were you?—A. No, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. How long have you lived here in Charleston?—A. All my life-time, sir.

Q. You do not live in the neighborhood of Whaley's church?—A. I goes up there regular, sir; I lives right in Charleston here, and goes up and teach school for my occupation.

Q. When did you teach school up there?—A. During Mr. Hedge's administration.

Q. Who is Mr. Hedge?—A. The school-commissioner in this county.

Q. When was that?—A. Last year, sir; just before he went off from here, sir.

Q. When did you quit teaching school up there?—A. I think it was in June, sir.

Q. This last June?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you teach a colored school there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say you are twenty-one years old?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When were you twenty-one?—A. I was twenty-one years of age on the 29th day of this last April.

Q. When were you appointed supervisor of election?—A. I was appointed supervisor of elections the other day, sir—just two days before the election, sir.

Q. What have you been doing since June last?—A. Well, sir, I was right here in the city; shoemaker by trade.

Q. My question is, what have you been doing since June last?—A. Working at my trade, sir.

Q. Working at your trade since June?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. All the time?—A. Yes, sir; all the time, sir.

Q. Where did you vote on the day of the election?—A. I vote at Whaley's church.

Q. Did you make a speech at Whaley's church the night before the election?—A. I did, sir.

Q. Who else made speeches?—A. One James Graves, one Daniel T. Middleton, and A. P. Ford, and—I forget the gentleman's name; he is an old white man; he was a republican, and he made a speech there.

Q. Where does he live?—A. He lives up there; he lives with one of the colored men.

Q. What does he do, this white man?—A. He takes charge of this colored man's poultry and things.

Q. Do you know how long he has been living there?—A. No, sir; I do not know.

Q. Do you not know that there were but twelve democratic votes polled there that day?—A. No, sir; I disremember.

Q. How do you remember the number of votes so well?—A. The number of votes cast? I remember the number of votes cast, sir, because that was my business there—to take account of how much votes each elector got.

Q. Then why cannot you tell how many each got?—A. Well, I disremember.

Q. What is your best recollection; it was a very small vote, was it not?—A. I know they got a very small vote.

Q. Do you think it was over twelve?—A. Well, sir, I won't say, because I don't know; I disremember how much they got.

Q. This mixed ticket you speak of, do you not know that there were but six of them found in the box?—A. I disremember how many were found in the box, but I know they was there; they was widely circulated.

Q. Do you not know that there was not over six of these ballots cast there?—A. Well, sir, they might have been, but I disremember.

Q. Those mixed tickets, the "Hobson's choice," as you call them; they were printed black like all the other democratic tickets, were they not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. They were not printed with red ink?—A. No, sir.

Q. It looked exactly like a democratic ticket, did it not?—A. Yes, sir; it looked exactly like a democratic ticket, only it had Mr. Ford's name on it.

Q. Then, any one taking that ticket would be more likely to think it was a democratic ticket than anything else, not knowing what it was?—A. No, sir.

Q. Why would they not?—A. Because Mr. Ford is a leader of the republican party, and wherever his name appears the people consider he is a republican.

Q. Of course, anybody who might read the ticket would see Mr. Ford's name on it, would they not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. But if they did not read the ticket they could not tell it, by its general appearance, from a democratic ticket?—A. No, sir.

Q. A person who could not read, looking at the ticket, could not tell it from a democratic ticket, could they?—A. The only difference was that the republican ticket was red—

Q. I am not talking about the republican ticket. This mixed ticket was printed like a democratic ticket, was it not, except it had Ford's name on it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And one who could not read could not tell it from a democratic ticket, could he?—A. Well, sir, I do not know the cut. I forget now the cut and everything on the democratic ticket—

Q. Was there any difference between that ticket and the democratic ticket, except that it had Ford's name printed on it?—A. I disremember about that. I remember this, that the difference of it was our ticket was red print, and the democratic ticket was printed with black ink.

Q. Was there anything on the face of that ticket with A. P. Ford's name on it, to a man who could not read, by which to distinguish it from the democratic ticket; was it not printed in black ink?—A. Yes, sir; it was.

Q. And looked like the democratic ticket to one who could not read?—A. To one that could not read would vote it, sir.

Q. But A. P. Ford's name was printed distinctly on it, was it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Any other republican name on it?—A. They had several of the officers on it.

Q. Name one there.—A. I disremember; I would not like to say for certain, because I am on my oath.

Q. Would you be willing to swear that there was any other name on it besides Ford's?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State whose name was on it besides Ford's?—A. I disremember, sir, but I noticed it was a mixed ticket and had some republican names on it.

Q. You cannot remember any except Ford's?—A. Except Ford's. They was widely circulated.

Q. How do you know it was being widely circulated? Did not your duty require you to be in the house where the ballots were cast?—A. My commission read that I should be in a position where I could see the votes cast.

Q. And to take a list of the voters?—A. Yes, sir; and to see that no occurrence, no sort of fuss, or disturbance arised, but out of the city I was not responsible to take a list. All I was required to do was to take the number of votes cast for the electors and take the number of votes cast—

Q. Did not that require you to be at the table where you could see the voting and to keep a list of the voters?—A. Yes, sir; I set down and see the ballots cast.

Q. That was your duty, was it not?—A. No, sir; I did not understand it to be my duty.

Q. What were you doing at the table if it was not your duty?—A. The first thing I done while I was up there—Chors, he had his commission as one of the supervisors, just like myself—Chors, he went out among the men with his commission as a supervisor and was showing his commission as a supervisor; I then went out along with him and showed my commission as a supervisor, too, at the poll.

Q. I am not asking you anything about that.—A. I am just showing you what caused me to be out there.

Q. Was that the only time you were out there?—A. To see that no disturbance occurred?

Q. Was it part of your duty as a supervisor to see that no disturbance occurred? Was that on the face of your commission? Do you state that your commission as a supervisor of that election imposed the duty upon you to see that there was no disturbance at that election?—A. The commission was a long one, and I understood it that way.

Q. Do you state that that commission read that way? Did you read your commission?—A. I did, sir.

Q. Now do you state that that was upon the face of your commission, imposing upon you, as a supervisor, the duty to see that there was no disturbance of the election that day? Answer that question.—A. I am going to tell you what my commission stated, the way I understood it.

Q. Answer my question. Do you state that it was a part of your commission—that it was a part of your duty as supervisor that you were to see there was no disturbance at the election?—A. Well, sir, I understood it that way, sir.

Q. You understood it that way?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you read that in your commission?—A. Me, do you mean?

Q. Yes, you.—A. Yes, sir; I read a great deal of things and disremember it, sir.

Q. I ask you if you read that in your commission?—A. No, sir; I do not remember; I read a great deal, sir.

Q. Then how often were you out of that house that day mingling with the crowd?—A. I think I was out there about twice.

Q. On what occasions?—A. I was once out there with Mr. Devoe.

Q. On what other occasions were you out there?—A. I was out again with Mr. Ford when the fuss was there in the place.

Q. The fuss about Mitchell?—A. About this man; the men was talking out there.

Q. Those were the only two occasions?—A. Yes, sir; they was the only two.

Q. How long were you out of the house when this affair with Devoe occurred?—A. I was not there for a long time—

Q. About how long; how many minutes?—A. About ten or fifteen minutes, I suppose.

Q. When that matter occurred in regard to Devoe, what were you doing; were you engaged with him all the time?—A. Engaged with Mr. Devoe? I and him was talking, sir.

Q. When this affair with Mitchell occurred, where you saw Ford interpose, how long were you out on that occasion?—A. I was out about twenty minutes, I suppose; I disremember how long, because I went in the bush.

Q. How long were you out there?—A. I did not stay very long.

Q. Did you go from there back into the house?—A. Yes, sir; I came right back into the house.

Q. When you went out to see about this matter of Devoe, and when you went out to see about this disturbance in regard to Mitchell, did you examine any tickets when you were out on those occasions?—A. At that time, sir?

Q. Yes.—A. No, sir; I did not bother with the tickets.

Q. When you were in the house at this table, where you were taking an account of the votes as supervisor, could you see out of doors?—A. O, yes; there was a window right there, a low window.

Q. Where was the voting done?—A. The voting was done through another window, sir, right by me. I was settling between the two windows.

Q. You could not see the tickets out of doors so as to be able to read them, could you?—A. No, sir; I could not see from the window.

Q. From that table where you were sitting, could you read a ticket out of doors?—A. No, sir; I could not read it.

Q. Then how did you know that those tickets were being circulated out there; you say they were being circulated freely?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you know it?—A. I knowed it by the men coming right there to the window and handing me one of the tickets, and said to me—

Q. Then all you know about these tickets being circulated was that a man handed you one through the window and what he said?—A. Let me answer the question, sir.

Q. Answer my question. Did you have any other means of information about the circulation of those mixed tickets there other than what you got from the party who came to the window?—A. Yes, sir; I seen them going right along there, because my eyes was out there besides inside.

Q. How could you tell from the window, with your eyes, whether they were circulating the mixed tickets or not?—A. I am going to show you now, sir. The rallying committee stood all round there, and the tickets was right there, and I learn right off in that way, and this portion of my body was outside of the window.

Q. You have stated that you could not read those tickets outside from where you were.—A. I could not see them.

Q. Then how could you tell whether they were mixed tickets or not?—A. There was a colored man rallying on the democrat side showing the ticket, and saying here is Ford's name on the ticket.

Q. Who was that colored man?—A. I did not know him, sir.

Q. Did you not hear his name?—A. No, sir; I did not hear his name.

Q. Never heard his name?—A. I never heard his name.

Q. Never inquired his name?—A. I was describing the pants and clothes he had on to Mr. Ford.

Q. Who else did you hear besides him?—A. I heard him say so in the day.

Q. When did you hear him say so?—A. Early in the day, sir.

Q. What time in the day?—A. I could not really say, sir.

Q. State about what time. Was it early in the morning? You say it was early in the day. How long was it after the polls opened that you heard that?—A. Well, sir, the sun was up a good way.

Q. Was it seven o'clock?—A. It was later than that.

Q. Was it eight o'clock?—A. A little later than that. I think it was about between nine and ten o'clock, because the sun was up.

Q. Have you not already stated, in your examination-in-chief, that it was about twelve o'clock when you heard of that matter, and called Ford's attention to it?—A. When I heard of that I pointed this man out.

Q. Have you not already stated, in your examination-in-chief, that when you heard of that it was about twelve o'clock, and that you then called Ford's attention to it?—A. When I first heard of it I paid no attention to it.

Q. That is not my question. Did you not state that it was about twelve o'clock when that was given to you to read, and that you then went out and called Ford's attention to it? Did you not state, when you first heard of it, that you then got up and went out and told Ford about it?—A. Yes, sir; I got up and told Mr. Ford about it.

Q. Did you not state awhile ago, that that was the first time you heard of it, that this man came to you with a ticket and asked you to read it?—A. I thought you asked me the first time when I seen the ticket; that is the way I understood the question.

Q. Did you not state that that was the first you knew of the ticket, and that you went out and called Ford's attention to it, and that Ford then went and exhibited the republican ticket to the colored men, saying that that was their ticket?—A. Yes, sir; that it was a red ticket.

Q. This was in the morning, between nine and ten o'clock, that you heard of democratic men peddling those tickets out of doors?—A. Yes, sir; I heard a man in the morning say, "Here is a ticket."

Q. Is that what he said?—A. Yes, sir; he said, "Here is a ticket, sir;" and after hearing the man speaking of the ticket, and saying here is A. P. Ford's name on the ticket.

Q. What else did you hear?—A. And the man went off with the ticket; so I paid no attention. I thought he was a republican man.

Q. Then, how do you know he was a democrat man?—A. After this man had come to me at the window with the ticket, and asked me to read it, and seeing then it was a democratic ticket, I then called Mr. Ford. I then say to Mr. Ford, I might have stopped this thing long ago, but I did not know there was this ticket out.

Q. You still have not told how you found out that that was a democrat man who peddled them. You just supposed he was a democrat?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You do not know now, do you, that he was a democrat?—A. When this man came up to me, I say to Mr. Ford—

Q. You do not know yet whether he was a democrat or not. You just supposed from the fact that he was peddling the ticket.—A. He showed the ticket with Mr. Ford's name on it, and my curiosity was arised right off.

Q. When that ticket was shown to you you got up and went out, and told Mr. Ford. You stated that, as you were an officer, you could not interfere about the ticket?—A. About changing tickets.

Q. But you went and called Ford's attention to it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did not Ford say to you, as you have already stated, that that was the first he knew of that ticket?—A. He said he did not know anything about it; nothing about it himself. He made new of it to me, and he say he never seen one of them.

Q. Mr. Ford was mixing outside with the crowd. He was a candidate for legislature, was he not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. He was mixing with the crowd all day, was he not?—A. He was out in the road.

Q. If these tickets were circulating in the crowd, as you say they were, why did not Ford see them?

Mr. LAPHAM. I submit that that is not a proper question.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Can you state why Ford did not see them circulating if he was out in the crowd?—A. I cannot state, sir. I don't know nothing about them.

Q. This man who was distributing these tickets, as you say, spoke of it so loud that you heard him in the house?—A. As he come past the house I was leaning on the window.—

Q. You have got to leaning in the window now. You were then leaning in the window, were you?—A. Yes, sir; leaning in the window.

Q. And you heard him?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you heard him talking out there in the crowd, saying, "This ticket has Ford's name on it?"—A. Yes, sir; I heard him when he say to this man, "This is Ford's ticket for the legislature."

Q. The man displayed the ticket and said here is Ford's name on it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was spoken in the crowd?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. There was no concealment about it, then?—A. This was spoken in the crowd where the vote was; I hear him speak it to those men.

Q. And still you did not say anything to Ford about it?—A. I thought it was a republican.—

Q. Then you did not say anything to Ford about it?—A. No, sir; I did not bother my head. I say to myself that was a republican man; and after twelve o'clock, about the middle of the day, I found out this; when I say to Ford if that be a democrat fellow why I could have stopped this thing long ago; but I did not know anything about it.

Q. You were there as a disinterested officer?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then what had you to do with the kind of tickets that were circulating?—A. I could tell him there was another ticket in the field.

Q. Was not this spoken out of doors, out among themselves? What business had you, as a supervisor, to do with tickets circulating in the field?—A. There was a white man came up to the poll and he could not read, and he asked me to read it.

Q. Answer my question. What business had you, as a supervisor of election, to go out and to advise a party candidate there about some other ticket being circulated; was that a part of your duty?—A. I understood my duty this way; to see that no fuss occur, and see that justice be given to both parties.

Q. And therefore you took the side of one of the parties?—A. I see Mr. Chors; he was sworn at the same time I was; he was out there; he done different from me.

Q. How do you know what Chors was doing out there? You were not with him.—A. I linger near by him to see what was going on.

Q. Were you with Chors all the time he was out doors?—A. Every time he would come up to the crowd I would listen to it; when they took a recess to eat after the voting was completed, pretty near.

Q. After the vote was completed you went up to where he was?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you not stated that you were not out of that house but twice during the day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then how do you know what Chors was doing out there?—A. They was not voting at the time.

Q. Then you did not hear Chors say anything until after the voting was over?—A. Yes, sir; I see Chors out there when the voting was over.

Q. This difficulty that you speak of with this man Devoe; was not Devoe very active there through the day distributing democratic tickets?—A. I never seen him very active there, sir.

Q. Did you not see him distributing democratic tickets?—A. No, sir; I seen Mr. Devoe doing this: A portion of the time there was some colored men came to the window and said to me, "You republicans is so unjust. They say there is that gentleman Devoe; he is not a republican and he is in the house with you all." I said the dew is so heavy I suppose Mr. Devoe did not want to go out. I asked Mr. Devoe then for a pipe of tobacco and he gave me a pipe of tobacco; and he went out, and he had no tickets at that time.

Q. They came and notified you that Devoe was a democrat, and they complained you were unjust to allow Devoe, a democrat, to stay in there?—A. Yes, sir; and I pointed out these other men who was democrats.

Q. How long did Devoe stay in the house?—A. He staid about an hour or so, I think.

Q. What time did he come in?—A. Early in the morning, I say.

Q. How long did he stay there?—A. I disremember how long he staid in there; he was in there a good while. I did not pay much attention to him.

Q. Was he in there two hours?—A. I could not rightly say. I did not pay much attention to him; I was setting down something.

Q. What time of the day was it when this complaint came to you about this charge, that he was bribing voters?—A. It was a good while after the poll was opened; in the middle of the day I think, sir. The sun had not strike the tree-tops good when this complaint was brought up.

Q. You went out to arrest him?—A. I went out to see. My commission stated that no bribery should be offered, or nothing like that.

Q. Did your commission state that no bribery should be offered?—A. That is the way I construed it, sir.

Q. Did you not understand your duty as supervisor of election to be to arrest people at the polls?—A. My commission say I was not able to arrest anybody outside of 20,000 inhabitants.

Q. You knew that there were not 20,000 inhabitants at that precinct, did you not? Did you not arrest Devoe?—A. The sheriff always have what is called deputy sheriffs, and I told the deputy sheriffs their power to arrest Devoe.

Q. You told the deputy his power?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you not arrest Devoe yourself?—A. I was called upon to arrest Devoe.

Q. I am not asking you about being called upon. Answer the question, did you not yourself arrest Devoe?—A. No, sir; I called upon the deputy sheriff. I told him he could arrest him.

Q. Then you did not go to Devoe at all?—A. I went to Devoe and told him what he was doing, and I show Mr. Devoe my papers, and I say, now, Mr. Devoe, you can read them. I say we were friendly to each other; I would not like anything to occur, but I must do my duty.

Q. Did you not arrest Devoe; did you not take charge of him, and did not Chors come to you and tell you that as supervisor you had no authority to arrest him there?—A. I am going to tell you now what Chors say—

Q. Answer the question first, and then you can explain. Did not Chors come up to you and tell you, at the time you were with Devoe, that as supervisor you had no authority to arrest him?—A. He did not come up to me until they call upon him.

Q. Did not Chors come up to you—you can answer yes or no—did not he come up to you and tell you that as supervisor you had no authority to arrest Devoe?—A. I will answer it; yes, he came up to me.

Q. Did he not tell you that in substance?—A. But he came up to me—

Q. Did he not tell you that when he came up to you?—A. I would like to state what passed between us.

Q. I insist upon an answer to my question. Did not Mr. Chors come up to you, and did he not state when he came up, that you had no authority as supervisor of election to arrest Devoe? Say yes or no.—A. I can say yes, he come up to me.

Q. Answer the other part of it. Did he not tell you that, as supervisor, you had no authority to arrest him?—A. I knew that myself.

Q. Did Chors tell you that?—A. I showed Mr. Chors—

Q. I will put you in contempt of the committee if you do not answer the question. Did he, or did he not, tell you that?—A. I can tell you he said yes. He said, "Why, Mr. Singleton, look down here; you cannot do anything with Devoe." That is what he told me, sir. I turned around to him, and I say, "Yes, Mr. Chors." I knew that this was outside of 20,000 inhabitants; that is in big print, I can see that. I say outside of 20,000 inhabitants I could not arrest nobody. I say all my authority is to tell Mr. Devoe that I, as a supervisor, is to see that the election go on fair; but Mr. Devoe is in the hands of the deputies.

Q. When you went up to Devoe you showed him your authority?—A. When I went up to him, he said, "Who is you?"

Q. Then you showed him your authority, did you not?—A. Let me explain, if you please.

Q. Did you not then show your commission when Devoe asked you who you were?—A. He said, "Who is you?" I told him, "I am a supervisor." He turned round, and said, "Let me read it;" and I said, "Mr. Devoe, you can read it." He was a little excited. I say, "Mr. Devoe, if you look on the other side you sees I cannot arrest you outside of twenty thousand inhabitants."

Q. Did you tell Devoe that yourself, before Chors came up?—A. I told him that myself, because—

Q. Did you tell him that before Mr. Chors came up?—A. Why, yes, sir.

Q. If you had told him that yourself before Chors came up, why did he (Chors) tell you that you, as supervisor, had no authority to arrest him?—A. Mr. Chors was on the other side of the house, and just as soon as the thing occurred they called Mr. Chors. A crowd of them came up, calling him by his name. They say, "Come around here, and see our men righted." And so in that time, when they told him so, I turned around to Mr. Chors, and I say, "This matter can easily be settled;" and that is the whole way the matter was settled. It was through me the matter was settled.

Q. You were the party that had arrested him?—A. No, sir; I told you distinctly that the sheriffs had the power to arrest him, and he was in the hands of two colored men.

Q. Who turned him over to those two colored men? You did, did you not?—A. I will state how the colored men come to get him. When they called upon me I showed them I had no authority to do nothing to him; but I have this to say, that no intimidation must be there, and so in that time one of the men say to me, "That is not intimidation." I say, "Well, if that is intimidation, I do not know, because this is the first time I ever served, and I think that would be bribery." So in that time one of the men say, "I got the power to arrest, anyhow." I say, "Well, you know your instructions." That is what I said to him.

Q. Where was Chors when you went out of doors?—A. He was around at the house, sir.

Q. Near the polls?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was he doing?—A. I do not know, sir.

Q. Was he standing still when you went up to Devoe?—A. Devoe was standing beside the poll.

Q. How far from the polls was it?—A. About ten or fifteen feet.

Q. Did he not have tickets in his hands?—A. No, sir; I did not see him with any tickets.

Q. You went up to him there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did not Devoe tell you when you went up there to arrest him that he had not been bribing anybody; that he had no money?—A. Yes, sir; he told me that he had not been bribing anybody. He turned right around to me and say to me, "Well," he say, "you know well enough I have just given you a pipe of tobacco, and I have not bribed anybody." Two colored mens come up and say, "Yes; you did bribe him." And the other colored man say, "He could show he did bribe him."

Q. What did Devoe say?—A. Devoe didn't say nothing.

Q. Didn't say anything at all?—A. No, sir; they was great crowding around him, and I say, "Gentlemen, fall back."

Q. There was a great crowd around him?—A. Yes, sir; they was coming up to him.

- Q. How many?—A. About ten or fifteen, I suppose, sir.
- Q. You say he told you that he had just given you some tobacco in the house there?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And that he was not bribing anybody—that he had no money?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And you say he then went off home?—A. I do not know whether he went home; he jumped in his buggy and went off.
- Q. Touching this affair in respect to Mitchell, you were in the house and heard the row out of doors?—A. Yes, sir; I heard the loud talking.
- Q. That is what attracted your attention?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. What was it you heard; was it like a disturbance?—A. I heard some mens cursing.
- Q. How many voices did you hear?—A. Well, sir, I didn't hear but one distinct voice cursing.
- Q. What was it saying?—A. I cannot remember the different words, but he was cursing.
- Q. Give us something of the language—what was said?—A. I disremember, but I know he was using profane language.
- Q. Did you not hear a word he said?—A. No, sir.
- Q. Did you hear but one voice?—A. I heard the loud talking and cursing. There was talking going on, but this loud cursing was ahead of all.
- Q. The cursing was louder than all?—A. Yes, sir; you could hear that distinctly.
- Q. You heard confusion and loud talking out there, and that drew you out of the house?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. How far from the house was it?—A. It was out in the road, sir.
- Q. How far from the house—how many yards?—A. I do not know the distance.
- Q. Was it 100 or 60 or 50 or 40 yards?—A. I think it was somewhere about 40. I think it was about 40.
- Q. When you went out of the house what was going on?—A. I heard the loud talking out there and I approached, and the more I approach I heard more noise.
- Q. Was there a great crowd out there?—A. There was a good many around. As soon as I got a portion of the way I heard a man say, "Gentlemens, we are here to-day, and let us have peace;" and when I looked I see it was Mr. Ford, and I say, "O, well, I suppose it was Mr. Ford among his people." I say nothing and I turned back and went in the bush.
- Q. There was a fuss, and this man Ford, or whoever it was that was saying "Let us have peace," was trying to allay it?—A. I do not know, sir. This were the words I hear. I didn't go up any farther.
- Q. The crowd had rushed off from the polls, hadn't they?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. When did you see Mr. Ford last?—A. I saw Mr. Ford yesterday, sir. I was to work yesterday, and Mr. Ford come down there early yesterday morning and went first to my house, and says there is a committee that would like to see me, and so the folks told him I had gone to work; and so as soon as I come home they tell me that Mr. Ford was there for me. So I went to the gentleman I was working with, who works there in the shop, and I tell him I would not be able to finish the job; he would have to leave it lay over.
- Q. When did you see Ford?—A. I came down to see him yesterday.
- Q. Where?—A. Corner of Broad and Meeting streets.
- Q. On a street or in the house?—A. On the street, sir.
- Q. How long did you see him?—A. I see him a good while, sir. I come up here with him and wait here.
- Q. Were you up here when he testified yesterday evening?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. How long were you with him altogether?—A. I suppose I were with him about two or three hours, sir.
- Q. Have you been with him to-day?—A. No, sir.
- Q. You and he talked about the election up there yesterday?—A. Yes, sir; we spoke of it, sir.
- Q. Did you stay here until after Ford testified yesterday evening?—A. No, sir; I do not know when he got through testifying. I was out in the hall waiting for the committee to call on me.
- Q. You saw Ford when he came out from testifying?—A. No, sir; I think that gentleman [indicating Mr. Lapham] came out and said that they would not be ready for me.
- Q. You were with Ford some two or three hours yesterday?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

- Q. Who was the deputy marshal there?—A. I disremember, sir. There was two or three colored mens appointed, countrymens that live up there.
- Q. What did you say to them, about Devoe?—A. When they all come up I say to them, "Gentlemen, it is useless for you men to go on so." I say to Mr. Devoe, by my commission I cannot arrest nobody where there is not 20,000 inhabitants. I told them it was in your hands. When I tell them, they say I am a deputy, and I say it is in your hands. I say I went to quell as much disturbance as possible. Some of the men say they would carry him down to Charleston. I say it is a great distance down to Charleston, and I told the men you can all go; and when I say it is a great distance down to Charleston, Mr. Devoe say to me, you understand those people; you had better talk to them; and I say we can quiet this thing. That was Devoe's talk.

Q. Did anybody take hold of Devoe?—A. No, sir; I never seen any one with him, sir. I seen the men standing around him.

Q. Did anybody prevent him when he got into the buggy from going away?—A. O, no, sir.

Q. Did you see him again that day?—A. No, sir; he told us all good-by, friendly.

Q. What time, if you remember, did Chors come there in the morning; what time did you first see him?—A. When I first see him I think it was an hour after the poll opened. I didn't pay much attention.

Q. Was it about seven o'clock?—A. Yes, sir; I see him in the house there.

Q. How long have you taught school in all?—A. Probably about six months, sir. Shortly after I leave school, I taught about six months.

Q. What school did you leave?—A. I attend Wallingville Academy—W. A. Patton.

Q. Did you have a license to teach?—A. I was examined by the county board of examiners.

Q. Did they give you permission to teach?—A. Yes, sir; I have my certificate.

Q. Who gave you the certificate?—A. The county board, sir.

Q. Do you remember whose name was signed to it?—A. P. Hedges, sir.

Q. What was his office?—A. School commissioner, sir.

Q. Your trade is that of a shoemaker?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you are working at that now?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long were you at the academy?—A. I was at the school just shortly after reconstruction.

Q. How long were you at the school, is the question.—A. I suppose about three or four years, because I never goes there after I got to manhood. I never go regularly; I just goes at night.

Q. You attended school three or four years regularly?—A. Yes sir; regular.

Q. Were you a slave?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were not freed until the emancipation proclamation?—A. No, sir; not until the proclamation.

Q. Had you any education then?—A. No, sir; I could not read or write.

Q. You have learned since you were freed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was the principal of the academy?—A. The first principal that ever taught me was J. H. Bates. He is dead now.

Q. Who was the next?—A. Then right after Mr. Bates, Mr. Patton had charge.

Q. Any one else?—A. No, sir; Mr. Patton is there now, sir.

Q. He is still the principal?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where is that school?—A. Up Meeting street, sir.

Q. How large a school is it? How many pupils attend there?—A. About two or three hundred, sir.

Q. Is it a free school?—A. Yes, sir; it is supported by the northern folks.

Q. That is, you don't have to pay anything for your schooling?—A. No, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Is not that a free school, sustained by the State and county?—A. The school I learned to write in, do you mean?

Q. Yes.—A. No, sir; it is supported by a society at Pittsburgh, Pa. The Presbyterian congregation supports it, sir.

Q. Speaking of arms at the election that day, you saw those arms where they were stacked in the road below the church, did you not?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see any at all?—A. No, sir; I have never seen as much as a revolver, sir.

Q. You were not down the road that led from the church?—A. No, sir; I was not down the road.

Q. You heard these guns fired, though?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Those guns were fired by your friends, were they not?—A. I do not know who they was fired by. We was in the room counting the votes.

Q. You heard the guns go off, did you not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was near the church, was it not?—A. It was up the road, sir.

Q. How long after you went back into the house was it before that occurred?—A. I was in the house a good while, sir.

Q. About how long?—A. About an hour or so, sir.

Q. About an hour or so before they went off?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then those guns did not go off immediately after you got through singing "Hold the Fort"?—A. No, sir; because we was in the house counting the votes.

Q. And you were in there an hour before you heard these guns?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was way in the night?—A. Yes, sir; it was black dark when I heard the guns, because we had a light,

FRANK JACKSON (colored) sworn and examined.

Q. How did you know that they were examining witnesses ?—A. Nobody tell me.

Q. How did you know it, then; can't you answer ?—A. Yes, sir; I tell you that nobody tell me.

Q. How did you know, then, that they were examining witnesses ?—A. I come from the market, and I come in here, and I be here yesterday, and I hear Saturday that they be testing witnesses, and I thought I would come down here. I think a man be free and he has a right to vote as he pleases.

Q. How did you know they were examining witnesses ?—A. I tell you nobody tell me, sir.

Q. How did you learn it; how did you know it, then, if nobody told you ?—A. I can't tell you, boss. I tell you nobody tell me. Nobody ever tell me a word. I promised to tell the truth. I cau't tell no story, as far as I know.

Q. The question I ask you is, how you know they were examining witnesses here ?—A. I don't know as I understand you. I tell you the truth as far as I know.

Q. How did you know we were here examining witnesses ?—A. I come to the door there Saturday, and the gentleman's examining witnesses here—I don't know the gentleman's name—and I say when I get home I will come back.

Q. Have you been here ever since Saturday ?—A. No, sir; I go back home, and never come here until yesterday, sir.

Q. What did you come back for ?—A. I come to test my right. I tell you, just now, sir, I went up there to vote, and I didn't vote according to my opinion.

Q. I ask you what you came back here yesterday for ?—A. I come back to test my right to Whaley's Church when I went to vote.

Q. Whom did you tell about it ?—A. I tell my friend, sir.

Q. Who ?—A. Jesse Gaddis.

Q. Where does he live ?—A. The same place where I stay, sir.

Q. Where ?—A. Whaley's Church.

Q. Where did you tell him ?—A. I told him home, sir.

Q. Where is your home ?—A. I tell him about two weeks after the election.

Q. How did you go up to the election ?—A. I walk up there.

Q. Did you have any ticket ?—A. To go up to the election, do you mean ?

Q. Yes.—A. No, sir.

- Q. Where did you get your ticket?—A. When I get up there.
- Q. Who gave it to you?—A. I get a ticket from Mr. Carter.
- Q. Did you vote the ticket he gave you?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And that was the only ticket you had?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. How do you know it was a republican ticket?—A. I know it was a republican ticket, sir.
- Q. How do you know?—A. Because it was shown to me.
- Q. Did you read it?—A. I can't read it, but he tell me it was a republican ticket.
- Q. Carter told you that?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You knew Carter was a republican?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You took the ticket he gave you and voted it?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Did you ever vote before?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. What ticket?—A. All the time the republican.
- Q. Always?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You voted this year the same as you always voted?—A. Yes, sir; but I didn't meant to vote this year as I always did.
- Q. But you did vote the same as you always have?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Did you ask for a democratic ticket when you got there?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Whom did you ask?—A. I don't know the gentleman, but he had some tickets in his hand and I asked for one.
- Q. You didn't get any ticket except the one Carter gave you?—A. That is so, sir; I vote that one which I get from Mr. Carter.
- Q. Where did Carter give it to you?—A. At Whaley's Church.
- Q. Whereabouts?—A. About forty yards from the church.
- Q. You met him as you were going up there, did you?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And he handed you a ticket, and you took it, and went to the poll and voted it?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And didn't complain to anybody, did you?—A. No, sir; I didn't complain.
- Q. Theh you went home, did you, about ten o'clock?—A. Yes, sir; about ten o'clock I went home.
- Q. How did you go home?—A. I walked home.
- Q. Where do you live—how far from the church?—A. About two miles and a half.
- Q. Whom did you work for at that time?—A. I didn't work for nobody at that time.
- Q. For whom did you last work?—A. I live on the company's land. I was working for nobody. I rent my land.
- Q. Do you rent land of the company?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Have you got any family?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. How large a family?—A. Four besides myself; five in family with myself.
- Q. Wife and three children?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. How long have you been married?—A. Married when I was twenty-two.
- Q. Were you ever a slave?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You didn't get married until you were free, did you?—A. I was married before I was free. I had three children when peace was declared.
- Q. I thought you had married when you were twenty-two. Did you marry again when you were twenty-two?—A. I was married before I was twenty-two.
- Q. How long have you been free?—A. I am thirty years old, sir.
- Q. You were married when you were twenty-two?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And that was before you were free?—A. I say I had two children and a half when I was free.
- Q. Whose slave were you; who owned you?—A. Joe Allston.
- Q. Where does he live?—A. In Georgetown.
- Q. When did you go to Whaley's Church?—A. I left there the second year of freedom, sir, from Georgetown.
- Q. You were very glad to be free, were you not?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You thought the republicans gave you freedom, didn't you?—A. I don't understand that; I never likes to answer more than I can understand.
- Q. You say you had always been a republican; how came you to be a republican?—A. Yes, sir; I have always been a republican.
- Q. How came you to be a republican?—A. I don't know; I don't understand you, sir.
- Q. Where have you been to-day?—A. Right here.
- Q. Right where?—A. Right in there.
- Q. Here in this building?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. All day?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Where do you stop here in the city?—A. At my sister's house. I have a sster in town.
- Q. Did you stay with her last night?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Now we come back to the question which is the one I would like you to answer. How did you know that we were taking testimony here?—A. I cannot answer that for I done tell you as far as I can, boss. I was going along outside and I step in here.

Q. Did they tell you what the fees were—what pay the witnesses were getting?—A. I don't understand you, sir.

Q. You don't know what pay means, do you?—A. No, sir; I don't understand you.

Q. You don't expect any pay?—A. No, sir; I ain't expecting to get none; I did not know we was to get any, sir.

Q. You don't want any pay, then, for coming here as a witness?—A. I say I never heard of any; I cannot expect to get any.

Q. How did you know that we were examining witnesses here?—A. Boss, I done tell you as far as I knows, unless you want me to tell a story, and I don't want to do that.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. If I understand you, you were here last Saturday?—Yes, sir.

Q. And you were passing by here and learned that there was a committee here investigating about this election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And after that you come down here to give your testimony?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is all you heard about it?—A. Yes, sir; that is all.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Who told you they were taking testimony here?—A. Nobody, I tell you, boss.

Q. Then how did you hear it?—A. When I was coming by the door they said this was the place they was taking testimony.

Q. Who was the gentleman?—A. I don't know the gentleman. I don't live in the city.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. You don't know the man who told you out there?—A. No, sir; I don't know the man.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Somebody told you, didn't they?—A. I come along here and I merely stopped.

Q. Somebody told you, didn't they?—A. I hear a gentleman talk and I turned and looked, and I know the hall, and they say the gentlemen is taking testimony.

Q. What hall is this?—A. This is Hibernian hall.

Q. Do the colored people come to Hibernian hall? How do you know the hall?—A. I know the hall and the hotels all along here.

Q. I thought you were not acquainted here?—A. I am acquainted with the hall. I go along here to go to the market. We had to pass here to go to the market, sir.

M. D. ELLIS sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Question. What is your age?—Answer, Twenty-four years, sir; I will be twenty-five the 21st day of next July.

Q. Where do you reside?—A. Beaufort County, sir, Laughton Township.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. Well, sir, I am a farmer and also a merchandiser.

Q. Where did you attend at the recent election?—A. Laughton Church precinct, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Are there two precincts by the same name?—A. Yes, sir; that is, it is a church the colored people built there; it is on a plantation by the name of Laughton, and we call it "Laughton" from the man's name.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. About how many votes were polled that day?—A. About 230, I think, sir.

Q. How many republicans and how many democratic votes?—A. Allow me to correct that first statement; there was 267 votes.

Q. What was the republican vote?—A. Well, there was 31 democratic votes, sir; out of the 267 there was 31 democrats and the balance republicans.

Q. About how many white men voted there that day?—A. I think there was twenty-five white men, sir.

Q. What time did you arrive at the voting-place?—A. I arrived at the voting-place before the hour for the polls to be opened; I was ahead of any of the managers.

Q. How long did you remain?—A. I remained there until the votes were all counted.

Q. Please state how the election was conducted there that day; whether there was any intimidation toward voters, and all that you saw and heard.—A. There was intimidation on the republican side; there was no intimidation used that day whatever on the democratic side.

Q. State the nature and character of that intimidation.—A. Well, sir, in the first place, when they came there they came in a body.

Q. Who came in a body?—A. The colored republicans; they came in a body, and every one of them had a club about 2½ feet long, with a string tied to the end of it over their hand, and there was three of those republicans that had muskets, sir; and one had a side-arm. Peter Roberts, he went with us—with Mr. Mulligan, trial-justice, in his buggy. He was a colored man, and he voted the democratic ticket. Then after he voted the ticket he stepped off of the steps, and they raised a yell and every one crowded right around him. One fellow I saw him as he raised his stick to strike him over the head.

Q. They raised a yell. Who do you mean by "they?"—A. The republicans, sir. His name was James Chaney, sir.

Q. Was he a colored man?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When they crowded around him and made this attempt to strike him, what did they say?—A. Some of them said "Kill him" and some said "Beat him," and all sorts of threats; and in the meanwhile, when this fellow raised his club, one of our men stepped in and told him not to strike him; that he had the privilege to vote on which-ever side he wanted to vote; that if he could not do it he was not a free man.

Q. Did they strike him?—A. They did not.

Q. These men who interfered there stopped it, did they?—A. They did, sir.

Q. How far was this from the poll where the voting was going on?—A. Not more than about fifteen paces, sir. The managers had to tell them to get away from there; that they were interrupting the poll.

Q. Do you know of any colored men there that day who were prevented from voting the democratic ticket; and, if so, state about how many?—A. Yes, sir. Well, sir, there was three to my knowledge. I heard all three of them say that they wanted to vote the democratic ticket, and that they was afraid to do it because those men had told them what the result would be.

Q. Was that there at the election?—A. Right there at the election, sir.

Q. You state those men said to them what they would with them do if they voted the democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they were afraid to vote it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the colored republicans there examining the tickets of any voters, or interrupting with them?—A. I did, sir; they did all the interfering whatever. There was not a democratic ticket carried from the house into the yard. The last ones was republican tickets, and whenever they would come there with a democratic ticket—I seen that with my own eye—they would take it away from them and tear it up.

Q. What threat did you hear them make there at the polls against democratic voters?—A. Well, sir, they said any colored person that would vote for Hampton, if they had their way with them they would burn them, and that it would not do for them to show themselves in a conspicuous place after that.

Q. Do you know of any other colored men who voted the democratic ticket, besides this man Roberts?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who?—A. Peter Johnson.

Q. What age man was he?—A. About 40 years, sir.

Q. Was it known there on the ground that he voted the democratic ticket; and, if so, state what was said about it, if anything?—A. They told him, sir, that if he voted the democratic ticket they intended to whip him; and then on the 15th of November, after that, he got a genteel whipping.

(Mr. Lapham objects to the last answer, on the ground that an individual transaction after the election is not competent.)

Q. Do you know whether he afterward was whipped?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. To what extent was he whipped?—A. It was a pretty bad one, sir. I saw the marks on him, sir. He was cut up pretty badly.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. You did not see the whipping yourself?—A. I did not see the whipping when it was put on.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. You saw the marks?—A. I saw the marks; yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether there was any proceeding instituted afterward against these men who were engaged in that affair of whipping him?—A. There was, sir.

Q. State what you know about it.—A. Well, sir, on the 16th of November there was a warrant issued and sent after those parties. I was pressed by the constable to go with him.

Q. Did you go as one of the constable's posse?—A. I did, sir. I went until we got to the first house; there we found a prisoner. He did not feel like he wanted to submit to the arrest at all. We told him he had to go with us; that we had the authority to carry him, and he had to go and stand his trial. We gave him then to Mr. Causey to carry to the trial-justice, and while Mr. Causey was carrying him there he was taken away by—

Q. Did you see that?—A. No, sir; I did not. Then we went to the next house, and there we got another prisoner. They sent that prisoner back by me.

Q. What was his name?—A. His name was Washington Brown.

Q. Was he one of the men who was at this voting-precinct that day?—A. No, sir; he did not vote at that precinct, for he was not old enough to vote. He did not vote anywhere; he was not old enough; he was but nineteen.

Q. This other man that you arrested, was he a voter at that precinct?—A. He voted at Loughtonville, sir—the first one; and the second one, he was not old enough to vote. Mr. Johnson gave him to me, and sent me to take him back to the cross-roads where he had taken his prisoner. I told him I would take him back. When I had got within three-fourths of a mile of the place I met twenty-seven men and women on the road.

Q. Were they colored people?—A. Yes, sir; they had their guns and their bayonets all fixed on them. They got within 15 yards of me and they made such a yell I could hardly sit on my horse. He would not stay on the road. I told this fellow (this prisoner) I had to turn back, and he said, "I am not going to do it." In the meanwhile they got closer until they got up to me, and one fellow run up and grabbed my horse by the bit, and presented his bayonet right at me; and there was an old man near by; he grabbed him, or he would have put his bayonet through me, sir. Then they took my prisoner away, and they told me all they wanted was Joe Johnson and John Schueman; that they intended to kill them.

Q. Joe Johnson, was he constable?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was Schueman?—A. Schueman was one of his posse, sir; and I then went up to the cross-roads to make my report to the trial-justice what they had done. They had taken my prisoner away, and before I got to the trial-justice there was fifteen guns fired.

Q. Did you hear them?—A. I heard the guns; there was fifteen guns fired; and in about half an hour—well, not half an hour, not more than a quarter of an hour—after the guns were fired, in came Constable Johnson at full speed. He said that they were shot into and some of them killed.

Q. Did you go to see whether anybody was killed or not?—A. I did not go that night, sir; but I went the next morning.

Q. Did you find anybody killed?—A. I found Mr. Schueman dead in the field, sir. Mr. Deloach came home in about one hour after the firing took place, badly wounded.

Q. Was he one of Johnson's posse?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. LAPHAM. All this line of examination is under my objection, of course.

The WITNESS. The ball struck Mr. Schueman here [witness indicating the back of his head] and busted his brains out; he was on his horse, apparently trying to get away; he fell on his face, and his whole brain was emptied on the ground. Then they rammed cotton sticks in his brains and pulled them out. He was killed in a cotton-patch. He could not get to the house without going through the cotton-patch. Deloach, as soon as he got to where we were, he fainted; he just did get there, and that was all.

Q. Has he gotten well?—A. No, sir; I do not suppose he ever will get well.

Q. He is not able to travel?—A. No, sir; he is confined to his bed; he cannot get up. He was struck right in there with a bayonet, [indicating the left temple;] he was struck on the back of his head by a blow. It seems from the wound that it was the hammer of the gun that went into the back of his head; and a ball shot through just below his left shoulder. Those men who rescued my prisoner said at the time all they wanted was Schueman and Joe Johnson; that they wanted to kill them, and that they did not intend to be arrested by no damn democrats.

Q. About how many were in that party that rescued your prisoner?—A. Ten, sir.

Q. You say there were women along?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many women?—A. Enough to make twenty-seven, sir.

Q. Were the women armed in any way?—A. They had clubs, sir; those are the only arms I saw them have.

Q. The men had guns and bayonets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were they mounted or afoot?—A. Afoot, sir—infantry, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Roberts, if I understand you, vote the democratic ticket?—A. Peter Roberts, yes, sir.

Q. Did you see him vote?—A. I did not, sir; did not fold his ticket until he got to the box, and I was standing right by the box.

Q. You spoke of three other men who gave you some information about not voting?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether they did vote or not?—A. They did vote, sir.

Q. Then you do not know of any one who did not vote, do you?—A. Any one who did not vote at all, do you mean?

Q. Yes.—A. O, yes; I know several who did not vote at all.

- Q. Who did not vote there at the polls?—A. Yes, sir; there at the polls.
- Q. How do you know that they did not vote?—A. They did not go up to the box; their names were not enrolled, and I stood by the box all day myself.
- Q. How many do you know of?—A. I know of four, sir.
- Q. Do you know whether they were voters?—A. They were, sir.
- Q. They did not offer to vote?—A. Not at all, sir.
- Q. Do you know of any one who offered to vote that was prevented from voting?—A. No, sir; I do not know of any one who did not vote.
- Q. Didn't you hear any threats from democrats prior to the election?—A. I did not, sir; no, sir.
- Q. Did you not hear them threaten that they would discharge men if they did not vote the democratic ticket?—A. I did not, sir; never did.
- Q. At no time during the canvass?—A. No, sir. I never heard a man say he discharged a man, sir.
- Q. Did you have any colored men in your employ?—A. I did, sir.
- Q. How many?—A. Two, sir.
- Q. How did they vote?—A. One voted the radical ticket and the other did not vote at all, sir.
- Q. How many white men did you see there at the polls?—A. About twenty-five, sir.
- Q. Were they all democrats?—A. They were, sir.
- Q. Did they have any arms?—A. Not that I saw, sir.
- Q. Did you know whether they had arms or not?—A. I did not see any, sir.
- Q. That does not answer my question.—A. I do not know anything, sir, unless I can see it.
- Q. Don't you know whether they had arms or not?—A. I do not. No, sir.
- Q. Did you have any?—A. I did.
- Q. What?—A. I had a side-arm, sir.
- Q. What was it?—A. A pistol.
- Q. A revolver?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. How many shooters?—A. Five.
- Q. Loaded?—A. Three was loaded, sir.
- Q. Don't you know that other white men had revolvers?—A. I don't know, for I never searched any of them.
- Q. Where did you carry yours that day?—A. I carried it wherever I went that day.
- Q. Whereabouts on your person did you have it?—A. In my pocket.
- Q. Out of your pocket, was it?—A. No, sir. When I pulled off my coat it could be seen.
- Q. Where was it—in what pocket?—A. In my hind pocket in my pants.
- Q. In the hip-pocket?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You say you always carry it?—A. Always carry it.
- Q. Have you got it now?—A. I have, sir.
- Q. Brought it here to court, have you?—A. Well, I have not brought it here to court particularly.
- Q. Well, you have brought your pistol, your revolver here, with you?—A. Yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

- Q. You carry your pistol in self-defense, I suppose?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You do not propose to kill anybody, do you?—A. No, sir; only in self-defense.

J. F. CAUSEY sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

- Question. What is your age?—Answer. I think I am twenty-eight. I was born in 1848, sir.
- Q. Where do you reside?—A. Lawtonville, Beaufort County.
- Q. Where did you attend the recent election?—A. Lawtonville, sir.
- Q. Did you vote there that day?—A. Yes, sir; I voted there that day.
- Q. What time did you get to the election?—A. I got there between daylight and sunrise. There was a few votes cast before I got there.
- Q. How long did you remain?—A. I was there until the votes were closed that night, sir. I was there all day, sir.
- Q. Do you know how many votes were polled there that day?—A. 436 or 437 votes were cast that day, as well as I can remember.
- Q. How many republican and how many democratic votes?—A. I think there was 134 democratic votes cast, sir, and the balance was republican votes. That's to the best of my recollection about that. I think that is pretty near it, sir.
- Q. State whether you saw any interference with or intimidation of voters there that day; and if so, state what you saw and heard.—A. They came up, the majority of the voters came up in a body.
- Q. Of both parties?—A. No, sir; the republican party, mostly. They stopped about a quarter or half a mile of the precinct, and sent up and got their tickets. They came up in a company, with drum, and flag hoisted, and sent up and got their tickets.

Q. How far did they halt from the polls?—A. About a quarter or half a mile.

Q. They sent up and got tickets?—A. Yes, sir; sent up. The captain of the militia went down with the tickets and gave them to them, and they came up and the body of them cast their votes in that way. They kept hurrahing and singing and beating the drums, and there was a flag hoisted, and they formed right in front of the place where they voted. As soon as they got through voting they formed again. They drilled pretty well all day, sir, right in front of where they voted.

Q. How far off from the voting was this drilling?—A. Right at it, sir. They voted through a window. The votes was taken through a window. The box was inside, and they went on the piazza, and they handed their votes in through the window.

Q. And this drilling was right in the road?—A. Right in the road, sir. It was right at the piazza, sir, just a street you may call it, right alongside. There was a fellow there, I can't exactly remember his name, he said he wanted to vote the democratic ticket, and they told him if he did they would take him down the road and give him a hundred lashes, and he was afraid to vote it. He wanted to vote the democratic ticket.

Q. Was he a colored man?—A. Yes, sir. He told both parties there publicly. I think his name was Amos Miller; I am not certain of it. I would know him if I seen him again.

Q. You say he didn't vote the democratic ticket?—A. No, sir; he voted the republican ticket. He said he wanted to vote the democratic ticket, but he was afraid to do it. They said they would take him down the road and give him a hundred lashes. That's what they said publicly.

Q. Did you hear any other threats?—A. No, sir; I heard of nothing more.

Q. What time of day did that occur?—A. That occurred about between ten and eleven o'clock; somewhere along there, sir.

Q. Do you know of any men that came there for the purpose of voting, who went away without voting?—A. Yes, sir; I heard some say so.

Q. Did they state any reason why?—A. No, sir. One of them told me he would not vote for the republican party, and he was afraid to vote for the democratic party. He never had voted for the democrats, and he said if he could not do it any good he did not intend to do any harm. Those were his words he spoke, and he told me that he was not going to vote at all, and I don't think he voted at all.

Q. Did you hear any threats made by the colored republicans, preceding the election, against colored democrats if they voted the democratic ticket?—A. No, sir; not right there. I heard a good deal, but it was hearsay.

Q. Did you learn after the election of the beating of one Peter Johnson, a colored man?—A. Yes, sir; I saw him the evening after he was beaten.

Q. State to what extent he was beaten.—A. I saw the bruises he showed. The marks of the whipping was on his pants and coat. I did not strip him to look at him, but he showed me the bruises on his breast.

Q. And the marks of a whip on him?—A. Yes, sir; on his clothes.

Q. Did you accompany the constable to try and arrest these parties?—A. Yes, sir; I was one of the posse. We went to arrest the party.

Q. Do you recollect what time that was?—A. I think it was about the 16th of November or December; I don't know which. I think it was the 16th of November.

(Mr. Lapham objects to the witness stating what took place after the election, as incompetent.)

Q. It was shortly after the election, was it?—A. Yes, sir; it was the Tuesday after the election, I think. We started from the trial-justice's. We went up about a mile, and we arrested one prisoner. He was turned over to me to carry back to the justice's. A negro boy came running after us with an ax in his hands. He came up to me and tried to make this prisoner leave me. I urged him to go on with me and stand his trial, and succeeded in getting him from him. We got to the road that went up to a man's house. I told him that he must go on to the justice's, and he insisted very hard that I should go with him to the house, that he wanted to see that man. And at last I persuaded him to go with me. He told me he wanted to see that man. After persuading him some time, he concluded that he would go on. Before I had traveled many yards from that place there came three men out of the woods ahead of me, with bayonets on their guns.

Q. Were they white or colored men?—A. Colored men, sir. There was two boys, counting this first one between twelve and fifteen.

Q. Were they in addition to the three men that came out of the brush?—A. No, sir; these were three different men. I said to the prisoner when these men come out of the brush, "What does that mean?" One was Ben. Taylor, James Grant, and Chanoy. They came in the road between 75 and 100 yards ahead of me with their bayonets on their guns. I knew them all three personally—well acquainted with them—and was friendly with all three of them.

Q. Go on and state what occurred.—A. I rode right up to them, and as soon as they got within speaking distance of me they didn't notice me at all. They called him by name, "Moses, where are you going?" He said, "They arrested me about whipping Peter Johnson, and I am going down to Mulligan's to stand my trial." They said, "You don't go another step." I said, "Hold on, I have got something to say in that." I told him I was a pressed constable to carry him to the justice's to stand his trial; that he was prosecuted for whipping this old man for voting the democratic ticket; and he was arrested and going along very well until we met them. When I said that, this man Chaney he ripped out in a pretty mad tone and said, "There was no magistrate, no constable, nor no law." I says to him, "Old man, you are a fool; come on and go up to the justice's with me and you will find out whether there is any law or not. He can tell you whether there is any law or not. He has issued the warrants to arrest these parties." But he paid no attention to me at all. He just kept repeating these words over. I said to Ben. Taylor, "Ben., I hold you responsible for that prisoner; you have taken him away from me." He says, "I will be responsible for him," and the prisoner said, "I will not go another step till the crowd comes." James Grant spoke then and said, "We are out here to defend the republican party, and intend to do it if we kill every democrat in the State." I rode off and left him and reported to the justice.

Q. You left the prisoner there?—A. Left the prisoner with these three men, sir.

Q. Did you recover the prisoner after that?—A. No, sir; I never laid my eyes on him after that. As soon as I got to the justice's, while I was reporting to him, there was eight or ten women came up and raised a row with him.

Q. Eight or ten colored women?—A. Yes, sir; that is all I saw or heard.

Q. Did you see any parties who were injured that day?—A. Yes, sir; I saw the next morning.

Q. Whom did you see?—A. I saw Mr. Deloach, the man that was wounded.

Q. State what you saw.—A. I saw Deloach the next morning, wounded.

Q. Who was Deloach?—A. Abram Deloach, one of the posse.

Q. How was he wounded?—A. In the back. Some said a bayonet-wound, some a bullet-wound. I saw the hole in his coat, and I should call it a bullet-wound. I saw Sohueman with his brains shot out.

Q. Where was he?—A. He was brought from the place where they had the rumpus. I saw him at the cross-roads, when they brought him up there in the wagon, dead. There is where I saw Deloach.

Q. Was he this man that was killed—shot?—A. Yes, sir; I should judge he was shot.

Q. Describe how he was shot.—A. The bullet, I should judge, took him about there. [Witness indicating back part of his head.] It knocked the top of his head out. There was the prints of a double-barreled gun—the muzzle took him about the hip, and the prints of the hammer was in his shoulder. He had a few other bruises on him—not of any consequence that I could see.

By Mr. EDEN:

Q. Was there any militia companies in that neighborhood?—A. Yes, sir; there was a militia company. It was a part of the militia that took the prisoner away from me—three of them—Captain Scott's company, sir.

Q. Do you know how many men there were in the company?—A. I heard the captain say fifty-three men.

Q. Did you ever see them marching?—A. No, sir; I never see them drilling.

Q. Was this crowd that came up to the polls in marching order, as you say, a part of the militia?—A. Yes, sir; they had guns; I judge they were militia.

Q. I am speaking now of those who came up to the polls at the time of the election.—A. Yes, sir; I knew a good many of them, and they all said they belonged to that militia company.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Do you know of any other militia organization in that vicinity?—A. Not right in that immediate neighborhood, sir; some below there.

Q. How far below there?—A. About twelve miles, I suppose.

Q. I mean about Lawtonville.—A. Not that I know of.

Q. Wern't there any rifle-clubs there?—A. Not that I know of, sir.

Q. And never have been?—A. Do you mean among the negroes?

Q. No; among the white men.—A. No, sir.

Q. Never have been any rifle-clubs there?—A. Not as I know; no rifle-club as I know of.

Q. A military organization of any kind?—A. There has been a democratic club there, sir.

Q. In Lawtonville?—A. Yes, sir; there's a democratic club in Lawtonville.

Q. When was it formed?—A. I don't know exactly when.

Q. Didn't they have guns?—A. No, sir.

Q. Revolvers?—A. They might have had revolvers, but they never had guns. They had double-barreled guns what they always had, but they have never been armed as a rifle-club, or anything of that sort.

Q. Had they double-barreled guns?—A. Not all of them; some of them had.

Q. Didn't they have revolvers?—A. That's more than I am able to say, sir; I didn't see any.

Q. Did you belong to it?—A. I belonged to that democratic club a little while.

Q. Had you a revolver?—A. Yes, sir; I had a revolver.

Q. What kind of a gun did you have?—A. I have got no other gun at all, sir.

Q. Did you have your revolver on election-day?—A. Just hold on a little. Let me see if I had or not. I sold mine just before the election to a colored man I thought was in some danger. I bought one directly after that, but don't know whether I had it that day or not. Just give me time and I will study up and see. I rather think I did, sir. Yes, sir; I had it that day.

Q. You had sold one to a colored man, and bought another?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which you had with you on election-day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long before the election did you sell it to a colored man?—A. I think it was some three or four weeks, sir.

Q. How many shots does it shoot?—A. Five-shooter.

Q. Was it loaded?—A. Yes, sir; it was loaded.

Q. Do you carry it with you now?—A. Yes, sir; I carry it with me all the time.

Q. Have you it with you now?—A. Yes, sir; I have it with me now.

Q. Did Ellis attend the same poll that you did?—A. No, sir.

Q. What do you say your poll is?—A. Lawtonville, sir.

Q. Are they adjoining precincts, Lawtonville and Lawton church?—A. No, sir; they are about twelve or fourteen miles apart.

Q. Which one did Johnson live in?—A. Johnson attended the Lawtonville precinct.

Q. Where did the trial-justice live?—A. He lives at Stafford Cross-Roads.

Q. How far from Lawtonville?—A. I don't know exactly; ten or twelve miles, I suppose.

Q. How far from Lawton church?—A. Some four or five miles, sir; that's guess-work, sir. I don't know exactly the distance.

Q. How came you and Ellis together to go to arrest these men living so far apart?—A. The trial-justice was hauling brick beyond my house, and his teamster passed there and told me he expected the party was arrested, and I went down to see who was arrested for the whipping of this man, and when I got there the rest had not started. I did not go there for that purpose at all. I went to see who was arrested for the whipping.

Q. After you got there you were deputized to go?—A. I was deputized to go, sir; I didn't expect to be on such a thing.

Q. You say you think these men didn't vote. Do you know that they didn't vote?—A. What men, sir? Which one? The one I told you about going off without voting?

Q. Yes.—A. They told me that day—

Q. Do you know that they did not vote?—A. I told you before I didn't know whether they voted or not.

Q. But you don't know whether they voted or not?—A. I told you at first I did not know whether they voted or not.

Q. Do you know whether they voted?—A. I told you that before. I don't know whether they voted or not. That's what they told me, though.

Q. How far is Lawtonville from the town of Beaufort?—A. I don't know exactly. I could not say how far it is.

Q. It is in Beaufort County, is it not?—A. It is in Beaufort, about, I suppose. between fifteen and twenty-five miles—I don't know exactly—from the Barnwell line it is in the upper part of Beaufort.

Q. Did you stay until the votes were canvassed there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the managers all sign the return?—A. Yes, sir; I think they did.

Q. No protest against the election sent with the return, was there?—A. I don't think so.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. I am a farmer, sir.

Q. Do you employ colored men?—A. A few, sir.

Q. How many?—A. From one to two, sir.

Q. How many had you in your employ on election-day?—A. Only one, sir.

Q. How many white people were there at this poll?—A. I don't know exactly, sir.

Q. About how many?—A. I don't think I could tell you. I don't know well enough to guess even.

Q. You can state something about it.—A. I expect there was over 100 white men there, sir. There might have been more or less. I could not pretend to say, sir.

Q. You judge there was a hundred?—A. Yes, sir; I expect there might have been a hundred.

Q. Do you know whether any of the rest had arms except yourself?—A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Do you know whether they are persons who carry arms as you do?—A. No, sir; I don't know anything about it, sir.

Q. You can't speak as to any one of them?—A. No, sir; I can't speak as to any one of them.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. You were asked about the white men in that neighborhood, members of clubs having guns; they did not carry their guns in their club organizations, did they?—A. No, sir.

Q. Those guns were fowling-pieces that they kept at their homes?—A. Farms; yes, sir.

Q. Do you know whether all the white men in that neighborhood had guns or not?—A. I told him I didn't know. I know some of them hadn't got guns, for I, for one, have not got a gun.

Q. Those you speak of are fowling-pieces which the farmers are in the habit of keeping?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The club organization they had was a mere campaign club?—A. Yes, sir; nothing else.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. What clubs do you say the colored people had? I am now speaking of those on election-day.—A. I didn't see any of them have guns that day. They had clubs, I said, sir—what I saw.

Q. Do you know what guns the members of that military club had there that day?—A. Militia company, I said, sir.

Q. A company of State militia?—A. I suppose so.

Q. The company you speak of was a company of State militia?—A. Yes, sir; that's what they call themselves. That's all I know. They call themselves a company, and Carter was the captain of it.

Q. Did they have their arms there on election-day?—A. Not that I saw, sir. They had clubs; that's what I seen.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. And their fife and drum?—A. They had their drum; no fife; and their flag.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. What flag?—A. I reckon half a dozen flags.

Q. What kind were they?—A. Common little flags.

Q. What flags—palmetto or stars and stripes?—A. They had the stars and stripes.

Q. You say they had more than one flag of stars and stripes?—A. Yes, sir; I saw two or three flags.

I. D. JOHNSON sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Question. What is your age?—Answer. About fifty, sir.

Q. Where do you reside?—A. In the neighborhood of Lawtonville, sir.

Q. What county?—A. Beaufort County, sir.

Q. Where did you attend at the recent election?—A. At Lawtonville, sir.

Q. Did you vote there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time did you reach there, and how long did you remain?—A. I got there about nine o'clock in the morning, sir, and staid there until about four in the evening.

Q. Did you see any organized companies of men there that day, and, if so, state who they were?—A. Yes, sir; I saw a company there, sir; they were colored folks.

Q. What were they doing?—A. They were beating their drums and marching up and down the road, sir.

Q. Did you see any interference with or intimidation of voters there that day, and, if so, state what you saw and heard?—A. Those that were marching up and down the road, they had the red tickets there, and as the people came up, they told them that those was the tickets for them to vote; and I saw a man as I was riding to Lawtonville lying down alongside of the road, and I asked him if he was going to the election.

Mr. LAPHAM objects to witness stating what occurred away from the polls.

Q. Was it in regard to going to the polls?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he go on to the polls?—A. Yes, sir; he went on to the polls. He said he wanted to vote the democratic ticket, but through fear he would have to vote the radical ticket, if he lost every friend he had.

Q. Was he a colored man or a white man?—A. He was a mulatto man.

Q. Do you know whether he voted or not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What ticket did he vote?—A. He voted the radical ticket, sir.

Q. Did you hear these colored men there at the election make any threats against voters?—A. I heard several of them say, sir, that if they voted the democratic ticket they would whip them.

Q. Did you see a colored man there that day named Peter Johnson?—A. No, sir; he voted at Lawton church. I know him very well.

Q. How long have you known him?—A. I have known him for thirty or forty years, sir.

Q. Do you know whether he was a democrat or a republican?—A. He was a democrat, sir.

Q. Do you know of any colored men at that poll that day who came there to vote but did not vote as they wanted to?—A. There was several of them who did not vote at all.

Q. Do you know the reason why they did not vote?—A. They said they were afraid to do it.

Q. Did they go off without voting?—A. They went away without voting.

Q. Do you know whether any injury was done to this colored man, Peter Johnson, after the election, and, if so, state what you know about it?—A. I was not home at the time, sir; I heard he was badly hurt.

Q. You say you were not at home at the time?—A. Not at home. I staid at Lawtonville myself, and news came to me that he was badly whipped, and I jumped on my horse and went to him.

Q. You got the news of this man, Peter Johnson, being whipped?—A. Yes, sir; and I jumped on my horse.

Q. Where did you find him?—A. At his house, sir.

Q. State what his condition was.—A. I saw that he was whipped up right badly.

Mr. LAPHAM renews his former objection.

Q. Just state how he was whipped?—A. Well, there was stripes all over his back, sir, and his legs. He was badly whipped up with a raw-hide whip, he said.

Q. You saw the marks?—A. Yes, sir; I saw the marks.

Q. State whether you had anything to do with the arrest of parties charged with committing that offense on him; and, if so, state all that you heard and saw.—A. I had been constabbling for Mr. Mulligan. I have been constabbling for the last eight years.

Q. Who is Mulligan?—A. He is the magistrate up there, and I was the constable. I went up there, and he told me that he had a warrant that he wanted me to serve; and I told him I had a good deal of business on hand, and had not time, and refused it.

Q. State whether you undertook to execute the process?—A. Yes, sir; I undertook to execute it.

Q. Who went with you, if anybody?—A. I pressed a man by the name of Schueman, and Mr. Causey, who has testified here.

Q. Mr. Causey, the witness who has just testified here?—A. Yes, sir; and M. D. Ellis, who is here to-night; Abram Delouch, and Nat. Ellis.

Q. State what you did?—A. Mr. Mulligan—I must tell you what caused me to press so many men.

Q. State whether you were directed to do that by the justice?—A. I was, sir; I went on, sir, and arrested three of them, and put each prisoner with one man to guard them to the magistrate. I gave one to M. D. Ellis; I gave one to Franklin Causey; and the other I sent by himself. He was a good old man, and I told him he did not require any one to be sent with him, and to go by himself, and he said he would do so; and Causey and Mr. Ellis they gave up their prisoners. I did not see it myself; they went to bring in their prisoners, and I went on to arrest others. I went up to a house to arrest one of the prisoners, and asked if he was at home, and they told me no. I told them I thought he was in that house, and I must get down and look, and they forbid me going in; and I told them that I must go in. I went to the house, and two of them went off yelling and hallooing, and directly a crowd answered them, and the first thing I knew I was met in a field by a crowd, armed.

Q. Who was with you at that time?—A. Abram Delouch, Schueman, and Nat. Ellis.

Q. You started down through the field with these men?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did these people come from that met you?—A. They came from Mr. Mulligan's. They went to Mr. Mulligan's with their bayonets on their guns.

Q. When you saw them, which way were they going?—A. They were coming to us from Mr. Mulligan's.

Q. And met you in the field?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many of them were there?—A. There was about twenty or twenty-five men and women.

Q. How many men?—A. There was about ten or twelve men, sir, and eight or ten women.

Q. How were they armed?—A. Some had muskets with bayonets on the ends; some had double-barreled guns; some had single-barreled guns; and so on.

Q. When they came up to you, what did they say? State what occurred.—A. They told me that they had been to Mr. Mulligan's, and that he, Mulligan, had said he had given me no warrant to arrest them. I told them I had the warrant and would read it for them; and they told me I was a damned liar, and I heard a pistol fired, and they all out loose shooting; and one man by the name of Schueman got his brains shot out, and they rammed some cotton-sticks in his head; and an old colored man got killed and a woman wounded; and a white man on our side got shot and a bayonet stuck in his head.

Q. Schueman was killed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he fall off his horse?—A. Yes, sir; I saw him when he fell.

Q. What became of you?—A. After they got through shooting and commenced with their bayonets, I got away from them and run out.

Q. You say there was a colored man killed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How was he killed?—A. Well, sir, I think this man Schueman killed him.

Q. After he was fired on?—A. After he was fired on; yes, sir.

Q. Who fired first?—A. The colored party fired first.

Q. And then Schueman returned the fire?—Yes, sir; I think this old man was trying to kill a man by the name of Delouch with a bayonet when Schueman shot him.

Q. Then, after that, Schueman was shot and killed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. They were shooting all this time, were they?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And using their bayonets?—A. Yes' sir; and using their bayonets.

Q. How often was Delouch shot?—A. Delouch was shot, sir, in the back.

Q. Anywhere else?—A. Then, sir, he was stabbed in the head with a bayonet, and struck, I suppose, two or three licks with something; I do not know what. He was badly bruised up when I saw him.

Q. Has he recovered?—A. Well, sir, he is bad off yet, but still living. Some say he will survive and some say he won't. I do not know whether he will or not. I think he was shot here back of the hip, sir.

Q. Did you recognize any of the parties that were in that crowd who fired at you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were any of them the men you were looking for?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many?—A. There was some of them there that I was looking for, and then there was some there I had already arrested that come back.

Q. The parties that you turned over to these other men, were they in that crowd?—A. Yes, sir; they were in that crowd.

Q. They had gotten away from the other parties, and were in this crowd?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What became of you after that?—A. I went right on, sir, to Mr. Mulligan's, sir, the trial-justice.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Did you shoot any that night?—A. No, sir; I never fired a gun.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Was that in the night or day time?—A. It was just getting dark.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Did you have a weapon?—A. I had a pistol tied to the front of my saddle, sir.

Q. A revolver?—A. No, sir; it was not a revolver; a single-barrel pistol.

Q. Did you have it with you on election-day?—A. No, sir.

Q. You do not usually carry it, then?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know what weapon Delouch had?—A. Yes, sir; he had a double-barrel gun.

Q. A double-barrel gun that he was carrying with him?—A. Well, he carried it on that occasion.

Q. What weapon did the man that was killed have?—A. He also had a double-barrel gun.

Q. Did he kill this old man with a double-barrel gun?—A. I think he did; yes, sir.

Q. And after he killed him he was shot?—A. Yes, sir; but this old man was trying to kill Delouch.

Q. Have any of these parties been arrested since?—A. They went and gave themselves up to the sheriff of Beaufort County themselves.

Q. Have they ever been brought before this magistrate?—A. Since they done this crime, do you mean.

Q. Yes; since he issued his warrants for their arrest?—A. No, sir.

Q. Have they ever been arrested on that warrant?—A. I cannot tell whether they have been or not.

Q. You do not know anything about their surrendering to the sheriff, except by report, do you?—A. Yes, sir; I saw them and saw the sheriff, too, when they surrendered to him.

- Q. When?—A. The next day.
 Q. But you did not see them when they surrendered to the sheriff?—A. Not at the time they did surrender, but I saw them with the sheriff the next day.
 Q. Where are they now?—A. In the Beaufort jail, sir.
 Q. How many of them?—A. I think there is twenty-four or twenty-five, sir.
 Q. Have they not been tried before the magistrate?—A. I cannot tell, sir.
 Q. They have been lying in jail ever since that time, the 16th of November?—A. Yes, sir.
 Q. No proceeding had before the magistrate?—A. No, sir.
 Q. What is your business?—A. Well, sir, I collect moneys for the neighborhood, and deputy for Mr. Wilson the sheriff, and constable for Mr. Mulligan.

By the CHAIRMAN :

- Q. Is it not the fact that these men were arraigned before the United States commission?—A. Yes, sir.
 Mr. LAPHAM. I object to all of this after transaction, on the ground that occurrences after the election relating to individual wrongs are immaterial.
 The committee adjourned to meet to-morrow, (Friday, December 29, 1876,) at 10 o'clock a. m.

CHARLESTON, S. C., December 29, 1876.

The committee met pursuant to adjournment.

TIMOTHY HURLEY sworn and examined.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

- Q. You reside in this city?—A. Yes, sir.
 Q. Are you one of the commissioners of election?—A. Yes, sir.
 Q. Were the ballot-boxes brought by the managers to your board?—A. Yes, sir.
 Q. What box have you brought here before the committee?—A. It is termed the Washington Street Engine-House box ; it is the third precinct of ward 3.
 Q. Where has it been since the managers returned it to your board?—A. It has been in the fire-proof vaults.
 Q. Under your charge?—A. Yes, sir ; put there by the commissioners.
 Q. Are the vaults in your charge?—A. It is in a public building.
 Q. Has it been opened since the return was made to you?—A. No, sir.
 Q. Do you remember whether there was an omission, a deficiency of votes for Nash, one of the electors, in that precinct?—A. There was an omission made on the county canvassers' return, but what it was I do not just exactly remember ; it will show for itself.
 Q. There was a memorandum made by the commissioners upon their return relating to the fact?—A. Yes, sir.
 Q. Have you the key of the box here?—A. Yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN :

- Q. How did you come in the custody of that box?—A. I was chairman of the county commissioners of election, and they placed them in the fire-proof building, where they have rooms, where they have been ever since until just now.
 Q. Who placed the box in that building?—A. The commissioners.
 Q. You were one of the electors on the Hayes and Wheeler ticket at that election, were you not?—A. Yes, sir.
 Q. Did you canvass the precinct returns as one of the commissioners, and make a return to the Secretary of State?—A. Yes, sir ; I might be permitted to say to you that there is no law as to what ought to be done with the boxes. These boxes were simply left there, as we thought they might be needed some day, and we put them there ourselves.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

- Q. The law requires them to be returned to you?—A. Yes, sir ; but after the votes had been canvassed we could have throwed them into the street ; but we thought some day they might be needed, and so we put them in the vault.

By the CHAIRMAN :

- Q. Where is that vault?—A. Right across the street in a public building---fire-proof building.
 Q. Is it your own building?—A. It is the building of the county ; the commissioners of election have no building.
 Q. Who occupies that building?—A. It is occupied by the county officers : probate judge, auditor, school commissioners, and other public officers.

Q. Who carries the key of the vault?—A. They were put in the charge of Mr. Leaneau.

Q. Who is he?—A. He is the clerk of the county treasurer.

MARTIN COLFIELD sworn and examined.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Question. Where do you reside?—Answer. In the city of Charleston.

Q. In what ward?—A. Ward 3.

Q. What voting-precinct?—A. Precinct No. 3.

Q. Were you one of the managers?—A. I was one of the managers at the last election.

Q. Who drew the managers' returns of your precinct?—A. I think it was Mr. White.

Q. Was he one of the board?—A. He was one of the managers.

Q. You returned the ballot-box and tally-list, did you?—A. All the papers pertaining to that precinct were put in the box.

Q. Is this the box? [Indicating the box produced by Mr. Hurley.]—A. Yes, sir; that is the box.

Q. See if the tally-list is in that box.—A. Yes, sir; this is the tally-list.

Q. See whether the name of Beverly Nash, as an elector, is on that tally-list?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many votes did he get?—A. Three hundred and eleven, sir.

Q. Do you remember whether your attention was called to the omission of his name in the returns?—A. I remember after we returned the box, and when the commissioners canvassed the votes, that they observed that omission.

Q. What was the omission?—A. The omission that his name was left off the return.

Q. Did you call the attention of the county commissioners to the fact?—A. I called their attention to the fact that there must be a mistake. Mr. White, I think, was present, and I called his attention to the omission also, and we both agreed that the correcting should be made there and then.

Q. Have you one of the republican electoral ballots there?—A. Yes, sir. [Witness produces one, of which the following is a copy:]

UNION REPUBLICAN TICKET.

For President.—Rutherford B. Hayes.

For Vice-President.—William A. Wheeler.

Presidential electors.—At large: Christopher C. Bowen, John Winsmith. Districts: 1, Thomas B. Johnson; 2, Timothy Hurley; 3, William B. Nash; 4, Wilson Cook; 5, William F. Myers.

For unexpired term Forty-fourth Congress.—Charles W. Buttz.

For Forty-fifth Congress.—Richard H. Cain.

For governor.—Daniel H. Chamberlain.

For lieutenant-governor.—Richard H. Gleaves.

Secretary of State.—Henry E. Hayne.

Comptroller-general.—Thomas C. Dunn.

State Treasurer.—Francis L. Cardozo.

Attorney-general.—Robert B. Elliott.

Superintendent of education.—John R. Tolbert.

Adjutant and inspector-general.—James Kennedy.

Solicitor, first circuit.—Charles W. Buttz.

Senate.—William N. Taft.

House of representatives.—Edmund W. M. Mackey, Joseph J. Lesesue, William J. Brodie, Joseph S. Lazarus, Benjamin F. Smalls, Samuel C. Brown, Robert Simmons, Benjamin F. Capers, William C. Glover, Adam P. Ford, Frederick S. Edwards, Richard Bryan, Isaac Prioleau, Julius C. Tingman, John Vanderpool, Abram Smith, William G. Pinckney.

Sheriff.—Christopher C. Bowen.

Clerk of court.—John H. Ostendorff.

Coroner.—Michael H. Collins.

Probate judge.—Macon B. Allen.

School commissioner.—Joseph E. Hayne.

County commissioners.—George I. Cunningham, Louis Dunneman, William H. Thompson.

Constitutional amendment.—Yes.

Q. That is the republican ticket which was voted?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the name of Mr. Nash is on it?—A. Yes, sir.

[Mr. Lapham then offered the ticket, of which the above is a copy, in evidence.]

Q. The omission of Nash's name in the return was purely a mistake?—A. Yes, sir; in copying the names of the electors; and it being so late that night we did not compare tallies. We were perfectly satisfied that it was a mistake and made the correction.

Q. Nash had the same number of electors as the others, had he not?—A. Yes, sir; he had the same number. In fact, the electors got the highest vote.

Q. He had the same as the other republican electors?—A. Yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Are those two lists presented here the original tally-lists as kept at the precinct?—A. Those are the original tally-lists kept there.

Q. By what do you recognize them to be the original tally-lists?—A. Well, I recognize the handwriting of Mr. Davis.

Q. Who is he?—A. He was a clerk.

Q. In the first line for presidential electors on the democratic tally-list appear the figures 239. This tally-list shows the total to be 252, does it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then the tally-marks; the first figures in that first line are 239; and then there are 5 and 5 and 3, which makes 13, which added to 239 makes 252?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where is the tally-list that makes up the sum 239?—A. I think I can account for that. In writing the names of the parties I think they skipped one number. The clerk skipped the number on the regular poll-list by mistake.

Q. Where is that list that was kept for filing?—A. Here it is.

Q. The tally-list of the republican electors contains the tally of each vote, all the way through, does it not?—A. Of each candidate; yes, sir.

Q. Carried out 309 and 311?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then the democratic tally-list begins with the figures first 239, then 5, 5 again, and then 3, does it not?—A. I presume so.

Q. And you say that is the tally-list that was made?—A. Yes, sir; the tally-list that was made out for that precinct.

Q. State how that came to be made out in that way, different from the republican tally-list. Where is the tally-list that shows the tally of each democratic elector?—A. I do not see where it can be found, except from the ballots.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. What are those additions to the number 239; what were they taken from?—A. Those are taken from the split tickets; those were the straight tickets.

Q. The 292 are straight tickets?—A. Yes, sir; those were put in afterwards.

Q. Those were found on the split tickets?—A. Yes, sir; we counted all the straight tickets first.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. If those tallies of 5 and 5 and 3 were taken from what you call the out tickets, by which you mean not straight tickets, then each elector would get the same out vote?—A. The split was upon other candidates than the electors. The lieutenant-governor and State officers were out.

Q. What I want to get at is, where is the tally of those 239 votes that you have here?—A. Those 239 votes must be taken off of one of these lists here, for instance this 239, and very likely it was carried over to this sheet of paper.

Q. The democratic ticket for the State officers contains a complete tally-list, does it not; that is the tally-list for the democratic State officers?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That contains a complete tally-list of the State officers, does it not?—A. You observe that those are so small that it could not get upon the same sheet of paper—

Q. How is that? The presidential electors get 252?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Hampton gets 256 by this tally-list?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. His tallies are all carried out on it. Here is 252 for other State officers. They are all carried out, are they not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why could you not carry out the presidential electors the same way?—A. Well, it is a matter—I cannot say why we did not do it.

Q. You do not know, really, how that was done, do you?—A. I do not recollect; no, sir.

Q. I see on your republican tally-list for presidential electors that you have for President R. B. Hayes, and for Vice-President W. A. Wheeler, and the tally-lists carried out opposite their names—were the votes for them?—A. No; the votes were not for them but for their electors.

Q. How came the tally-lists to be carried out opposite the President's and Vice-President's names?—A. With the intention of putting them to those names.

Q. How came you to carry out the tally-list opposite the names of Hayes and Wheeler?—A. Perhaps their names are printed on the ticket.

Q. The presidential electors on this tally-list have opposite their names 311 votes, have they not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Hayes has a tally-list opposite his name of 309?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Wheeler the same?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How do you account for that?—A. I suppose that is all the votes they got.

Q. On the democratic tally-list the names of Tilden and Hendricks do not appear, do they—nothing but the names of the electors?—A. I do not see Tilden and Hendricks on that ticket.

By Mr. EDEN:

Q. Did you make out any tally-list at all on the democratic electors of those 239 votes?—A. That is the tally-list that we had. There could be no intentional mistake. The clerk was a democrat and was opposed to our ticket.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Who kept these tally-lists?—A. Mr. Davis kept those tally-lists.

Q. Not all of them; did not two persons keep tally-lists?—A. There was two supervisors.

Q. Whose handwriting is this?—A. Mr. Davis's; it is all Mr. Davis's writing.

Q. Who assisted in keeping the tally? Anybody besides Davis, the clerk?—A. Mr. White, the only assistance that was given.

Q. Were the tally-lists compared after you got through with the counting of the votes?—A. The tally-lists were compared.

Q. And found to agree?—A. Yes, sir; and found to agree.

Q. Who was Mr. White?—A. Mr. White was the democratic manager of that precinct.

Q. And Davis was the clerk of the board?—A. Mr. Davis was the clerk of the board, and a democrat.

Q. They each kept separate tallies?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the mistake occurred in copying the names of the electors into the return, omitting the name of Nash?—A. That was the mistake, and it was so late that I did not ask to have the return compared.

F. E. WILDER sworn and examined.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Question. Where do you reside?—Answer. Hilton Head.

Q. What is your voting-precinct?—A. Mitchellville.

Q. How long have you resided there?—A. Twelve years.

Q. What is your age and occupation?—A. My age is 38; farmer by occupation. At present I am treasurer of Beaufort County.

Q. How long have you held that office?—A. I was appointed to it about a month since.

Q. Where did you vote on election-day?—A. At Mitchellville.

Q. What time did you get there?—A. Between 10 and 11 o'clock, I should think; very nearly 11 o'clock.

Q. How long did you stay?—A. I was there until the managers made their return—canvassed the votes.

Q. State in your own way what you observed in reference to the conduct of that poll there during the day.—A. When I arrived at the polls there was some commotion between some colored men and Mr. H. C. Politzer. There was quite a crowd gathered. I went in on horseback, and I rode into the crowd to Mr. Politzer. Just as I rode up I heard Mr. Politzer make this remark: "I'll be damned if he sha'n't vote." Some colored man—I don't know his name now—said he should not vote. I requested them all to keep quiet, and inquired what the controversy was about. Mr. Politzer stated that the man that was with him, Mr. Lightburn, wanted to vote, and that these men wouldn't allow him. I told Mr. Politzer that the man had no right to a vote, that he was not a citizen of the State. Mr. Politzer said he only wanted him to vote the electoral ticket. He claimed that he had a right to vote the electoral ticket. I told him he had no right whatever; that if he had a right to vote the electoral ticket he had a right to vote the whole ticket. The language that Mr. Politzer used excited the colored people some, but as soon as I got there they all quieted down, and there was no disturbance after that.

Q. You said that it made no difference, that if he voted the electoral ticket he could vote the whole ticket.—A. I advised him to go to the managers of the election, and if he would run the risk of taking the oath, or if they would take his ballot—I requested all the people not to cause any disturbance, but let him take the consequences.

Q. That is, if this man would take the oath?—A. Yes, sir; if Mr. Lightburn took the oath.

Q. You advised who?—A. I advised the colored people.

Q. Do you remember whether you referred to the law?—A. I did.

Q. What did you do in that respect?—A. I read the law to this man.

Q. What was his disqualification?—A. He belonged to the Navy. He had left the Navy about six months before. He went to the polls and had some talk with the managers.

Q. After you read the law, was it, that you gave this advice to let him vote if he took the risk of the oath?—A. Yes, sir. He went to the polls, and the managers gave him the same advice, that he couldn't vote.

Q. Who was with Mr. Politzer?—A. Mr. J. R. Clem.

Q. Was Mr. Politzer a white man?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Lightburn didn't vote, did he?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was there a democratic ticket there that day; a ticket in red ink having the names of the democratic candidates upon it, which it was attempted to circulate?—A. There was.

Q. Describe it.—A. It was printed in the same form with an eagle, the same as the republican ticket was headed: "The Union republican ticket;" exactly like the republican ticket, until you came to the names on the ticket.

Q. Having on it then what names?—A. The full democratic ticket.

Q. In what color?—A. The red ink.

Q. Did you hear any charge made as to who put them in circulation?—A. Immediately after this affair of Lightburn's and Politzer's was through, a colored man by the name of Thomas Bell came to me with one of the red democratic tickets, and says to me, "Doctor, what do you think of that?"

Q. Was this a colored elector who spoke to you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was it there at the election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say this man talked to you; privately or publicly?—A. Publicly.

Q. How many heard him?—A. There was quite a crowd around there.

Q. He said this, there, openly?—A. Yes, sir; there were probably a hundred people right around there when he said to me, "What do you think of this?" I took the ticket and looked at it, and I says, "Thomas, this is a democratic ticket." He says, "I come very near voting it, if it had not been for some one—I can't say now whether it was Graves or Noble, it was one of them—met me just before I got to the poll, and I showed the ticket to him, I should have voted it, believing it to be a republican ticket," and he says, "I think it is wrong for a man to impose"——

The CHAIRMAN. I object to the witness expressing an opinion about the circulating of this ticket as incompetent.

Mr. LAPHAM. I offer to show that this witness added, "I think it is wrong for a man to impose upon ignorant people in this way."

Q. What further did he say?—A. I asked him where he got his ticket. He said he got it from Mr. McFall as a republican ticket.

Q. Was anything more said?—A. That was all.

Q. Did you go to Mr. McFall then and inquire of him about it?—A. I did.

Q. State the conversation between you and him.—A. I went to the house where Mr. John McFall was.

Q. What house?—A. Mr. Drayton's house, about half or three-quarters of a mile from the polls.

Q. What did you hear said among the electors there by way of complaint about McFall's peddling those tickets there that day? What was said by the voters, if anything?—A. I don't know, there was so much said.

Q. Give some of the remarks, if you can, that were made about McFall.—A. They said that they had been imposed upon, and that if it had not been for some of the men who could read the ballots they would ignorantly have voted the democratic ticket.

Q. What were the relations between McFall and the people of the island prior to the election?—A. Very pleasant, as far as I know.

Q. Did you ever hear any complaint made of him before this occurrence?—A. No, sir; I know but very little about the people on his place. I live about five miles from him, although he is known all over the island.

Q. How long during the day was this act of McFall's the subject of comment there?—A. Only a very short time after I got there. The thing was quiet in a little while after I got to the polls.

Q. During the rest of the day, how was the canvass conducted?—A. Very quietly.

Q. Any further disturbance?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see anything there like coercion or intimidation of voters?—A. I saw nothing of the kind.

Q. Did you see any one who was prevented from voting?—A. No, sir, except Mr. Lightburn.

Q. You say you staid until the canvass was completed?—A. Yes, sir; I was absent about two hours, from one until three o'clock, to get my dinner.

Q. Do you remember the vote there?—A. I think it was 476. I am not positive; that's my impression.

Q. The whole vote?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many votes were polled for each party?—A. I think it was 464 republican and 10 democratic votes. Some of the votes were scratched. Some of the candidates got 9, and some 10; I couldn't state positively; it was about that.

Q. How many white people live on the island?—A. I couldn't say exactly; there was about 25 I should say, or about that number.

Q. State whether the managers all signed the returns.—A. They did.

Q. Any complaint or protest made?—A. No, sir.

Q. How long have you voted at that poll?—A. Ever since reconstruction.

Q. State the number of years.—A. Eight years.

Q. Did these two men, Politzer and Clew, live on the island, and were they electors there?—A. Yes, sir. Politzer was there temporarily; his home is in Beaufort.

Q. Do you know whether he was at Hilton Head on the day of the election in any official capacity?—A. No, sir.

Q. You called upon McFall at Drayton's place after this complaint had been made about him?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State what was said between you?—A. He told me about his trouble. He said he had been driven from the polls. I asked him to come over to the polls with me, that I would protect him; that I would see that he was protected. He said that he was a prisoner there until six o'clock. I assured him if he would come with me he should not be hurt, but advised him not to bring any red tickets with him to distribute. He then told me about the red tickets, but stated that he gave them out as democratic tickets; that he gave one to a man on Pope's plantation. I have forgotten his name. I told him then that those red tickets had caused his trouble; that several of the electors had come to me with those tickets, stating that they had got them from him, and that he had represented them to be republican tickets, and that they were very indignant on that account about it.

Q. What did he say to that?—A. He still claimed that he didn't represent them as republican tickets. About an hour before sundown, I should think, Mr. McIntyre drove over there with his buggy. Mr. McFall came out with him.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did you see that over at Drayton's house?—A. Yes, sir, and rode with him over to the polls. He stopped a short time at the polls, and rode with Mr. McIntyre over to his place, about a mile from the polls. There was nothing particular said after that.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Were the colored people still there?—A. They were there, but not a very large number.

Q. Did anything occur when he appeared there?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did he get out of the buggy?—A. I am not certain whether he did or not. He had a conversation with several colored people there at the time when he rode up there.

Q. You have stated the printing on this red ballot in form. Will you state whether it looked like the regular republican ballot?—A. It was exactly like the regular republican ticket.

Q. Did it have the device on the back, the eagle?—A. No, sir; at the head of the ticket.

Q. Is there not an eagle on the back of the republican ticket?—A. No, sir.

Q. The back was what, plain white?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. It had an eagle at the top, then, just the same?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The heading was the same as the republican ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember whether there was any of these ballots found in the box?—A. There was one or two. There was one certain, and my impression is that there was two. I wouldn't be positive.

Q. Ballots of the kind you have described?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You saw it, did you, in the ballot-box?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The same kind of ballot that was shown you by the man who first came to you?—A. Yes, sir; the same kind of a ballot.

Q. What is the occupation, the principal business, of the residents of that island?—A. Farmers, sir.

Q. What do they raise?—A. Cotton, corn, pease, potatoes, and rice.

Q. Sea-island cotton?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The colored population of the island, how do they live; do they own or rent land, or are they hired men?—A. Very few of them own land; most of them hire.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Where did you live before you went to Hilton Head?—A. Shelburne Falls, Mass.

Q. What year did you come to Hilton Head?—A. In 1864.

Q. That place was then occupied by the Federal forces, was it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have lived there ever since?—A. I have except three or four years; three years I was in Beaufort.

Q. What business were you engaged in at Hilton Head when you first went there?—A. Planting.

Q. Have you been planting ever since?—A. Yes, sir; with the exception of those three years.

Q. What were you engaged in those three years you were at Beaufort?—A. I was treasurer of the county for two years.

Q. What were you doing the third year?—A. Manufacturing brick.

Q. You say you are treasurer now?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When were you appointed?—A. I was appointed about three weeks ago.

Q. By whom were you appointed?—A. By Mr. Chamberlain. I don't recollect the date.

Q. How many white men were at that poll at Mitchellville when you got there?—A. I don't recollect now. I should think there was five or six. There may not have been so many as that. There was Politzer, Drayton, and Riley.

Q. Drayton was one of the managers, was he not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Riley and Politzer, and who else?—A. And Mr. Clem. I am not positive whether Seabrook was there at the time or not. He was there during the day. I don't recollect him.

Q. When you got there there were only three or four white men there, including Drayton, one of the managers?—A. There was Mr. Fuller, the clerk of the board of managers.

Q. Was that all?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What other white men did you see there during the day besides those?—A. There was Mr. Valentine Hoyt, I believe, was there; Seabrook was there, and Mr. McIntire.

Q. Were they the only ones that were there during the day that you saw?—A. I don't recollect of seeing others there.

Q. There were some nine or ten democratic votes polled there you say?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know how these white men voted?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know what were their politics?—A. There was Mr. Valentine; there was another man—I forgot to call his name—Mr. Brown, he voted the republican ticket, I believe, and Mr. Valentine, and Mr. Hoyt, if he voted; I think he was there. I think he told me since he voted the republican ticket, and Mr. Seabrook.

By Mr. EDEN:

Q. Did Seabrook vote the republican ticket?—A. That is what he told me. I couldn't swear to it.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. What was the recognized politics of the white men that were there?—A. There was part democrats and part republicans.

Q. How many of them were democrats?—A. Well, it would be hard for me to say. I should think there were eight or nine white democrats there; there may have been ten. I couldn't say positively, but I should judge there was eight or nine democrats.

Q. And there were nine or ten democratic votes polled there that day?—A. There was ten.

Q. What was the vote between Chamberlain and Green at that poll two years ago?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Have you any recollection about it?—A. No, sir; I have no recollection of it, sir.

Q. Didn't Green carry that poll two years ago?—A. No, sir, I think not. I wouldn't be positive. I couldn't state as to that.

Q. What attracted your attention to Mr. Politzer when you rode up there?—A. The noise and confusion.

Q. How many people were around him when you rode up?—A. There must have been as many as forty, I should think; that is, right around there.

Q. That, you say, was occasioned by this man Lightburn claiming the right to vote there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did that man Lightburn stay?—A. He runs a boat; stays on his boat most of the time.

Q. What sort of a boat?—A. A small boat.

Q. What business is that boat engaged in?—A. Running between Hilton Head and Beaufort and Savannah—anything he can pick up to do.

Q. Is it a private boat?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say that he belonged to the Navy?—A. Yes, sir, I said he had belonged to the Navy.

Q. Was he not engaged in keeping the light-house there—in the light-house service?—A. No, sir.

Q. How do you know he had belonged to the Navy?—A. He told me so a great many times.

Q. How long had he been in the Navy?—A. About six months, I think; I wouldn't be positive.

Q. Where had he been living during those six months?—A. I don't know. He had been in Beaufort, I think.

- Q. Had he not been at Hilton Head, or about Beaufort, before those six months?—
 A. No, sir, I think not; not that I know of.
- Q. Lightburn claimed that he had a right to vote, didn't he?—A. Politzer claimed for him that he had a right to vote.
- Q. You say that you read the law?—A. I did.
- Q. What were you doing with the law?—A. I was reading it to the people.
- Q. What were you doing with the law with regard to the qualification of electors there that day; in what form did you have it?—A. I had it in printed form; in the form that it was sent out to the managers for the purpose of governing the election.
- Q. Were you a manager?—A. I was not. As one of the commissioners of election I had one of the printed forms.
- Q. You were also a county commissioner of election for that county?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. When were you appointed county commissioner?—A. About three weeks before the election.
- Q. What became of Mr. Politzer after this occurrence with regard to the right of this man to vote?—A. He staid around there for a while, and then went home.
- Q. How long did he stay?—A. I couldn't say.
- Q. Did he not go off immediately after that?—A. Not immediately, but soon after, I think.
- Q. How soon after? Was it not a few minutes?—A. Well, it might have been half an hour.
- Q. Did you see him there half an hour after that?—A. I can't say I did.
- Q. What is your best judgment about it?—A. I should judge it was nearly half an hour before he went away.
- Q. What time of day was that?—A. It was about eleven o'clock.
- Q. He didn't return any more?—A. I didn't see him there again. I met him over at Mr. McIntyre's. I went over to McIntyre's to dine that day, and I met him over there about one o'clock.
- Q. Was Mr. McIntyre with him?—A. Not at the polls.
- Q. Was McIntyre at home?—A. Yes sir.
- Q. What time of day did you see McIntyre at the polls?—A. About four o'clock in the afternoon; at the time he had come with McFall. He had voted before that. I was not there at the time he voted.
- Q. McIntyre had voted in the morning?—A. Yes, sir; so he informed me.
- Q. And had gone away?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And when you next saw him he had McFall in his buggy, taking him over to his house?—A. I went with him over to McFall's.
- Q. Where did you meet McIntyre?—A. Over at his store.
- Q. Did you go to his store to go with him to McFall's?—A. Yes, sir, I did.
- Q. How came you to do that?—A. Well, I thought I didn't like to see the man shut up.
- Q. And McIntyre had invited him over to dine with him and he was not there to dinner?—A. No, sir; he was not there to dinner.
- Q. Was the arrangement made at dinner for you and McIntyre to go there after him?—A. Mr. McIntyre spoke of going over there after dinner, and I told him I would ride over with him.
- Q. McIntyre told you he would go over there and see about McFall, did he not?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And you said you would go with him?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. If I understand you, when you got to the polls McFall was not there?—A. He was not there; no, sir.
- Q. This affair with him had occurred before you got there?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And you didn't see him?—A. No, sir.
- Q. What time did you go over to see McFall?—A. I can't state. I think it was about noon, though.
- Q. Did you go over there before you went to McIntyre's to dinner?—A. I believe I did.
- Q. What is your recollection about that; did you go there before or after dinner?—
 A. I wouldn't be positive, but I think I went there before dinner. I am not certain.
- Q. Did you tell McIntyre when you saw him what had occurred between you and McFall?—A. I told him I had been there.
- Q. My question is whether you told him what had occurred between you and McFall.—A. I think not.
- Q. You didn't tell him this conversation you have detailed here?—A. No, sir, I think not.
- Q. What is your recollection about it? Don't you know whether you did or not?—
 A. I am very sure I did not, because there were a great many present at the time.
- Q. How came you to go there to see McFall?—A. To see the condition he was in, and for the purpose of having him come out to the polls, and I assured him there was no danger in his coming.

Q. Where was he when you went over there?—A. He was in Mr. Drayton's house.

Q. Who was there?—A. No one but myself.

Q. And he voluntarily told you that a colored man had voted one of these red democratic tickets?—A. He did.

Q. Did he give you the name of the colored man?—A. He did.

Q. What was his name?—A. I don't remember his name. It is a man that lives on the Pope plantation, but I can't recollect his name.

Q. Who was present at this conversation between you and McFall?—A. No one was there at the time.

Q. McFall voluntarily told you, without any suggestion from you, about having given this colored man a red ticket?—A. What occasioned him to state that fact was, when I told him of what this colored man, who voted the democratic ticket had said—had told the people—he (McFall) stated that at the time the colored people had said there should no colored man vote the democratic ticket, and that this man come up before the crowd and said, "I did vote the democrat ticket, and I am not ashamed to own it." I can't recollect now whether it was after dinner I went over to McFall's or not.

Q. Didn't McIntyre request you to go over there to see him?—A. I don't know whether he requested me to, but I told him I would go over.

Q. Did McFall tell you how they had treated him there at the polls?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he tell you?—A. He said the women had drove him over to this house.

Q. Did he say anything about the men getting after him?—A. No, sir.

Q. He didn't say anything about the men getting after him?—A. He said the men set the women on.

Q. Did he not say the men had followed him over there to Drayton's house, and about his being locked up in some out-house?—A. He told me about being locked up in the barn, but I think he told me that it was the women that followed him over there. I am very sure that he told me that it was the women that followed him over to the house.

Q. No men with them?—A. I think not; I would not be positive as to that.

Q. How long before the polls closed was it that Mr. McIntyre came up there with McFall in his buggy?—A. About two hours, I should think.

Q. The road from Drayton's to McIntyre's house led to the polls, did it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they get out of the buggy?—A. I think not.

Q. And McIntyre took him over to his house, did he?—A. He did.

Q. Where is McIntyre now?—A. He is at Hilton Head.

Q. Was not McIntyre shot after that election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know where he was shot, at what place?—A. In his store.

Q. How far is his store from that poll?—A. About a mile.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. You are only stating, I suppose, what you heard?—A. That is all, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. You have seen McIntyre since he was shot, have you not?—A. Yes, sir; I have seen him since.

Q. Where was he when you saw him?—A. At his store.

Q. When did you see him there?—A. Two or three weeks ago.

Q. Since he was shot?—A. Yes, sir, since he was reported to have been shot.

Q. What was he doing there?—A. He keeps a store.

Q. Was he keeping store when you saw him?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Since he was shot?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he not laid up with his wound?—A. He was not wounded at all.

Q. Where was he struck?—A. The shot passed through his coat and just grazed the shoulder. It didn't break the skin.

Q. How many shots passed through his clothing?—A. Only one.

Q. At what place was he when he was shot?—A. In his store.

Q. Was it in the daytime or at night?—A. In the evening. I am stating to you what he stated to me. I was not there at the time. He has stated to me it was in the evening, about between seven and eight o'clock, I think.

Q. Has he remained at his store ever since he was shot?—A. Most of the time.

Q. Don't you know that he left his store and went off after that?—A. Yes, sir, he went to Savannah.

Q. How long did he stay there?—A. I don't know; less than a week, I think.

Q. Did he return to his store then?—A. I have not been on the island since I met him in Beaufort.

Q. Don't you know he is in Beaufort now, or Hilton Head?—A. No, sir; he took the steamer for Hilton Head last week, Wednesday or Thursday.

Q. From Beaufort?—A. Yes, sir; he came from Savannah. He was on his way home from Savannah.

Q. Is it not the fact that after he was shot he went to Savannah and came back to Beaufort, and returned to his home last week?—A. It was some time after he was shot that he went to Savannah.

Q. How long after he was shot?—A. I can't tell.

Q. You heard of the occurrence?—A. Yes, sir; but I cannot state the time. I was away at the time this occurred; but I met Mr. McIntyre a few days after this occurrence at home. It was the next week, I think, after he was shot, that he went to Savannah; about a week after—it might have been more—and was in Savannah less than a week, and returned to Beaufort to take the steamer to go to Hilton Head. That is the way he usually goes. He often goes to Savannah to purchase goods.

Q. Do you state here that this time was the occasion of his going to Savannah to purchase goods?—A. I couldn't say positively.

Q. Have you any information about it at all upon which to predicate any opinion?—A. I know he has purchased goods. I have seen his clerk while he was away, a few days after he went to Savannah, and he told me about receiving goods from Savannah that Mr. McIntyre had bought, and also spoke to me about certain goods he had purchased. I never heard him say, or his clerk say, that it was on account of this shooting affair that he left there.

Q. How long after you got on the ground was it that this colored man came to you with this bogus ticket?—A. It was soon after; as soon as that disturbance with the sailor and Mr. Politzer was quieted.

Q. How many of those bogus tickets did you see?—A. Well, there was quite a batch of them. There was fifty or a hundred, I should think.

Q. Who had them?—A. Quite a number of people had them. Mr. Graves had the largest lot.

Q. Who is he?—A. He was distributing republican ballots.

Q. Was he a colored man?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many of these tickets did he have?—A. He might have had twenty-five.

Q. Can he read?—A. He can; yes, sir.

Q. And he was distributing this batch that you saw?—A. No, sir; he was distributing republican tickets.

Q. He was the man that had this batch of democratic tickets?—A. I didn't see those until after the polls had closed. When McFall was going home I was told that he threw away his tickets, and some of the colored men picked them up, and Graves was in the room while the managers were canvassing the ballots, and he took out a batch of perhaps 20.

Q. Then you didn't see those tickets during the day at all?—A. No, sir; no batches of them.

Q. How many tickets of that sort did you see on the ground there that day?—A. I saw but very few.

Q. How were those republican tickets gotten up?—A. They were gotten up with an eagle at the top.

Q. And printed in red ink?—A. Yes, sir; printed in red ink.

Q. You could see the color of the ticket through the back of the ticket when it was folded up?—A. I believe so.

Q. Don't you know that you could?—A. Yes, sir; I am very sure you could, but I couldn't swear to it.

Q. Didn't McFall tell you that the reason why those democratic tickets were printed in that way was because the colored men who wanted to vote the democratic ticket were afraid to let it be known to the colored republicans?—A. No, sir.

Q. He did not say that to you?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did he make any explanation to you at all about having those tickets printed in that way?—A. I don't think he made any explanation.

Q. You do not think he made any explanation at all?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you have much conversation with him?—A. Not a great deal, sir. He only stated to me that he told the people to whom he gave the tickets that they were democratic tickets.

Q. He told you that he stated to parties when he handed them these tickets that they were democratic tickets?—A. That is what he said.

Q. When you heard on the ground there how McFall had been treated, didn't you consider that he had been treated very badly, and that was the reason which took you over to see him and try to induce him to come back?—A. Well, I thought from what I heard that he had been treated badly, but I thought the excuse was a very good one.

Q. Then why did you go over there to try to induce him to come back?—A. I told the people that I was going to have McFall come back there, and I wanted that they should treat him well, and they said to me, "We don't want him here if he is going to deceive us with those red tickets."

Q. When you got there to the polls McFall and McIntyre had gone away, but Politzer was still there?—A. No, sir.

- Q. McFall had gone away, had he not?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. McIntyre was not there, was he?—A. No, sir.
- Q. And Politzer left when you got there?—A. He was there as much as half an hour after I got there.
- Q. You have stated that Politzer left?—A. Yes, sir; after I got there.
- Q. Then what white democrats were left on the ground after that time?—A. Riley was there.
- Q. Was not Riley one of the managers?—A. No, sir.
- Q. What other white democrats were there besides Riley at that time?—A. Mr. Kirke was there. He was there some time after that.
- Q. How long was Mr. Kirke on the ground?—A. I couldn't state.
- Q. Was not Mr. Kirke there but a short time?—A. I couldn't state. Soon after I got there I went into the building where the managers wore; I probably was there half or three-quarters of an hour. I can't state when Mr. Kirke came there or when he went away. I cannot state whether he was there when I went in or not.
- Q. Then you went away to dinner?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. How long were you gone to dinner?—A. I was probably gone two hours.
- Q. How long were you there after you came back, before you went to McFall's?—A. Very soon.
- Q. You went to dinner and were gone two hours, and then went over to see McFall?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. How long did you stay at McFall's when you went over there?—A. I was there probably from half to three-quarters of an hour.
- Q. Then you came back to the polls, did you?—A. Yes, sir. I stopped at the polls before I went over to McFall's.
- Q. Did you stay at the polls after dinner?—A. I don't know, really. It was some time.
- Q. How long; how many minutes?—A. It might have been half an hour.
- Q. Then you went over to McFall's?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And you staid there three-quarters of an hour; then did you return to the polls?—A. I did.
- Q. How long did you stay there before you joined McIntyre to go back to McFall's?—A. I didn't go to McFall's but once. I staid there until McIntyre came. This was after dinner that I went to McFall's.
- Q. You have stated that it was after dinner when you went to McFall's. You were gone two hours to dinner, came back to the polls, staid there probably half an hour, went over to McFall's and staid there three-quarters of an hour?—A. I should judge it might have been that, but I couldn't tell.
- Q. Then it was far in the afternoon when you went over to McFall's?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. When you got back to the polls what time was it?—A. I should judge it was about four o'clock.
- Q. How long did you stay at the polls then before McIntyre came along?—A. I came from Drayton's with McFall and McIntyre.
- Q. Then McIntyre came up to Drayton's while you were there?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Was McIntyre present at any of those conversations between you and McFall?—A. No, sir; because I had been there some little time before McIntyre came. When he came he stopped but a moment. McFall got into his buggy and rode up to the polls, and I rode on behind.
- Q. All three of you then went back to the polls?—A. Yes, sir. I hitched my horse and went into the building, and left them outside in the buggy.
- Q. Then you do not know what occurred at the polls during these times that you were absent?—A. No, sir; I couldn't state what occurred.
- Q. You say it went on peaceably while you were there?—A. It was very quiet when I left for dinner, and quiet when I came back.
- Q. There was nobody there to have any controversy with these people. They had it all their own way, didn't they?—A. I couldn't say.
- Q. There were only two white men left, were there not?—A. There were very few white men there at any time.
- Q. What were those negro women doing at the polls?—A. They were doing nothing while I was there.
- Q. What were they doing at the election?—A. I don't know.
- Q. How many did you see there?—A. Not but a few.
- Q. How many?—A. Really I couldn't state how many, for I didn't count them. They were outside, most of them; out around Mr. Gardner's cotton-house.
- Q. They were around there all day, were they?—A. Not all day.
- Q. When did you miss them?—A. Well, I couldn't say. I think I saw none around there when I came back from dinner, but I couldn't state positively. I paid very little attention.
- Q. When did you come to Charleston?—A. Last evening.
- Q. Did you come direct from Beaufort here?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. You came at the request of the committee, did you not ?—A. Yes, sir. I arrived in Beaufort night before last, and the sheriff told me that he had received a telegram telling me to come down.

Mrs. ELIZABETH SEABROOK sworn and examined.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Question. Where do you live ?—Answer. No. 13 Lyon street, this city.

Q. With whom do you live ?—A. A. P. Ford.

Q. He married your daughter ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you lived here ?—A. The 20th of this coming March will be four years, sir.

Q. What is your age ?—A. Well, I cannot tell rightly, but I think I must be fifty-three or fifty-four—along there.

Q. How long have you lived in this city ?—A. Well, I have been living here a number of years, sir. I lived here with William F. Colcock a long time—all my life.

Q. Were you his slave ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been living with Mr. Ford ?—A. The 20th of March, sir, will make four years.

Q. Is your husband living ?—A. No, sir ; I have no husband.

Q. Do you remember the day of the late election ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you the Saturday night before ?—A. I was at home, sir.

Q. Who else was at home with you ?—A. My daughter, sir ; and Mr. Ford was home, but he had gone to bed ; it was ten o'clock.

Q. Did any one come to the house that night ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who ?—A. Mr. Chors ; Mr. Charles Chors, sir.

Q. About what time ?—A. It was about ten o'clock, sir.

Q. What was the first you heard ?—A. Well, I was in my room, sir, and my daughter she heard a rap to the gate ; and she said she was undressed, and asked me to go to the gate and see who was knocking ; and I went, sir.

Q. Mr. Ford had retired, you say ?—A. Yes, sir ; he was in bed.

Q. You went to the door, did you ?—A. Yes, sir ; I went to the door. Our house sets back in the yard. I went to the gate.

Q. Who was there ?—A. Mr. Chors was at the gate, sir. I wouldn't open the gate, and I asked who it was ; and he said it was Mr. Chors. I asked him if he wished to see any one, and he said he wanted to see Mr. Ford, sir.

Q. What further did he say ?—A. He said he wanted to see him upon some private business. I told him he had gone to bed ; and he said he could go up in his room.

Q. When he said he would go up to his room, what did you do then ?—A. I went back in the house and called Mr. Ford, sir.

Q. Where was Mr. Chors when you went to call Mr. Ford ?—A. He was standing by the gate in the street.

Q. What did Ford say about coming down ?—A. He didn't say anything more to me, sir. He got up and came down.

Q. What did you say about Mr. Chors ?—A. I said he came in, sir.

Q. Came in where ?—A. He came into the yard, sir ; he came to the piazza.

Q. Go on and state what occurred.—A. Mr. Ford came down to him, and he told Mr. Ford he wanted to see him about some business of importance, privately. Then I stepped into the back room, sir. I stepped into the back room when he said he wanted to see him privately.

Q. Where was Mr. Ford and Mr. Chors when you went in ?—A. They went out to the end of the piazza. Whether they went out doors I could not tell. They went out to the end of the piazza, toward the step.

Q. How long were they there ?—A. Well, they was not there very long. I suppose about ten or fifteen minutes, as near as I can guess.

Q. During that time you went in the house, you say ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hear any of the conversation ?—A. No, sir ; I did not hear any of the conversation.

Q. Where did Ford go then ?—A. After Mr. Chors went he went back up-stairs to his room.

Q. Did you see him ?—A. Yes, sir ; I did see him after Mr. Chors went.

Q. Did he tell you what Mr. Chors had said to him ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. He told you what conversation he had with Mr. Chors ?—A. I do not know whether he told me all or not.

Q. Did he tell you as soon as he came into the house ?—A. Yes, sir ; we both went up-stairs together, and he went to his room. I didn't set down to talk to him at that time of night—merely going up, he said what Mr. Chors said.

Mr. LAPHAM. Now, I propose to show what Mr. Ford said to the witness immediately upon coming into the house, about the interview he had had with Mr. Chors.

(Offer overruled.)

Q. What do you say Chors said to you he wanted to see Ford about?—A. Something very important.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. When you went up to tell Mr. Ford that Chors wished to see him, you left Mr. Chors standing in the street at the gate?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when you went up to tell Mr. Ford, he was in bed?—A. Yes, sir; he was in bed.

Q. Was his wife up there in the room with him?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You came down before Mr. Ford dressed?—A. Yes, sir; I came down before he was dressed.

Q. When you came down you went into the back room?—A. No, sir; when I came down I went right out and went to the gate.

Q. And let Chors in?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you went back into the house?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you leave Mr. Chors standing, when you went in?—A. He was standing right close up to the piazza. We has a shelf there, and he was leaning over this way to the shelf.

Q. Which end of the piazza; near the gate?—A. The shelf is midway of the piazza. The house is small.

Q. Did you stand there until Ford came down, or did you leave before he came down?—A. I staid till he came down.

Q. And you went into the back room when he came down?—A. Yes, sir; when Mr. Chors said he wanted to see him on important business, privately, I went in, sir.

Q. How are those rooms situated?—A. Right off the piazza is a back room, and then there is another little door leads into a second little room. The house hasn't but four rooms.

Q. This back room you went into is back of the front room?—A. The house is situated, coming from the street, so, [indicating;] and then there is a little piazza that comes right into the back room.

Q. That little room you went into is at the back end of the piazza?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. There is another room along the piazza, still in front?—A. Yes, sir; and I went into the back room that leads up-stairs, sir.

Q. Then there is a front room?—A. The front room is shut up.

Q. There is no connection between the front room and the back room you went into?—A. No, sir.

Q. The entrance to that front room is not from the piazza?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you went into that back room, Mr. Chors and Ford then went toward the front part of the piazza toward the gate?—A. After a little, sir; not directly. I staid out on the piazza a good considerable while, and Mr. Chors was talking, and then he said he wanted to see him for something important, and then I went out the piazza, and stepped into the door. I stepped right by the door, and stood by the door.

Q. You do not know whether they went into the yard or not?—A. No, sir; or whether they stood at the corner of the piazza.

Q. How far is it from that little room that you stepped into to the end of the piazza toward the gate—toward the front?—A. Twenty feet, I suppose, sir. The house is small.

Q. You do not know whether they went out into the yard or not?—A. No, sir; I cannot tell.

Q. Did you go up-stairs from that back room?—A. I didn't go out of doors at all after Mr. Chors went.

Q. Did you go up stairs from that little room?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you sleep in that room?—A. No, sir; I has my room by myself.

Q. Was that the room you staid in, that little room that you went into?—A. O, no, sir; that was the down-stairs room I am speaking of.

Q. You didn't hear anything that passed between them?—A. No, sir; I didn't hear no conversation at all.

Q. After Mr. Ford came back, did you go up-stairs with him?—A. Yes, sir; we both went up-stairs together. Our rooms are on one floor, sir.

Q. You went up-stairs with him?—A. Yes, sir; we both went up together. He went into his room, and I went into mine.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. Where were you while Ford and Chors were conversing?—A. I was in the back room.

Q. Whereabouts in the room were you?—A. I was no further than a little past the threshold of the door.

Q. Did you stand there?—A. Yes, sir; I stood there.

Q. Was the door closed?—A. No, sir; the door was open.

Q. You stepped in the door, but it still remained open?—A. Yes, sir.

- Q. That door led to the back room?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. How far from the door were you standing?—A. Well, I was not standing no distance. I could see into the piazza.
- Q. Could you see then?—A. Not after they removed and went toward the end of the piazza, I could not see them.
- Q. You waited there until Ford came in?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You say they had some conversation before you went into the door?—A. They were talking, sir.
- Q. Did you hear that?—A. No, sir; I could not think for my life what they were talking about, sir.
- Q. Which of them made this remark you have stated about the conversation being important and private?—A. Mr. Chors, sir.
- Q. That was after they had conversed a little while?—A. After they were talking, he said he came to see Ford on something of importance.
- Q. Did he repeat that after Ford came down?—A. He told me that at the gate.
- Q. Did he repeat any of it after Ford came down, while you were still out there?—A. Yes, sir; he did say so.
- Q. What did he say?—A. He said, "I want to see you on some business of importance privately."
- Q. And upon that you stepped into the door?—A. Yes, sir; then they removed, and I removed.
- Q. Was there not a light in the front room?—A. Yes, sir; Mr. Ford brought the light down with him when he came down, and put it on the table.
- Q. What did he do with the light he brought down?—A. He put it on the table.
- Q. In the front room?—A. In the back room, sir.
- Q. There was no light in the front room?—A. O, no, sir; not in the front room; the front room was shut up.
- Q. This front room does not occupy the whole front of the house?—A. No, sir; we don't open the front room. It is just a little sitting-room we keep privately.
- Q. There is a door from the stoop into the front room, and also a door into what you call the back room?—A. Yes, sir; two doors, and one on the piazza, and one in the back room.
- Q. Does the door you went in at go off the piazza?—A. Yes, sir

THOMAS E. MILLER (colored) sworn and examined.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Question. Where do you reside?—Answer. At present, sir, am occupying a temporary residence at Grahamville, Beaufort County. My permanent residence is Lawtonville, Beaufort County.

Q. When did you change your residence?—A. I changed about July, sir; about the last of July.

Q. Was there any political difficulty that led to that?—A. Well, indirectly there was, sir.

Q. Are you a native of the State?—A. A native, sir.

Q. Were you a slave?—A. Well, in one sense I was. I have never served any one from my grandparents up, but then we came from a slave stock, sir. We had our time.

Q. What is your age?—A. Twenty-seven, sir; I was born in '49.

Q. Where were you educated?—A. I attended school in Pennsylvania, sir; Lincoln University.

Q. How long did you attend school there?—A. I left South Carolina in 1865 and went to New York State, and remained in Hudson about nine months, and returned to South Carolina, and left here in 1867, and was at Lincoln University from March, 1867, until June 19, 1872.

Q. What is your profession?—A. My profession, sir, is a young attorney.

Q. When were you admitted to practice?—A. I was admitted in the winter of 1874-'75, on an examination before the supreme court of this State.

Q. Who were the judges?—A. The judges were Chief-Justice Moses and Associate Justices Wright and Willard.

Q. Have you been practicing law since?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State briefly how you came to take up your temporary residence where you now are?—A. I was practicing law in the upper part of Beaufort County, and was also a prominent republican there. I had a case to defend; a colored man by the name of Mix or Stafford. He lives at Stafford Cross-Roads.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. When did this occur?—A. The latter part of July of this year, sir. His former owner was Stafford. He was indicted for a malicious trespass upon the property of an old money-lender by the name of Nathaniel Ellis.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. Was he a democrat?—A. O, yes, sir. And from his being a money-lender he owns pretty near every poor white man in that section of the country financially. Upon the day of trial he had from twenty to forty white men summoned there, because he knew he had no case at all.

The CHAIRMAN. Confine yourself to statement of facts.

The WITNESS. He had from thirty to forty white men summoned upon the day of trial, armed with revolvers, and some of them with shot-guns. When I got up to address the trial-justice, for I would not have a jury, I denounced the procedure as a malignant persecution.

Q. You claimed that as counsel?—A. Yes, sir, as counsel; and I used the word that it was conceived in fraud, and that I would so prove it before I was through. That is the height of the language I used against the Ellis family. The old man sprung to his feet, with knife in hand, in court, and demanded that I should retreat. I modified my statement, and his son, an ex-trial-justice, whom I had removed for his damnable procedure against the negroes in that section of the country—there is where the political spite comes in—appeared as attorney for his father. He accepted my modification. The old man was kept in his seat by his son, Madcus Ellis, who is now in town here. As soon as a decision was given in favor of my client, I walked out of court, mounted my horse, and started away from the crowd. As I mounted about fifteen white men mounted also, but remained where they had mounted in their saddles. As soon as I got into the road, so I could see before me, I saw five young white men on foot, with clubs in their hands and revolvers in their belts. As I approached them, Jeff Ellis, the son of old Nat Ellis, said to me, "You mulatto son of a bitch, you, stop!" And as he said that, young John Joe Schue-man, jr., who has been killed since in a riot, caught my horse by the rein, and as he caught it, Ellis dealt me a blow along here [indicating] with a spoke out of a Jersey wagon, which felled me from the saddle; and as I fell to the ground—my senses had not yet left me—Ellis repeated the blow. I was picked up, I suppose, for I did not know who did it, by the men, and carried to the trial-justice's house, for when my senses returned I was in his piazza, and was bleeding. Old man Ellis, as soon as I arose upon my feet, said, "It will cost as much for a half-dead nigger as a whole one. Let us kill the nigger son of a bitch, for this is a white man's country, and no damn nigger lawyer shall remain here." As soon as he said that, an elderly white man, by the name of Bill Cuyler Johnston, threw himself in the small gate that led into the flower-garden, and which would give them access to where I was, and said, "For God's sake, men, let us not have another Hamburg affair." Ellis said, "Move, Bill, and let us kill the nigger." Mr. Johnston said, "No, I will not, for the eyes of the nation are now on us; let us act as men." After much persuasion he got the men to retire from the smaller gate out to the large gate into the road. He then came into the piazza and said to me, "Miller, I knew you and all your parents, both white and black, from the days of boyhood," and he said, "Won't you go home and let these Ellises alone?" I told him I would not make any such promise; that I would sue them. Then he said, "Miller, you are excited now, and mad. Won't you defer this matter until Thursday of next week?" That was on Saturday. I told him, "Mr. Johnston, there is no delay with me; I mean what I say." "Well," he says, "you will not go home if you mean it. These men will not allow you to go home alive unless you promise to defer the matter." Then after he told me that I would not be allowed to go home alive unless I postponed the matter and to give him an answer on Thursday, I made him a promise that I would wait until Thursday. Upon Thursday morning, the day promised by me to give an answer, about sixty men, armed with revolvers and shot-guns and pistols, assembled before my door and stacked their guns against a log that laid parallel with my fence. About nine o'clock Mr. Johnston came. They awaited Mr. Johnston's arrival—Bill Cuyler Johnston. He came in a buggy with young Jeff Ellis, the man that dealt the blow upon the Saturday before. I admitted him into my house, and refused to let any other white man come through the gate, but kept the crowd back, and he came in. After a conference of about one hour, I concluded, for my safety as a republican, that I would have to leave that country, and I left and went down to Grahamville, from information coming from democrats themselves, and not from republicans.

The CHAIRMAN. What do you propose to prove?

Mr. LAPHAM. I offer to show the advice that Johnston gave the witness in this interview as an inducement for him to go away.

(Offer overruled.)

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. Who is Mr. Johnston?—A. He is a large farmer, sir; an ex-slaveholder, and a South Carolinian.

Q. Is he a democrat also?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. A friend of the Ellises?—A. A friend of the Ellises; they were boys together.

- Q. You have not lived there since?—A. No, sir; I have not lived there since.
- Q. Had you been active in politics before that time?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. As a republican?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. For how long a time?—A. I entered politics July 7, 1872.
- Q. And have been active from that time up to the present time?—A. Yes, sir; have been in active duty ever since to the party.
- Q. Have you ever been a candidate for office?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Had you before this occurrence been a candidate for office?—A. Yes, sir; a candidate for school-commissioner in 1872.
- Q. Were you elected?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. How long did you serve as school-commissioner?—A. Two years, sir.
- Q. Were you ever a candidate for the legislature?—A. Yes, sir; in 1874.
- Q. Were you elected?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And served how long?—A. Two years, sir.
- Q. Were you a candidate for any office this year?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. What office?—A. The legislature, sir.
- Q. Were you elected?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And are now a member?—A. And am now a member, sir.
- Q. The fact of your having been a school-commissioner was well known to these people, was it not?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Had you been accustomed to address political meetings?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Republican meetings?—A. Republican meetings. In fact, the whole of the up-country has been left to my care—the upper part of Beaufort County.
- Q. Had you ever had any difficulty with Mr. Ellis before that occurrence?—A. No, sir; nothing more than I had his son removed from the position of trial-justice.
- Q. When was that done?—A. I had him removed in the winter of 1874-'75. Allow me to modify that statement; I forced a resignation out of him—
- Q. You applied for his removal and he resigned?—A. Yes, sir; I informed him I would have him removed.
- Q. Which son was that; the son that struck you?—A. No, sir; his name was Ferdinand Ellis—the ex-trial-justice.
- Q. Did Mr. Johnston know of these facts, too?—A. Yes, sir; for he was a candidate for the position that Ferdinand Ellis occupied.
- Q. To succeed him in office?—A. No, sir.
- Q. A republican was appointed?—A. Yes, sir; a republican was appointed by the governor.
- Mr. LAPHAM. I renew my offer to show the advice that Mr. Johnston gave the witness to leave.
- Offer overruled.
- Q. Have you been to Lawtonville since?—A. Yes, sir. When the canvass opened I canvassed the upper portion of the county, and Lawtonville was the first place I spoke. The first meeting I attended in the up-country was Bronson.
- Q. When was that?—A. It was either the latter week in September or the first week in October.
- Q. Was it a republican meeting?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Who were announced to speak there?—A. The speakers announced were Messrs. Bampfield, General Smalls, Senator Green, Thomas H. Wheeler, N. B. Myers, and myself, sir.
- Q. What time was the meeting at Bronson called?—A. The meeting was to take place as soon as the people arrived.
- Q. What hour?—A. Between two and three o'clock.
- Q. How did you go there?—A. I went by way of the railroad, sir. I took the train at Early Branch.
- Q. How far did you go on the cars?—A. I went from Early Branch to Bronson.
- Q. How far is that?—A. A distance of twenty-two miles.
- Q. How far is Bronson from Lawtonville?—A. Bronson is sixteen miles from Lawtonville.
- Q. How far from Lawton Church?—A. Twenty-eight miles, sir.
- Q. Which was your residence; Lawtonville or Lawton Church?—A. My residence was in the vicinity of Lawtonville—not right at the village—in the vicinity of it; about sixteen miles from Bronson. Lawton Church is twelve miles from Lawtonville, and Lawtonville is sixteen miles from Bronson. There is one point I want to refer to. At Early Branch the train coming from Augusta brought two colored men and another man, by the name of Singleton, who informed the speakers that they should return to Beaufort and not come to Bronson that day, for if they did they would be killed.
- Q. You went there?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Was there any interruption of the train on your way?—A. No, sir; no interruption of the train on our way.
- Q. What time did you go there?—A. Between two and three o'clock, the usual hour the train arrives there.

Q. Where did you go?—A. We got off the cars right on the platform, and there was a large crowd of both races there, both white and colored.

Q. How many?—A. I should think the whites were between four and five hundred.

Q. How many colored men?—A. Between two and three hundred. As soon as we got on the ground a committee from the rifle-clubs—the white rifle-clubs—came to the white republican speakers and demanded a part of the time.

Q. What did they say about it?—A. They say we hold no meeting there unless they have the right to alternate with us and close the meeting.

Q. Did they say anything other than that that you remember?—A. Well, during the conversation we refused at first. They said, "Well, unless you do that there will be no meeting." We acquiesced, and went from the depot to the place where we held the republican meetings generally. It was under a few trees. The meeting was organized and a motion was made that peace-officers be appointed, and eight from each political party be appointed. The meeting was organized by us electing a chairman, and the democrats immediately elected their chairman. The motion was made, as I stated, for peace-officers, to be appointed, eight from each political party—sixteen; and upon the motion being put by the democratic chairman, (Mr. Hoover,) Hal Richardson from Allendale, Barnwell County, who had command of the several Barnwell rifle-clubs—

The CHAIRMAN. Did he have those clubs there with him?—A. Yes, sir; his rifle-clubs was there. He rose and said: "Mr. Chairman, I object to any peace-officers being appointed, for, on behalf of the gentlemen from Barnwell County, I state that we will hear speeches if they are not damn radical lies; but if the radical speakers intend to deliver their incendiary harangues, I will not vouch for the peace being kept by the gentlemen from Barnwell." And that statement being made, Mr. Hoover did not put the motion, and no officers were appointed. The meeting was organized. Nathaniel B. Myers was the first speaker on our side. As soon as Myers mounted the stand, some one from the crowd hallooed "time," and Myers ceased to speak; and a white man, I did not know him, said, "These niggers have sticks, and we have left our rifles at the depot." As soon as the announcement was made, the chairman of our party requested the colored men to give their sticks up, and as soon as the command was given by our chairman, a democrat who was sitting down in front of the box where we were speaking threw up his revolver and said, "Damn them sticks; they ain't nothing. Here is plenty of pills that will take care of the mulatto sons of bitches;" and as he did that four or five other white men drew their pistols out and threw them down at their feet.

Q. Inside of the stand?—A. Right in front of the stand; not five feet from it.

Q. How many revolvers were thrown down there?—A. I saw five, sir.

Q. What did they say as they laid them down?—A. They said there was sufficient pills here to satisfy the mulatto sons of bitches. That was the expression of one man. One man spoke and drew his out, and as he drew his out three or four others did the same thing.

Q. Were they revolvers or single-shooters?—A. Revolvers, sir.

Q. What next occurred after that?—A. After that was done everything was quiet.

Q. You say that one republican had spoken, and a man took the stand when this interruption took place?—A. Mr. Myers was on the stand when this interruption took place.

Q. A republican had spoken?—A. Mr. Myers was speaking; he was a republican; and while he was on the stand—

Q. He had not finished yet?—A. No, sir. While he was on the stand a party remarked that these niggers had their clubs there, and he stopped there; and while he stopped our chairman said the colored men should bring their clubs up. After Myers got through speaking, the next was a white man—I forget which democrat it was—and we alternated until we got through; but we were insulted from the time we commenced our meeting until we were through, by the answers "You are a liar," or "That is a damned lie."

Q. There were such expressions used?—A. O, yes, sir; very frequently.

Q. Who was speaking when such remarks were being made?—A. Such remarks were made when I was speaking, and such remarks were made when Mr. Bampfield was speaking.

Q. Do you remember any other expressions?—A. No, sir.

Q. What time did the meeting close?—A. The meeting closed about sunset. Orders was given by the several military companies, as we term them, and the men formed and went to the depot and got their guns.

Q. Did you hear the orders given to fall in?—A. O, yes, sir. I also heard, at the close of the meeting, when Hal Richardson, of Allendale, ordered the officers of two clubs to proceed over to Lawtonville the next day, two of the rifle-clubs.

Q. When you reached there were these men at the depot?—A. They were at the depot.

Q. Had they their arms then?—A. They had their arms then.

Q. Where did they put their arms?—A. They left their arms, some of them, in the depot, and some of them in the stores, sir.

Q. Did you see that yourself?—A. O, yes, sir. I saw them putting their arms in the depot and in the stores.

Q. Where did they leave their horses?—A. The horses were hitched about to the different trees and posts in the neighborhood. Bronson is a place of a few houses, trees growing up indiscriminately, sir. They were mounted during the meeting.

Q. About how many white men were there armed that day?—A. Between 400 and 500, sir.

Q. Were there any colored men acting with them?—A. There was one speaker that they had there, a colored speaker, by the name of Voss.

Q. In the military organization, I mean?—A. No, sir; I saw no colored men at all.

Q. Do you know where those white men were from?—A. The companies that Hal Richardson had under his charge, sir, were from Barnwell, some of them all the way from Blackville, 45 or 50 miles from where the meeting was held.

Q. Was he the commander?—A. He spoke to me, sir, and told me he was commander-in-chief.

Q. Did he assume the command?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far is Bronson from Allendale?—A. Allendale is on the same line of road, about 15 miles from Bronson.

Q. That far from this meeting?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In another county?—A. Yes, sir; Barnwell County.

Q. How is it as to the colored men being armed that day?—A. Some of the colored men had guns.

Q. How many?—A. I saw five guns.

Q. What kind of guns?—A. The ones I saw were the old plantation-muskets and shot-guns. I saw nary rifle on the ground. There was muskets and shot-guns.

Q. Have you stated all that occurred there that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hear anything said there about laborers?—A. Yes, sir. At that meeting you could hear the white men saying if the colored men did not vote the democratic ticket they would discharge them. I heard that. That was general and customary at all the meetings up there. It was the common talk and threats all over the county.

Q. This meeting at Lawtonville the next day, who was that called by?—A. By the republicans, sir; by our county chairman.

Q. Were you advertised to speak there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who else?—A. Mr. Myers, Mr. Bampffield, General Smalls, Senator Green, and others.

Q. It was called by the county chairman of Beaufort County?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What hour was that meeting called for?—A. That meeting was called for twelve o'clock.

Q. Did you go?—A. I went, sir.

Q. How far is Lawtonville from where you now live?—A. My permanent home, do you mean?

Q. Yes.—A. It is just three miles, sir, from my house. When that meeting was called, I was not living there then, I had left. When we got there, sir, we met a large crowd of both races there.

Q. How many of each?—A. Well, sir, I should think there was about between three hundred and four hundred colored men there, and no more than three hundred white men, at the outside, sir.

Q. Were the white men armed?—A. Yes, sir; they all came there armed. The two companies that came over from Bronson left their rifles in the school-house, about a quarter or a half mile from the place where the meeting was called. I saw them putting the guns in there myself, for we traveled the same road.

Q. Were they the same two companies that were at Bronson the day before?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was Richardson with them?—A. Richardson was not with them.

Q. Who was in command of them?—A. I don't know. The party who did command them was a stranger to me, sir.

Q. How far was this school-house from the place of meeting?—A. Between a quarter and a half mile. It was in sight of the meeting though, sir.

Q. Were they mounted or on foot?—A. Mounted, sir. The men that came over from Bronson were all mounted.

Q. Had they any other arms than their guns?—A. Yes, sir; every one of them had their revolvers in their belts, sir. You could see them just as plainly, sir, as if they had—

Q. Were they in sight?—A. Yes, sir, they were in sight.

Q. What occurred there?—A. Nothing, as far as it related to the Bronson meeting. At the Lawtonville meeting, there was no intimidation there by words or by acts—the negroes were in the majority there, we outnumbered them—only as relates to myself.

Q. Was there any division of time called for at that meeting?—A. O, yes, sir; they demanded the division of the time, as usual.

Q. What was said about it?—A. They said if they were not allowed to close, just as they did at Bronson—to close up the meeting and alternate with us—there should be no meeting.

Q. What was said in answer to that?—A. We acquiesced, sir. We allowed them the privilege of alternating and closing.

Q. Who did the democrats have there for speakers?—A. Mr. Larasy, Mr. Warren, and a colored man by the name of Becket. I forget the name of the other speaker.

Q. How did the people assemble? Was the meeting in a building?—A. It was a stand, sir.

Q. How did they assemble about the stand?—A. The whites came up on one side, without their rifles—all of them with their revolvers—and the negroes on the other side of the stand.

Q. Mounted or unmounted?—A. Unmounted.

Q. Was there any interruption of the speakers at that meeting?—A. No interruption, as far as related to the speakers.

Q. Were there any of those epithets used that you have spoken of as being used at Bronson the day before?—A. No, sir; no epithets at all. The only thing that was said there that was likely to create a row was by this colored democratic speaker. He referred to the negroes being base hirelings of the republicans, and that he would be glad if the whites would carry out their threats and discharge every one of them who would vote the republican ticket.

Q. He said that in his speech?—A. Yes, sir. He said he, for one, would hail it with joy to see such treatment. He said that the Millers, and the Myerses, and the Bampfields would tell them that they would not discharge them for voting the republican ticket, and he, for one, would hail it with joy when they did do it.

Q. When it came your turn to speak, what occurred?—A. When it came to my turn, Mr. Myers came to me—

Q. Who is Myers?—A. N. B. Myers, a republican, came to me and requested that I should not speak, and I asked him for his reason, and he said what he had gotten he had obtained from a friend. He said he did not wish to implicate any one, but he deemed it unsafe for me to speak.

Q. How near was this to where the Ellis's lived?—A. About ten miles.

Q. Do you know whether Ellis or any of his family were there?—A. O, yes, sir; the young man, Subnard, who had caught my horse, was there. All the white men who were there at my house, who sought the compromise, the same class of people, but no member of Ellis's family came there; but the crowd of men who were at my house on the day that the compromise was sought, was there.

Q. Did you speak or not?—A. I closed the meeting, sir; that is, I closed it on the part of the republicans.

Q. You did address the meeting, then?—A. Yes, sir; but my remarks did not at all relate to politics; it was just to my going away. My speech was devoted to explaining why I was leaving the country and for what cause I was leaving. I avoided speaking concerning politics.

Q. Where did these mounted men go after the meeting closed?—A. After the meeting closed, the ones that came from the Bronson side went homeward, and the others that lived around there in the vicinity dispersed.

Q. Did they get their arms and mount their horses?—A. The Bronson men did; they went off in a body.

Q. Why do you call them the Bronson men?—A. They came from Bronson.

Q. They didn't live there?—A. I could not tell as to where they lived.

Q. I thought you said it was a part of Barnwell County?—A. I don't know whether they were Bronson men or Lawtonville men; I don't live there.

Q. They formed and went back toward Bronson?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. With their arms?—A. With their arms.

Q. Was there anything said about discharging laborers, except what this colored man said?—A. Nothing from the speakers, but just in conversation.

Q. Were there any threats by white men there, that you heard that day?—A. Yes, sir; I heard farmers say right there that if the colored people persisted in voting the republican ticket that they would have to discharge them.

Q. That was talked openly there that day?—A. That was talked openly there that day, and not only there, but at the meetings generally, the conversations among the whites would be concerning discharging laborers if they voted the republican ticket.

Q. Are you the owner of land where you are living temporarily?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How much do you own there?—A. Well, sir, about eight hundred acres. Where I am living now, I own that property. I leased the property I lived on at Lawtonville.

Q. Do you work it or rent it?—A. I rent it, sir.

Q. Do you know personally of any men who have been discharged since the election?—A. There are about four families on my place, sir, who come down from the up country. I have not seen them personally.

Q. You only know the fact that persons came there?—A. Yes, sir; I don't know of any one being discharged, personally.

Q. And you don't know where they came from?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know that they have come there since the election?—A. Yes, sir; that fact I know.

Q. How many families?—A. About four families. They are on lands that I have under my control for renting.

Q. Colored men?—A. Colored men, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. It was in 1872 that you got back from the North to Lawtonville?—A. No, sir; not to Lawtonville, to Beaufort County.

Q. Where did you stop when you went back to Beaufort County, in 1872?—A. My stopping-place there was at Grahamville with my folks, when I first came back.

Q. That is where you are now?—A. Yes, sir; all my old folks live there.

Q. Grahamville is the place where your relatives live?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And where you own land?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you owned that land at Grahamville?—A. The first parcel of land I bought in 1873, sir.

Q. You own no land at all over at Lawtonville?—A. No, sir.

Q. When living there, you lived on rented land?—A. Yes, sir; I leased the land lived on there.

Q. When did you go to Lawtonville?—A. I went to Lawtonville in March, 1873, sir.

Q. And called that your home up to this last July?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In 1872 how old were you?—A. I was twenty-three, sir; I was born in 1849.

Q. What time in 1872 did you get back from the North?—A. In June.

Q. How long after you came back before you became a candidate for the legislature?—A. Two years, sir.

Q. You didn't run for the legislature, then, till 1874?—A. Not till 1874.

Q. And you became a candidate for school commissioner in 1872?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was elected that year?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you reside during the time you held that office?—A. I resided the first year I was in my office in Grahamville. The latter part of my administration as school commissioner I lived at Lawton.

Q. Then toward the close of your official term as commissioner, you located on this place, near Lawtonville?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then became a candidate for the legislature at the next canvass?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You participated in that canvass, and was elected to the legislature?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you ran for the legislature this year?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And are now a member of what is known as the Mackey house?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that you have been in political life, in fact, and holding office ever since you returned from your trip North?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have been quite active in politics in that county, haven't you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time this year were you nominated as a candidate for the legislature?—A. In October.

Q. Then at the time of this trouble that you had with the Ellises, you had not been nominated for the legislature?—A. No, sir; but was a member.

Q. When did the legislature adjourn—the legislature of 1874?—A. The legislature of 1874 adjourned in April or March, I have forgotten which; but the constitution of our—

Q. I understand what your constitution is. Your legislature adjourned sine die in March or April, didn't it?—A. Yes, sir; April.

Q. You could have been re-assembled on the call of the governor, I suppose?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then when you had this trouble with the Ellises, you were not a candidate for the legislature at that time?—A. O, yes, sir; I was a candidate but not in nomination.

Q. You were a continuing candidate?—A. No, sir; I had begun to stump the county in my behalf in that parish.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Was that before this disturbance?—A. O, yes, sir; I had three meetings before this disturbance.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Then your candidacy has been a continual thing for three years. You have stated here that prior to this time you had no difficulty with the Ellises?—A. No, sir; no words of falling out other than I stated that I forced the son of the family to resign from the position of trial-justice.

- Q. You never had any personal difficulty with old man Ellis?—A. Not a bit, sir.
- Q. Your personal relations to him prior to that had been kindly and courteous, had they not?—A. Yes, sir; courteous and kindly.
- Q. Which of the sons was it that was trial-justice?—A. Ferdinand.
- Q. Is that the one that testified here yesterday?—A. No, sir; not him.
- Q. Who appointed him trial-justice?—A. He was appointed the first time—now, I am not certain about this, but I will tell you, he was appointed, I think, by Governor Scott.
- Q. When?—A. I don't know the date of his appointment. I met him in office when I was elected school commissioner.
- Q. And he was re-appointed trial-justice by Governor Chamberlain?—A. No, sir.
- Q. By whom was he re-appointed?—A. By Governor Moses.
- Q. Then he held the office under two administrations?—A. I met him a trial-justice when I was elected school commissioner. How long he had been before I don't know. The trial-justice position is for one year, or subject to removal by the governor. Whether Ellis was a trial-justice three, four, or two years, I don't know, but he has been trial-justice up in that up country a long while.
- Q. When did you have him displaced as trial-justice?—A. In the winter of 1874-'75.
- Q. In the winter of '74 and '75 he was removed from the position of trial-justice upon your application to the governor?—A. He resigned.
- Q. You made application to have him removed?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And he resigned?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Who was appointed trial-justice in his place?—A. Frank Mulligan.
- Q. Was he appointed upon your solicitation?—A. Yes, sir; it was my appointment.
- Q. This trial that you speak of between old man Ellis and this client of yours was before what justice?—A. Before Mr. Mulligan.
- Q. This gentleman whom you had appointed?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. What was the charge against this man that Ellis had arraigned?—A. A malicious trespass.
- Q. A malicious trespass upon his property?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And you were employed to defend him?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And this row that occurred there was in consequence of reflections in your speech upon old man Ellis?—A. I said nothing that the old man—
- Q. Was it in consequence of what you stated in your speech that brought it on?—A. That is what they claim.
- Q. You have stated here in your testimony to-day that old man Ellis was a money-lender, and that he oppressed the people, and that he had mortgages upon property, and all that sort of thing.—A. I don't think I used the word oppressing at all.
- Q. What was your language?—A. I said, sir, that Ellis was a money-lender, and by being a money-lender he owned the people financially.
- Q. Was that the language which you used this morning?—A. I think so, sir.
- Q. You put it mildly, did you?—A. No, sir; I didn't put it mildly; I put it strong.
- Q. Then you had a good deal of feeling and prejudice against Ellis, didn't you?—A. O, no, sir; what do you mean by the word strong, sir?
- Q. The way you testified this morning I considered it strong both as to manner and matter, exhibiting a great deal of feeling and spite. Now you stated here this morning that old man Ellis was a money-lender, and that he had mortgages upon the property of most everybody, did you not?—A. Right in this immediate neighborhood.
- Q. You entertained some prejudice against him on that account?—A. No, sir; I didn't.
- Q. Then why did you comment upon him in your testimony this morning?—A. To let you know what influence he had upon the poor whites; that he could have any man killed that he wanted.
- Q. Then you state here in your testimony that, on account of his moneyed influence over the poor whites in his neighborhood, he could have any man killed he wanted to?—A. Yes, sir; I have stated that publicly; I have stated it in his presence and in the presence of his children. Since this row I have stated that publicly.
- Q. Then, in your speech made that day in the case of malicious trespass, you exhibited a good deal of feeling, did you not?—A. No, sir; I did not.
- Q. What was the language you said you used?—A. I denounced it as a malignant persecution. That was the language I used.
- Q. Is that all you said?—A. Concealed in fraud, and I would prove it by reviewing the testimony.
- Q. A malignant persecution, concealed in fraud; and that party was arrested upon the affidavit of Mr. Ellis?—A. Upon the affidavit of his son.
- Q. What was his name?—A. They call him Pink.
- Q. What was his name?—A. I don't remember his name now, sir.
- Q. Was he the one that assaulted you afterwards?—A. No, sir; for he is a minor. He is a young boy. The one that assaulted me is Jeff. Ellis.
- Q. An older brother of this boy?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long after you quit speaking was it he assaulted you?—A. About half an hour.

Q. You say you didn't call for a jury, but tried the case before this justice, Mulligan?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you had your man acquitted?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And after that this difficulty occurred?—A. The difficulty started while I was speaking.

Q. Started at the time you used this language about the old man Ellis?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who started it?—A. The old man sprung up. I didn't use the words against him, because he was not the party suing. I used it against the party prosecuting—his son; and whatever I could have said in my argument, anything of that kind, was not against the old man.

Q. He was sitting there, and was in fact the real prosecutor, was he not?—A. There is where the fraud comes in.

Q. Was it not his property upon which the alleged trespass was committed?—A. It was not his property, sir.

Q. Did he not prove it to be his property?—A. It was proved to be otherwise.

Q. Did he not claim to own the property?—A. No, sir; he didn't.

Q. Who did claim to own it?—A. His son-in-law claimed to be the owner of it.

Q. Was this allegation of malicious trespass, or whatever it was, asserted to be on the property of old man Ellis?—A. No, sir; it was asserted to be the property of one Coosaw, the son-in-law of Ellis.

Q. Upon real estate, was it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in your speech you characterized the prosecution as you have stated?—A. Yes, sir; as I have stated.

Q. And thereupon old man Ellis sprung to his feet and took umbrage at your remarks?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you proceed then in your speech?—A. I stopped immediately, and I said to the elder brother, who was the counsel, "What I have said, sir, I mean it as no disrespect. I will prove this a malignant persecution by reviewing the testimony."

Q. You finished your speech?—A. Yes, sir; argued the case.

Q. Argued the case fully?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was after this that this difficulty outside occurred?—A. The second difficulty—yes, sir.

Q. When you were starting home, which one of the Ellises was it that struck you?—A. Jeff. Ellis.

Q. An older brother of this young Ellis?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And all this testimony that you have given here about what was said and done there upon that occasion was the result of what occurred on the trial there that day?—A. No; I couldn't say that—

Q. You had no difficulty with the Ellises before?—A. But here is the language of the old man afterward, "That a half-dead nigger would cost as much as a whole dead one."

Q. I have not asked you for what was the language of the old man. I asked you a question which you can understand, and which you can answer if you want to. I asked you if the difficulty which you have detailed here in your examination-in-chief followed immediately after that trial?—A. Yes, sir; it did.

Q. When you left there you returned to this place, Grahamville, where you came from, and where your folks were living, and where you owned property?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say that in that mêlée at the trial a man by the name of Schuman struck you?—A. Stopped my horse by the bridle.

Q. He didn't strike you?—A. No, sir; I don't know for certain that he struck me.

Q. What was Schuman's first name?—A. His name is John Joe Schuman.

Q. He has since been killed in that county, has he not?—A. Yes, sir; he is the same man.

Q. You say there was another man there by the name of Deloache that day.—A. I don't remember his being there that day. I don't remember seeing him.

Q. Was Johnson there that day?—A. Johnson was there.

Q. What is his name?—A. His name is J. D. Johnson.

Q. Is he the constable?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. This man Johnson, who was with the party that came to your house on the Thursday morning you have mentioned, what was his name?—A. His name is William Cuyler Johnston. There is a difference between his name and the constable. There is a "t" in his name, and the constable spells his name without the "t."

Q. Are they related?—A. That is more than I know.

Q. When asked to-day who he was, you stated, "He is an ex-slave-holder and a South Carolinian."—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why do you designate him as an ex-slave-holder and a South Carolinian?—A. Because there were South Carolinians who never owned slaves.

Q. Was that the reason you designated him a South Carolinian when you were asked who Johnston was?—A. Not that I entertain anything against Mr. Johnston at all. I will give you the distinction—

Q. When you were asked, in your examination-in-chief, who Mr. Johnston was, your answer was, "He is an ex-slave-holder and a South Carolinian."—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why did you style him in that way?—A. To distinguish him from the poor whites.

Q. Did his being a South Carolinian tend to distinguish him from the poor whites?—A. Being an ex-slave-holder distinguishes him from the poor whites.

Q. That is not my question. Did his being a South Carolinian tend to distinguish him from the poor whites?—A. If it did I would not have made the other qualification.

Q. Then you used it simply to distinguish him from the poor whites?—A. I did, sir.

Q. And his being an ex-slave-holder and a South Carolinian, that is all you meant by it?—A. That is all I meant by it.

Q. If you were asked, for instance, who Mr. Smith, in your county, is, you would consider it a description of him and an answer to the question to say that he was an ex-slave-holder and a South Carolinian?—A. I would.

Q. You would use, then, that sort of description to individualize a citizen and to give the people to understand who he was?—A. Do you want an answer to that, sir?

Q. Yes.—A. It would depend a great deal upon circumstances what my answer would be in describing a citizen.

Q. Then you meant, by this sort of answer, to give a particular character to Mr. Johnston, did you?—A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Would it not have been sufficient to distinguish him simply by saying he was an ex-slave-holder?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then why did you add the term South Carolinian?—A. O, now, I don't know why I added the term. To have said he was an ex-slave-holder would have carried the idea that he was a South Carolinian. But, then, there are ex-slave-holders who are not South Carolinians. There are ex-slave-holders who come here from Georgia.

Q. Did you not use that term in order to stigmatize Mr. Johnston?—A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Why did you speak, then, with so much emphasis and force?—A. I don't know that I emphasized. Mr. Johnston and myself have been on the most friendly relations from the day I returned from school up to the present time.

Q. In your political speeches you have been pretty violent, haven't you?—A. No, sir; not in my speeches, I have not.

Q. Have you in your private conversation?—A. I have been violent in one speech that I have made in Beaufort County, in this canvass.

Q. When and where was that?—A. That was at Kilsonville.

Q. When was that?—A. That was after my trouble with the Ellises.

Q. How far is that from the neighborhood of this trial-justice's, at Lawtonville?—A. About twelve miles.

Q. When was that?—A. In the early part of the campaign.

Q. But after your trouble with the Ellises?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Haven't you been right denunciatory in your speeches against the whites?—A. No, sir; I have not.

Q. Have you not stated in your public speeches that you wished you could open your veins and let out the white blood that was in you?—A. Whoever told you that told you a lie.

Q. I ask you if it was not the fact?—A. No, sir.

Q. You never did state it?—A. No, sir.

Q. Publicly or privately?—A. No, sir; I can tell you what I did state. I said that the white blood that was in me, I didn't consider it was any honor; that it was not gotten through the ties of wedlock, and I considered it a disgrace.

Q. And you didn't state that if you had the power you would open your veins and let out any white blood that was in you?—A. No, sir; I never did.

Q. Did you make an allusion to it in a public speech?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where?—A. At Grahamville, in the up-country.

Q. When?—A. I don't know when. When I had a quarrel with one of my white cousins.

Q. You carried your quarrel with your cousin on to the stump?—A. No, sir; I didn't. The question was asked me by a black man on the stand, didn't I favor the whites more than I did the blacks—if I didn't hold myself above them, and that was the answer to it.

Q. That was when you were canvassing for the legislature?—A. No, sir; it was not.

Q. You were not a candidate for the legislature, then?—A. No, sir; not when I made that statement.

Q. When was that?—A. I don't remember when it was. I remember of making it in Beaufort County.

Q. Did you not state awhile ago that you made it at Grahamville?—A. It was made during the canvass.

Q. You cannot state when it was?—A. No, sir; I cannot remember when it was.

Q. Was it this year?—A. No, sir; it was not this year.

Q. When was it, if it was not this year?—A. I don't remember, sir; it has been a good while ago.

Q. Can't you state the year?—A. No, I don't know when; nor I don't remember the nature of the meeting.

Q. Why can you remember it was at Grahamville, and that the provocation of it was this particular question, and that it was just after you had a quarrel with your cousin, and yet cannot give the year?—A. Because I know I gave my reasons, and that is why I remember the place. The time is a different thing.

Q. Were you living at Grahamville when you made that speech?—A. Yes, sir; I was living at Grahamville then.

Q. Did you not make that statement in this canvass then?—A. So help me God, I did not.

Q. Neither publicly nor privately?—A. Neither publicly nor privately.

Q. Were you not running for any office when you made that speech at Grahamville?—A. No, sir.

Q. How many people were at that meeting?—A. I don't remember.

Q. Whites or blacks?—A. Grahamville is intensely black, sir. The vote there is four to one.

Q. Then they were colored men there at that meeting?—A. There was whites there, too.

Q. Were there many whites?—A. There were a few whites there; there can never be very many whites at Grahamville.

Q. What is the proportion of the black population to the white population in Beaufort County?—A. About as seven to one.

Q. Do you know what the democratic vote in Beaufort County was this year?—A. Two thousand four hundred, I think.

Q. What was the republican vote?—A. A little over seven thousand.

Q. The republican majority then was about five thousand?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. This place, Bronson, where you had the meeting, the colored people are in the majority there, are they not?—A. Yes, sir; naturally larger.

Q. Why naturally larger?—A. At Bronson the colored population is naturally larger than the white.

Q. What is the proportion?—A. About four to three.

Q. What is the proportion at Lawtonville?—A. About four to one.

Q. This meeting at Bronson was held at what time?—A. The latter part of September or the first of October, sir.

Q. These gentlemen that gathered that day to participate in that meeting you say came there as rifle-clubs?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they all have rifles?—A. Yes, sir; all that came from Barnwell County had rifles.

Q. Only those that came from Barnwell County?—A. And the men from Beaufort County had rifles too.

Q. All of them that were at that meeting?—A. No, I wouldn't say all of them at the meeting.

Q. How many of them were from Beaufort County?—A. O, I don't know, sir.

Q. How many white men from Beaufort County were at that meeting?—A. That I could not tell, because I don't know all the whites of Beaufort County.

Q. Then you don't know where these men came from?—A. O, yes, sir; I know this much, that Richardson gave it out that they came from Barnwell, and that he was in command of them, and gave it out publicly on the ground.

Q. From the stand?—A. Right on the ground. After Mr. Hoover's motion, "Gentlemen, are you ready for the question," he rose and said no peace officer should be elected, because we gentlemen are here from Barnwell.

Q. Didn't those men come to these political meetings and request to divide the time, and to participate in the discussion, as they stated, in order to disabuse the minds of the colored people of the impressions that had been made upon them by their republican orators?—A. They didn't ask for it—they demanded it.

Q. That is not answering my question. My question is this: Did not these democratic speakers who came to these meetings state as a reason for asking for a division of time, that they wanted an opportunity to address the colored people who came out to see you, in order to disabuse their minds of false impressions that had been sought to be made upon them by republican speakers?—A. Not at Bronson.

Q. Did you hear them make that statement?—A. Yes, sir; I heard them say that.

Q. Was it not a fact that the colored people in your county—we will not discuss the cause of it at all—that the colored people of your county would not go out to hear democratic speakers?—A. I don't know that as a fact, sir.

Q. You don't?—A. No, sir; I never heard that.

Q. Did you not know it from public rumor?—A. No, sir; I didn't know it.

Q. Did you ever know the colored people of your county to go out to hear democratic speakers?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In any numbers?—A. They went out in numbers to hear the democratic speakers in the town of Beaufort when Gen. Wade Hampton was down there.

Q. Did you ever know colored republicans of your county to go to hear democratic speakers elsewhere?—A. I have never known the democrats to hold any meetings.

Q. They didn't hold any meetings in your county?—A. No, sir.

Q. Not previous to this election?—A. No, sir; not in our county.

Q. No democratic organization in your county?—A. Nor in this State, sir.

Q. In 1874 they fought under the banner of Judge Green for governor?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. He ran as an independent republican, and his ticket was called the conservative ticket, was it not?—A. The independent ticket.

Q. And as such was supported by the democrats?—A. Yes, sir; but the democrats never stumped our county for Green; the democrats have never stumped Beaufort County. I will make the statement, sir, that nary a democratic orator stumped Beaufort County previous to this election.

Q. Do you not state as a fact, drawn from your observation and from your familiarity with the colored republicans in that county, that no democratic orator could have gone in there during the last canvass and been able to get a hearing without going to your meetings?—A. No, sir; I don't believe any such thing.

Q. Then do you believe that if a democratic orator had advertised to make a speech in your county that he could have gone in there and the republicans would have turned out to hear him?—A. That is an addition to the question. I believe they would have gotten the republicans, more or less, to have gone out to hear him.

Q. Do you believe that they could have gotten a representative number of republicans to have heard him?—A. I don't know whether they could or not.

Q. Did not the democrats who came to these meetings of which you have spoken, asking or demanding a division of time, as you state, claim that the republican orators made incendiary harangues to the colored people, and that they proposed to set them right, and asked for an opportunity to answer?—A. They have never claimed that we made incendiary harangues at any other place than at Bronson.

Q. You state that this man Richardson stated there, from the stand, that if the radicals made their incendiary harangues to the people he would not be responsible for the peace?—A. He said that on the ground, sir.

Q. He did state that if the radicals made their incendiary harangues to the people he would not be responsible for the peace?—A. If they made their incendiary harangues, and told their damn lies, was his expression, he would not be responsible for the peace.

Q. Did you speak there that day?—A. I did, sir.

Q. Was it during your speech that you heard these observations, "That is a lie," &c. &c.?—A. During my speech and during Mr. Bampfield's speech, and in fact during all the speeches, even when Mr. Myers was speaking. Every speaker was interrupted more or less.

Q. You heard what?—A. The expressions, "That is a lie," or "It is not so."

Q. You never heard that at any political meeting before?—A. I never heard it in Beaufort County before.

Q. There never was any opposition in your county before?—A. No, sir.

Q. The republicans have always had it their own way before?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you had any experience in political gatherings in the State outside of that county?—A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Where?—A. I have seen political meetings. I have never taken any part in politics only home here. In Pennsylvania if men had used the lie to the speaker they would have gone off with a broken mouth. There we had to take more than that—sons of bitches were used; a man came right by me when Mr. Bampfield was speaking and said, "Eh! that mulatto son of a bitch don't trim himself right; we will trim him," and it is a very poor man who is equally matched that will take a son of a bitch.

Q. Then you always spoke in your political speeches under this sort of influence, did you?—A. No, sir; that was at Bronson I am speaking of.

Q. My question is: In your political speeches have you spoken under a state of mind, under a state of influence of misconduct and abuse of these parties toward you such as you have here described?—A. Have I always spoken of it in my political speeches?

Q. No; in your political speeches have you spoken under the influence or in the state of mind that these white democrats, who cursed and abused you, and undertook to denounce you on account of your color, such as you here speak of in your testimony to-day—did you ever speak in that state of mind?—A. No, sir; I never experienced it anywhere else but at Bronson.

Q. I say, did you not speak in that state of mind?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At Lawtonville, you say there were some 400 or 500 colored republicans there?—A. O yes, sir.

Q. And not exceeding 300 whites?—A. At the outside, if that.

Q. A part of those were composed of these men that came down from Bronson?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many came down from up there?—A. Well, now, as to the exact number I could not tell you.

Q. About how many?—A. I should judge about 70; now, there may not have been as many as 400 colored men at Lawtonville, but they were largely in excess of the whites.

Q. You say the colored men at Lawtonville are about as four to one?—A. Yes, sir; the vote will show it. All the census of that part of the parish will show it, sir.

Q. You say there was a colored orator spoke at Lawtonville?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was his name?—A. Becket.

Q. Where was he from?—A. From that vicinity; you know Lawtonville is not an incorporated place.

Q. He lives there, does he?—A. Yes, sir; he lives in that vicinity.

Q. You say you heard him, from the stump, defend the propriety and policy of men in discharging their employes if they did not vote with them?—A. Yes, sir; I heard him say that from the stump.

Q. What was his argument?—A. He said the republican party was the party against the whites of the South. They were the property-holders, and that as their ideas were altogether to the detriment of their political prosperity, that no man should employ a man who refused to vote for the party that represented his ideas.

Q. Didn't he claim in his speech, and didn't these white men that you speak of threatening to discharge their employes claim that, under the existing administration of the civil affairs of this State, their interests were being so damaged and they were so oppressed by taxation that they could not endure this state of affairs, and could not give employment to men who voted to perpetuate that sort of government?—A. Concerning this present administration, sir, do you mean?

Q. I ask you for the fact if these men whom you say you heard talking about discharging their men didn't state that as the reason?—A. I have heard white men give that as reasons, sir.

Q. Didn't this colored orator give that as the reason that day?—A. No, sir; because he has not the caliber to make such distinctions.

Q. Did he not display the average ability of the colored men of your county?—A. O, no; he is reputed to be of unsound mind at times.

Q. Who imputes that to him; the republicans?—A. No; the community.

Q. The republicans would impute unsoundness of mind to any colored man who would make a democratic speech, wouldn't they?—A. Well, now, sir, I declare if you don't ask the drollest questions. He has always been a republican up to this year. He has always, since I have lived up there, been reputed to be of unsound mind at any time, regardless of his affiliation or influence.

Q. But he never had any guardian?—A. I will answer your question. No man accuses anybody of unsound mind who acts upright with the democratic party.

Q. They accuse them of something worse, don't they?—A. I don't, for one.

Q. Don't your party?—A. I have heard—

Q. What reason did that colored orator give for defending that policy of the whites?—A. He gave his reason that the republican party was against the whites and against their interests.

Q. And he advised that simply as a defensive measure on their part?—A. Yes, sir; as a political defense; but the subject of taxation never came in with him.

Q. Is not taxation and misgovernment in your local State affairs, whether it be rightful or not—is it not asserted or made the ground of complaint on the part of the white people, and do they not give it as a reason for these threats that you state they have made, for discharging men that don't vote with them?—A. You use the word they. I state here that the whites do complain of the taxation. I have complained of it.

Q. What was the taxation of this State for the last year or two?

Mr. LAPHAM. I object to this line of examination, on the ground that it is not cross-examination, and is not competent to be proved in this way.

A. The State taxes for deficiencies and interest on the public debt, and the greater part of that debt has been occasioned by the democratic party—

Q. You know that is not an answer to my question. The simple question is, what are the taxes of this State for the last year or two?—A. I don't remember now the different items, but the last State tax was not more than ten mills.

By Mr. EDEN:

Q. That was just for State purposes?—A. Yes, sir; for paying deficiencies up, and the interest on the public debt, and charitable institutions, and all the government taxes.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Then what other taxes had you in your county?—A. The tax in our county is three mills.

Q. In addition to the State tax?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any other tax?—A. The school-tax that the various school-districts chose to levy.

Q. What does that average?—A. On the main it averages about a mill.

Q. What other tax?—A. That is the only tax that I can think of now, sir.

By Mr. EDEN:

Q. Is there any State school-tax?—A. O yes, sir; that is included in the ten mills; the school-tax has been the custom, since reconstruction has been a fixture, of two mills on the dollar.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. What is the public debt of this State?

Mr. Lapham renews his former objection.

A. It is about seven million, ($7,000,000.) Some persons say $12,000,000, but the best information I can get to base my calculation on puts it at about $7,000,000.

Q. Then the public debt of the State is not definitely known?—A. The democratic party impeached the definite statement. They say it is not a correct statement. Officially, sir, I have gotten it to be $7,000,000. But that statement is impeached by the democratic party.

Q. Do you know what is the assessed value of the property of this State?—A. About $140,000,000.

Q. Is it not the fact that the assessment of property in this State is very high?—A. No, sir.

Q. You say it is not?—A. No, sir. I can give you the assessment of the real estate if you want it.

Q. Is it not the fact that a great deal of the property of this State is assessed at more than its market value?—A. I don't know that.

Q. Have you no observation of that fact?—A. I have so heard it stated, sir, but I have no definite proof by which I know it. Taxed lands are assessed in my county all the way from sixty cents up to six dollars ($6) on the acre. The rice lands, only those actually under cultivation, are assessed at fifteen dollars an acre. We have our assessment rates in our county, but I will not assume to know about other counties. It varies all the way from sixty cents on the dollar up to about six dollars—the average assessment in my county.

Q. Have not your newspapers this fall and the present month had their columns filled with advertisements of property to be sold for delinquent taxes?—A. Yes, sir; my own has been advertised, not because the taxes were too high, though.

Q. I am asking you for the fact.—A. Yes, sir; it is a fact that my own has been advertised.

Q. I am not asking about your property.—A. Well, I thought I would give you the answer. I can give you the answer why I advertised it.

Q. You speak about negro families coming on your place since the election. Is it anything unusual for these colored people to migrate and move around with their families?—A. Yes, sir. What is your question?

Q. Is it unusual for these colored people to migrate and move around with their families?—A. The distance they have come this year is very unusual.

Q. How far did they come?—A. They come from Barnwell County. Some of them all the way from Edgefield County down into our county.

Q. How do you know they come from there?—A. Because I have met men of reliability who say that they have them on their lands.

Q. You don't know yourself where they come from?—A. I have information in my possession.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge where they come from?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How do you know it?—A. Because I have a letter from a man who moved down—

Q. Do you as a lawyer say that the getting of a letter from another is personal knowledge?—A. If I can swear to his signature. When I know your signature, and you state to me in a letter that you have left your home and moved to such and such a place—

Q. You would consider that personal knowledge?—A. I would.

Q. And you are licensed to practice by the supreme court?—A. That is not really hearsay.

Q. It is not?—A. No, sir; I don't look at it as such.

Q. What is the difference between that party writing to you and meeting you in the road and telling you he left the place? Is not that hearsay?—A. I have every confidence, you must remember, sir. I have another knowledge. I met two men on the cars on Sunday who have been quartered on the place of my birth, who came from—I know where they came from—

Q. How do you know; did you see them start?—A. No, sir.

Q. Then, how do you know where they came from?—A. O, if you are going to ask those kind of questions—

Q. You state that it is unusual in this country for colored people to go from one place to another, or even from one county to another.—A. In the manner in which they have done it this year—

Q. What was the manner of it?—A. In droves, sir.

Q. How many did you see with your own eyes?—A. I have not seen many men, but I can bring men who have seen them.

Q. You don't know even where these colored people who came to your place came from except from what you heard?—A. What they told me, every one of them, was that they came from Barwell County.

Q. And you state that it is unusual for colored people—families—to move from one county to another?—A. In the manner in which they have done it in this election.

Q. I have asked you, time and again, what you know about it, and you state it only from hearsay?—A. So help me God, I have never known of a single family moving from Beaufort County since reconstruction of my own personal knowledge; I have heard of them, but personally I have not known of a single family.

Q. Are not the times, in popular language, hard in this country?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Money is scarce, is it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Labor is depressed?—A. O, yes; labor is depressed.

Q. There are a great many farms untilled, are there not?—A. Certainly.

Q. And not always employment for the amount of labor that is here?—A. O yes, sir; there is employment, if they want it at the rates that people give and the kind of payment they can get.

Q. The people would employ the labor if it was profitable to do it, wouldn't they?—A. They do try to employ them, but they cannot get them to work for what they offer them.

Q. If the labor was done profitably they would offer more, would they not?—A. It is not the more they are after, it is the kind. They are perfectly satisfied with the prices that are offered, but it is the kind of payment that makes the laborer slothful.

Q. The kind of payment is regulated by a man's ability to pay, is it not; you would rather have a man's gold than his note, wouldn't you?—A. O, I would rather have his money than his note.

Q. Then you allude to the fact that people don't pay money, do you?—A. I have not said what they pay.

Q. Then I ask you if you don't allude to the fact that they don't pay in money?—A. A. No, sir; some of them go so far as to give notes payable in four and six years.

Q. Does not that prove that they haven't got the money?—A. O, I can't say, sir; a man might be hiding money and then live off the necessity of his fellow-man.

Q. And then his fellow-man might live off him if he could, might he not?—A. Yes, sir; but you know that intelligence, or the intelligent, has the advantage always of the ignorant.

Q. It has generally been the case, but not in your county?—A. In my county it is the case, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Now, as to Mr. Johnston, I want you to state whether you used the description of him that you gave with any design to cast an imputation upon him?—A. None at all, whatever, sir.

Q. Personally, he is a friend of yours?—A. I have every reason, sir, to regard him as one of the best friends I have in the county.

Q. Is he the same person who interfered when old man Ellis came to your house, when you were struck?—A. Not to my house; to the trial-justice's house.

Q. He was the same person who came there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And are you now of the belief that his interference saved your life?

(Question overruled on the ground that the relations between the witness and Mr. Johnston is not a matter at issue and therefore not of inquiry.)

Q. In regard to the taxes, are the taxes at the present time greater or less than they have been in times past?—A. The last year's taxes do you mean?

Q. Yes.—A. The smallest tax that I have paid since reconstruction.

Q. The last collected is the smallest tax since reconstruction?—A. Yes, sir; the smallest tax we have had since reconstruction.

Q. How much have the taxes been reduced under the administration of Governor Chamberlain?—A. They have been reduced, sir, fully one-fourth.

Q. What is included in the State tax which you have testified about; what items go to make up those ten mills?—A. Three mills go to pay the public debt off; two mills is for the interest-fund, and the other mill or mill and a half—I forget the exact amount—is for the consolidated floating indebtedness in the way of comptroller's warrants. Then, a mill and a quarter of it goes to pay the salaries that might have become due during the last fiscal year, and the unpaid salaries of the previous year. There is a portion of a mill—nearly a mill—for the support of the penal and charitable institutions, the penitentiary, the deaf and dumb asylum, the lunatic asylum, the orphan house. I believe those are all the charitable institutions.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Is not the Columbia College included?—A. And the University of Columbia, and the State normal school, and the college or high school—whatever you may term it—at Orangeburgh. Then two mills go to the public schools, and a mill and a quarter—it was one mill last year—for legislative expenses, which doesn't meet it.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. You spoke of a deficiency tax?—A. The deficiencies are being paid off.

Q. What provision had to be made?—A. They had to levy a mill to pay the deficiency in an appropriation for interest of the previous year.

Q. A deficiency tax of one mill?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember what the rate of State taxation was under the administration of Governor Moses?—A. It has been as high as sixteen mills, sir.

Q. Do you remember what it was under Governor Scott?—A. No, sir, I don't know what it was under those two men; but the highest were under those parties.

Q. Do you know how much the expense for the public printing has been reduced under the present administration?—A. It has been reduced from $150,000 to $50,000. The present year it is only $30,000.

Q. Has there been any reduction of salaries under the administration of Governor Chamberlain?—A. My friend Mr. Myers and myself got a bill through the legislature which reduced the salaries of the State officers some $60,000 per annum.

Q. When was that done; how long ago?—A. That was done under Governor Chamberlain's administration, the first year; reduced the salaries of State and county officers to the amount of $130,000.

Q. How is it with the judges?—A. Their salaries, I think, are fixed by the constitution, sir.

Q. There has been no change in their salaries?—A. No change, sir.

Q. You say that lands are frequently advertised at public sale for taxes?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have mentioned that your own were advertised?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How came that to be done?—A. Well, sir, it was not that the taxes were grievous, but because it was a doubtful title.

Q. You allowed it to be done to perfect title?—A. Yes, sir, to perfect title, and it is usually done that way.

Q. Do you know whether that is the practice through the State?—A. Yes, sir; that is the practice through the State.

Q. Is there any distinction made in the assessment of lands, whether they are by perfected or unperfected titles?—A. No distinction, sir.

Q. They are assessed at the rate of valuation irrespective of the class of titles?—A. Irrespective of the class of titles.

Q. What is the subject of taxation in the State except real estate?—A. The only things that are taxed are stocks and bonds of banking-houses, you know; incorporated bodies, jewelry, silver-ware, gold-ware, cattle, hogs, sheep, horses, and mules—animals that would be produced on the farms; dogs are subject to a tax.

Q. Upon what class of people in this State do the taxes fall?—A. The taxes mainly fall upon the land-owners.

Q. And not upon the laborers?—A. Not directly sir it falls upon the land-owners, sir.

Q. There is no poll-tax?—A. Yes, sir; there is a poll-tax on all male citizens.

Q. How much is that?—A. One dollar on the head, and that is devoted to the public schools.

Q. Where does the dog-tax go?—A. That goes to the aggregate tax for State or county purposes.

Q. About this subject of advertising during this campaign, has it been the practice to publish advertisements in regard to laboring people or in regard to business-men?—A. I don't understand the question, sir.

Q. Do men advertise as democrats their business in the public papers.—A. It has been done, sir, during this campaign; butchers, sir, fish-mongers, grocers, to a certain extent.

Q. During the campaign, has it been a subject of advertisement in the papers about men going on official bonds; have you not seen advertisements of individuals withdrawing from public bonds?—A. O, yes, sir; I have seen that, sir.

Q. Don't you know the fact that it has been difficult at times, during this campaign, to get signatures to an official bond?—A. Yes, sir,

Q. Has it not been so all through the State?—A. Generally, sir.

Q. (The witness being shown an advertisement.) Did you see that class of advertisements in the papers?—A. O, yes, sir; all through the canvass, sir; daily occurrences.

Mr. LAPHAM. I offer these advertisements in evidence as a sample of the character of advertisements that were published during the campaign.

(Offer overruled.)

Q. (By Mr. LAPHAM.) You have stated the fact that business-men have been accustomed to solicit custom by advertising in the papers their politics?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Democrats or republicans?—A. Democrats.

Q. Have you ever seen a republican advertisement of that character?—A. No, sir, I have not.

Q. Have you ever seen a republican notice against men signing official bonds?—A. No, sir.

Q. Or in favor of discharging men from employment?—A. No, sir; I have never seen any such notices.

Q. All that has been confined to the democratic press?—A. To the democratic press, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. What papers did you see such advertisements in that you speak of?—A. The News and Courier, sir.

Q. Did you ever see it in any other paper?—A. I never took the Journal of Commerce.

Q. Did you ever see it in any other paper?—A. No, sir; I have never taken special notice of it.

Q. The advertisements you speak of were in the News and Courier, published here in Charleston?—A. Yes, sir; in the News and Courier published in this city.

Q. These advertisements you have seen about signing official bonds, what were those advertisements?—A. They were notices to citizens not to go upon republican official bonds, and by so doing prevent their qualifying.

Q. Then the republicans relied upon the democrats to go upon their bonds to make them good?—A. O, yes, sir.

Q. Within the range of your observation, are not the great majority of the county office-holders of your county colored men?—A. No, sir; I could not make any such statement as that.

Q. Who are the county officers of your county?—A. The county officers in my county, sir, are pretty well divided.

Q. I ask you who they are.—A. George Holmes, a white man, county treasurer; H. G. Judd, a white man, clerk of court; S. D. Gilbert, a white man, school-commissioner.

Q. Was he elected this year?—A. He was not elected this canvass; he is off at Massachusetts. I am giving you those who are holding office. You know there is a dispute yet concerning the right to hold. All these I am calling are republicans: probate judge, a white man; two out of the three county commissioners, white men; the sheriff, a white man; the deputy sheriff, a white man; three clerks in the auditor's office—during the months of October, November, and December, they generally have an additional force of three in the office to arrange the books of the assessment of property—white men. I will now give you the colored men: out of sixteen trial-justices twelve are white—we have the strongest republican county in the State—and four colored trial-justices; one county commissioner, colored; colored auditor. Now, sir, you can make the comparison and you will see.

Q. Who are your members of the legislature?—A. Now the members of the legislature, six out of the seven of the old house are colored and one white.

Q. Who is the senator?—A. The senator is a colored man; jury commissioner, and county officer, a white man; the treasurer's clerk is a white man.

Q. All the clerks are white men, are they not?—A. No, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. How about the constables?—A. The constables are about equal. Twelve out of the sixteen trial-justices are white; we have four colored trial-justices.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. What clerks are colored?—A. The auditor has a colored clerk in his office; the clerk of the board of county commissioners is colored. These are the only two colored clerks I know of.

Q. You say there is a poll-tax in this State?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do all the voters pay this tax before voting?—A. No, sir.

Q. Is this poll-tax collected?—A. The tax of a dollar is levied upon each male citizen between the years—

Q. Is not that only collected from tax-payers?—A. It is collected, sir, from the mass. When I said the taxes principally fell upon the whites—

Q. Do you state there is a poll-tax collected from all the voters in this State?—A. Not from all, but from the most of them.

Q. Is it not collected from those who are put upon the assessment-list, and collected by the tax-collector?—A. Some of them who don't pay a dollar's worth of tax pay their poll-tax in my county.

Q. Have you ever seen it done?—A. O, yes, sir; I have assisted in collecting.

Q. Do you state it here as the fact that the voters in your county pay a poll-tax—all of them?—A. I didn't say all.

Q. Or any considerable portion of them?—A. Yes, sir, I do; a considerable portion of them. The treasurer's books will show that I am correct.

Q. Is there any law in your State that prohibits a man from voting until he has paid his poll-tax?—A. No, sir.

Q. You say that the cause of a good deal of this advertising of land for delinquent taxes is in order to perfect title?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the cause of doubtfulness of titles?—A. In my own county, right after the war—to say nothing of the records that were destroyed during the war—our court-house was destroyed, and the records. For instance, the whites in our State, the majority of them, are illiterate people, and they themselves are not competent, many of them, to make their titles, and the whole dependence upon the correctness of their titles is by the records, and our court-house was burned down.

Q. That obtains in your county. Do you state it to be the fact that through the State the primary, or the most general, cause of the advertising of lands for delinquent taxes, is in order to perfect title.—A. No, sir, I didn't say that.

Q. That obtains in your county, you say, on account of the destruction of the records?—A. Yes, sir; I say that it has been the case in my county; but I didn't use the words "primary or general cause."

Q. You gave that as the reason for this advertising?—A. For a great portion of the advertising.

Q. Has not a great deal of land been sold in your county for real taxes?—A. Yes, sir; real taxes.

Q. You say that your legislature has reduced salaries $60,000?—A. About $130,000, in county and State, I said, sir.

Q. When was that done?—A. The first winter that Chamberlain was governor.

Q. The salaries of officers under previous administrations had been increased to an enormous extent?—A. Not increased, but placed at a high figure in the start of the republican government. I don't know of any increase from year to year; but they were placed at an exorbitant rate, compared with our income. Because as one who fathered the bill—

Q. You say you were instrumental yourself in reducing those salaries?—A. The bill was introduced by my colleague, and he resigned, and it was left to my charge.

Q. You introduced a bill in this last legislature to pay Mackey a bonus of a thousand dollars?—A. To give him a gratuity of a thousand dollars, and it had been the custom in this State ever since reconstruction.

Q. To give the speaker an extra thousand dollars?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Has that always been done, to give the speaker an extra thousand dollars?—A. In some instances it has been higher than that.

Q. Does he not receive his stipulated per diem?—A. He receives his $600, as any other member.

Q. You say the public printing has been greatly reduced?—A. It has been reduced for the last two years.

Q. Was there not a great outcry against the extravagance of the public printing?—A. Yes, sir; there was.

Q. Where is the public printing done?—A. It is done by the Republican Printing Company, as it is called.

Q. Where?—A. In Columbia.

Q. What paper has it?—A. No paper.

Q. Is that Republican Printing Company constituted under a law of the legislature?—A. It is an incorporated body.

Q. How do they get the contract for the printing?—A. The law requires the clerks of the two houses to advertise for bidders and the lowest bidder shall get the contract. And the first time it went into operation was two years ago under Mr. Chamberlain's administration. The old Republican Company, who had been doing the printing during the days when it was loosely carried on, placed it at the lowest bidder, and they got it.

Q. Under the former administration it was placed also to the lowest bidder?—A. No, sir; there was no such law under the former administration. This is an improvement upon the former administration. The law was passed under Moses.

Q. That law was passed during Moses's administration as to letting it to the lowest bidder?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who decides upon letting it to the lowest bidder?—A. The committee of the house and senate meets and opens the sealed proposals, and they determine who is the lowest bidder.

Q. Who has done the printing under the operation of the new rule?—A. The same Republican Printing Company that did it under the loose system.

Q. That Republican Printing Company is in existence and doing the printing yet?—A. Yes, sir. This year it is reduced still further from $50,000 to $30,000.

Q. Under their own bid?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The public printing this year is greatly reduced in the amount of work, is it not?—A. Yes, sir; the work is greatly reduced.

Q. Columbia College you say is supported by the State?—A. Columbia College is supported by the State.

Q. What does that cost a year, do you know?—A. About $20,000; between $20,000 and $25,000 a year.

Q. Each student in the college is allowed twenty dollars a month?—A. Not each student; each county has a certain quota.

Q. How many?—A. As to the inhabitants.

Q. What is the ratio of representation for each party?—A. Our county is entitled to two and we send seven members.

Q. And those that each county is entitled to get twenty dollars a month?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long do they go—until they graduate?—A. Until they graduate.

Q. And that costs how much a year?—A. About $25,000; salaries and all included, $25,000.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Including professors and all?—A. Yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. How much of that is paid to professors?—A. I don't know exactly.

Q. How many professors are there?—A. Some six or eight.

Q. What are they paid?—A. They are paid from $1,000 to $1,500.

Q. How many counties are there in the State?—A. There are thirty-two counties in the State.

Q. Each county gets not less than one, I suppose?—A. No, sir; not less than one.

Q. Each county I say is entitled to two, is what I mean?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then they are graded in proportion to the population?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And your county has two?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you come here to Charleston?—A. I arrived here last night.

Q. Where did you come from?—A. I came from Grahamville.

Q. Why did you come here?—A. I came here on business.

Q. You were not requested to come here?—A. Not requested?

Q. Yes.—A. I don't understand your question.

Q. You were not requested by this committee to come here?—A. No, sir.

THOMAS H. GARNER (colored) sworn and examined.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Question. Where do you reside?—Answer. Lawtonville, sir.

Q. How long have you lived there?—A. Well, sir, I have been living there I suppose about thirty-four years, sir. I believe that is about my age, sir. I was born there.

Q. Were you a slave?—A. No, sir.

Q. What precinct did you vote at?—A. Lawtonville, sir.

Q. Were you one of the managers?—A. I was, sir.

Q. What time did you get there?—A. Well, I got there about half past five o'clock, I suppose, sir, or maybe a little earlier.

Q. Who were the other managers?—A. C. H. Wilcox, and another gentleman by the name of Levy Chabers.

Q. Who was the democratic manager?—A. Mr. Wilcox, sir.

Q. A white man?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State the occurrences of that day; the conduct of the election, what occurred there, and the manner of the people during the day?—A. I never saw anything occur. The election all went off peaceful and quiet, sir.

Q. Was there any interference with the electors with regard to the votes they should cast, that you saw?—A. I never saw any, sir.

Q. What did you witness in that respect?—A. All that I know about it, sir—of course I was there during the day, and I never saw any disturbance whatever.

Q. Did you see any instance where a man was asked the kind of ballot he wanted?—A. Yes, sir; the ballots were lying on the table, a portion of them, sir, of both kinds, the democratic tickets and the republican, and I tell the n—there was a great many persons who could not read—and I tell them, says I, "There is ballots lying on the table." I says, "Any man is liable to vote for who he chooses; and if a man wants to vote the democrat ticket or the republican ticket, and he don't know, it is our duty to tell you which they are."

Q. Did you see any ballots given during the day to persons who wanted democratic ballots?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was there any disturbance of the proceedings by an organization or a procession?—A. No, sir. Once, of course, there was some persons come along there. I suppose—well, they was nearly boys, the height of them was, sir. Some of them come with a drum.

Q. What time was that?—A. That was in the afternoon. I suppose about one or two o'clock; just about that time.

Q. Who composed that procession?—A. I could not well say, sir, who they was. That was in People's store. I saw them passing the road, and they went up the road somewhere about Wilcox's store, and they broke and come back and voted.

Q. How far from the poll was that to Wilcox's where they went; how far from the poll?—A. I suppose it is about fifty yards; I reckon about that.

Q. Did you see any interference with the freedom of election that day on the part of anybody?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you hear any complaint?—A. I did not, sir.

Q. What time did you get through with the canvass that night?—A. Well, I disremember now; but I know when I got home it was twelve o'clock, and I had four miles to walk, sir.

Q. About what hour was it?—A. I guess it was somewhere about between ten and eleven o'clock, sir.

Q. Who drew the returns?—A. Mr. Wilcox.

Q. Is he a democrat?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State whether they were signed by all the managers.—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Any complaint in regard to them?—A. No, sir.

Q. Any protest made with them against the fairness of the election?—A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever been a manager before?—A. Yes, sir; I have been a manager some three or four different times.

Q. When—in what years?—A. Two years ago I was; and then two years before that; and I think last some time during the last year; I forget now what time it was exactly.

Q. Two and four years ago you were a manager?—A. Yes, sir; during four years ago.

Q. How does the election at this poll this year compare with prior years as to its being orderly and peaceable?—A. Good order, you mean?

Q. Yes.—A. It compares in good order. It always has; no disturbance whatever, as I saw, sir.

Q. What is your business?—A. Farmer, sir.

Q. Do you own or rent one?—A. I don't own any. I don't rent any. I live on the place that belongs to my father-in-law.

Q. You married a place?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You came here in company with Ellis and others yesterday?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who requested you to come?—A. Mr. Mulligan, sir.

Q. Mulligan, the trial-justice?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you any business here?—A. No, sir; no more than that, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. What time of day was it when you saw this party come up with the drum?—A. I say it was about one or two o'clock, sir.

Q. Where were you when they came up?—A. Me? I was in People's store, sir. We opened polls in his store.

Q. Then you were at the ballot-box when you saw them?—A. Yes, sir; I was at the ballot-box.

Q. They came up to the store?—A. They passed by, sir.

Q. Did they pass there more than once?—A. Well, I never saw them just when they passed by, going, sir.

Q. How many were in that party?—A. Well, I would suppose, as well as my memory serves me, there was about twenty-five or thirty; but then they were not all voters. There was a great many of the boys at Lawtonville joined with them—the beating of the drum, and passed through.

Q. Did they have flags?—A. They did, sir; had one, I believe.

Q. Did you hear that drum beating around there in the evening?—A. No, sir; I never heard it any more after the first time they came, sir.

Q. You didn't hear it any more?—A. No, sir; not as I remember.

Q. Did you see them drilling any that evening?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you hear them?—A. I could not say positive that I did hear them. I would not say positive that I heard the drum, but I know they didn't drill any more in front of there.

Q. Don't you know that they did drill after that?—A. I could not be positive, because I didn't see them.

Q. Did you not hear them; did you not know of their drilling?—A. No, sir.

Q. How many votes were polled there?—A. Well, if my memory serves me right, I think there was 430.

Q. How many democratic votes?—A. I would not say positive. It was 430 or 426, and there was, I think, 125 democrat votes, sir.

Q. How many white men voted there that day out of that number?—A. Well, I don't know, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. About how many?—A. I will tell you what I do know—

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. You kept a list of the whites and blacks that voted, did you not?—A. There was 140 democrat votes cast, and out of that there was 40 colored votes, sir.

Q. Who did you say were the managers?—A. Myself and Mr. Wilcox, sir.

Q. Is he a white man?—A. A white man, sir; there was two colored and one white.

Q. Who was the supervisor?—A. Mr. Morrison, I think, sir.

Q. Is he white or colored?—A. White, sir.

Q. Who was the clerk?—A. There was no clerk, sir; Mr. Shafer acted as clerk. He was a manager. I held the box, and Mr. Wilcox he swore them, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Did he swear them all day?—A. Yes, sir; he swore every one.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. What was the color of the republican ballots?—A. Do you mean of both tickets, or of the republican ticket?

Q. The republican ticket.—A. They were white tickets, with the names printed on them in red.

Q. It had a red eagle on it, had it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the democratic tickets were printed in black?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Isn't there a colored military company in that neighborhood?—A. There was, sir.

Q. When?—A. Well, up to the 16th or 18th of November; about the 18th, I think, sir.

Q. What became of it then; did it disband?—A. No, sir; the guns was called in, sir.

Q. About the 18th of November?—A. Yes, sir; as well as my memory serves me. It was about that time, sir.

Q. When was that company organized? Was there more than one company in that neighborhood?—A. Yes, sir; so I was informed. I never saw any more. There was a company down at Robertville, and one to Bronson.

Q. Who was the colonel of the organization?—A. Sheriff Wilson, sir.

Q. How many men were in this militia company there at Lawtonville, where you live?—A. When they was first organized, I think it contained about one hundred, sir.

Q. When was it organized?—A. Four years ago.

Q. And continued up until the 18th of November?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the occasion of this disbandment then?—A. Well, sir, it was on regard—a riot occurred at Stafford Cross-Roads.

Q. About the killing of those men, Sohuman and Chaney?—A. They were killed; yes, sir.

Q. What was the other man's name that was wounded?—A. Abram Deloach.

Q. You were a lieutenant in that militia company, were you not?—A. I was, sir; a second lieutenant.

Q. State briefly what you know about that riot of which you speak, and which was the occasion of the disbandment of this militia.—A. Well, all I know about that, sir, I saw the parties were dead, and it was reported that the riot was raised by some colored men, and that the damage was done with some of those State guns; and that is why they was called in, I suppose.

Q. Were you not at this trial at the justice at the time the warrant went out for the arrest of these men for the whipping of a colored man named Peter Johnson?—A. No, sir. I passed through there the same afternoon about sundown, or may be a little before sundown.

Q. State what you know about it.—A. That is all I know about it. I passed through there, and I met Mr. Causy standing at the cross-road, and met a Mr. Milligan, and James Hamilton, and Mr. John Tooton, living at the cross-roads, and when I rode up—I was going home—and I rode up to Mr. Hamilton, and he asked me, "Ain't you a member of that company up there?" and I said I was, and he says, "Yonder is some of your men out there on the road with guns." It seemed they had taken a prisoner away from Mr. Causy. "Well," I says, "I will go and see them;" and I went on to them, and I asked them what they was doing there and what was the matter.

Q. Was the prisoner taken away from Causy or not?—A. I could not state. I never saw him.

Q. Was the prisoner there when you went there?—A. No, sir. I never saw him. If I did, I don't know him. He wasn't at the cross roads.

Q. That was after they had come up to the cross-roads?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far off from the cross-roads were these men they pointed out to you, who they said had taken the prisoner?—A. About 200 yards.

Q. How many were there together that you saw?—A. I saw five, sir.

Q. Were they armed?—A. About three of them was, but I wouldn't say the others was not.

Q. What were they armed with?—A. They had the United States guns.

Q. With bayonets?—A. Bayonets; yes, sir.

Q. Did you see what became of them—which way they went?—A. After I passed them, I told them, "Men, you take a fool's advice and go back home." After I had passed them, I suppose about four or five hundred yards, I reckon it was, I looked back to see whether they was going on or coming back, or what, and it seemed to me I saw them coming back—saw the people coming back toward me—so I said to myself they must be coming back. I went on and I met another man, and I said, "Where are you going?" And he said, "I am going down to the cross-roads." And I said, "You take a fool's advice and go back." He said he had no business with me, and turned right around and went back home.

Q. You didn't see any more of them that evening?—A. No, sir.

Q. When did you see these men that were killed?—A. About eleven o'clock, I reckon—ten or eleven o'clock the next day.

Q. Where were they when you saw them?—A. I saw Mr. Schuman. He was at the cross-roads.

Q. Was he dead?—A. He was, sir.

Q. How was he shot—if he was shot at all?—A. I could not see whether he was shot, or how. I never looked at him much. I saw his head was split open; whether it was done by a ball, or how, I could not tell.

Q. Who was the other man that was killed?—A. Mr. Chaney.

Q. Who was the man who was wounded?—A. Abram Deloach.

Q. Did you see him?—A. No, sir; I didn't see him.

Q. Is that all you know about it?—A. That is all I know about it.

Q. Did you see any of those parties afterward, in arrest?—A. No, sir.

Q. Have you seen them since?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you know the colored man Peter Johnson who was whipped?—A. Yes, sir; he told me that his name was Peter Gaul.

Q. He goes by the name of Peter Johnson, doesn't he?—A. Sometimes they call him Peter Johnson, and I heard him say he was Peter Gaul.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. When you saw these people you advised them to go home?—A. I did, sir.

Q. And you supposed that seeing people coming after you that they were returning home?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was killed, did you say?—A. There was Mr. Schuman and Edward Chaney, sir.

Q. Who was Chaney?—A. A colored man, sir.

Q. Wasn't there a colored woman killed?—A. No, sir; she was wounded in the arm, sir.

Q. Did you see her?—A. I did, sir.

Q. Where was she wounded; whereabouts in the arm?—A. I think it was along about the elbow. It was shot, so she said. I didn't see the place myself. I saw the blood on there, and saw it done up.

Q. When had this company been under drill; you say they were organized some four years ago; when did they last have any military meeting to your knowledge?—A. I suppose it was—I forget the time, now, that they drilled last; but I think it was about a month and a half, or may be two months, before the election. We drilled there three months, sir.

Q. That was the army regulation?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever see them organized as a company after their last drill?—A. Well, the first time they was organized—they never was organized but once, sir.

Q. Have they drilled any since the last drill-day to your knowledge—any meeting, I mean?—A. No, sir.

Q. You were one of the officers, I think you said?—A. I was, sir.

Q. Did that company, as a company, have anything to do with the election?—A. No, sir.

Q. Or the campaign?—A. No, sir.

By Mr. EDEN:

Q. They were all colored men, were they not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And all republicans?—A. Well, I could not say. They have been republicans; but some changed, and voted the democratic ticket the last election.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. How many of that company that you know of voted the democratic ticket?—A. I know of a man by the name of Jerry Beckett.

Q. He was a colored orator, was he not?—A. No, sir; that was Charles Beckett that made the speech, sir. Charles Beckett belonged to that company. He complained of rheumatism and he did not drill for some time. And there was Jerry Garner, my brother, and he voted the democrat ticket. He belonged to the company.

Q. Those two you know of?—A. Those two; yes, sir.

Q. Did you not have a club organization?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you never meet as a club?—A. Well, we had a society.

Q. What did you call it?—A. The name of it was F. N., sir—Fear Not.

Q. How often did that meet?—A. Well, sir, we met the last Friday in every month.

Q. How long did you meet just before the election?—A. Well, now, to say how long we meet before the election—

Q. When was the last meeting you had just before the election?—A. The last meeting we had before the election—the last meeting, week before the election, we didn't meet. The president was down to Beaufort, and there was a some little business they wanted to attend to, and it was put off till the next meeting—until the next month.

Q. When did you last meet just before the election?—A. The last meeting before the election was, I think, in September. I think our last meeting was in September.

Q. Did you have no meeting after that?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you not meet and adjourn because the president was not there?—A. No, sir.

Q. Never came together at all?—A. No, sir; but we was to meet in November, but we didn't do it, sir.

Q. When was that association organized?—A. It was on last New Year's day, sir. This coming Monday will be a year ago.

Q. Who were the members of that association; how many men?—A. I think it contained about fifteen, sir.

Q. Were the men of that association members of this military company?—A. Some was, and some was not.

Q. You were a member of it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What officers did that association have?—A. It had a president, and a clerk, and an assistant clerk, and a treasurer, sir.

Q. What was requisite to become a member of that association?—A. What they required before they became a member was a dollar, sir.

Q. Was that all?—A. That was all.

Q. Could anybody join it that paid a dollar?—A. Yes, sir; that is what you had to pay to become a member.

Q. Nothing else required?—A. No, sir; and 25 cents a month.

Q. It was a political association, was it not?—A. No, sir; it was not a political association.

Q. Had the republican party no political club in that neighborhood?—A. No, sir; not as a general thing. No more than societies about. As I first said, they had one in the neighborhood of Lawtonville, but then that was organized, I think, before the one I was a member of. It had broken up some time ago, sir.

Q. Had they no political organization there at the last canvass?—A. No, sir.

Q. No clubs?—A. No, sir.

Q. How, then, did they organize a company?—A. Well, I don't know about that. Of course we had by-laws written up—statutes that we was to have them signed by the executive code; that was the obligation of each member of this society.

Q. Each member of the society had what?—A. The by-laws; we was under an obligation, of course—the members of the society.

Q. To support the republican ticket?—A. No, sir.

Q. I asked you if the republican party in that country there didn't have any political clubs at all?—A. No, sir.

Q. Nor had no party meetings?—A. No, sir.

Q. Nor had no organization?—A. No, sir; not as regards that, sir.

Q. Well, as regards what else?—A. You asked me, if I understand you right, if the republicans had clubs made up, having each other under an obligation to support the republican ticket?

Q. I asked you if you didn't have political clubs in the republican party—associations—to which the members went?—A. No, sir.

Q. Never did have?—A. Not as I know, sir; I never was in any. I do not know.

Q. Where were the guns of this militia company kept?—A. The guns of this militia company? I suppose each man kept his own gun, sir; and they did; each man kept his own gun, or had his gun, rather, sir.

Q. Kept his gun at his house?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see any guns at the election on that day?—A. I never saw a gun, sir.

Q. Did you see any arms of any kind there?—A. I never, sir.

Q. You didn't go out of the house to where this company was?—A. I never saw any company out. I went out once to get water, but I never saw any at all, sir.

Q. Where did this drum come from that you saw there?—A. This drum come from down the road.

Q. Didn't your militia company have a drum?—A. I don't know who had the drum then, sir. Perhaps it might, or perhaps might not.

Q. Didn't your militia company have a drum?—A. O, yes; we had a drum.

Q. These fifteen or twenty-five men that you saw, didn't they belong to your militia company that came up there?—A. Some of them did.

Q. Didn't they all?—A. No, sir.

Q. About how many was there in that company that didn't belong to your company?—A. Well, I couldn't well say who they were, because I didn't take much notice of them.

Q. You didn't take notice to see who composed it?—A. I know I heard a heap of boys that staid right there in Lawtonville.

Q. The boys would very naturally follow a militia company—a drum?—A. I suppose they would generally do it.

Q. How far was this poll from Lawtonville where you were voting?—A. Right in Lawtonville, sir.

Q. These boys you saw pass belonged in Lawtonville?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. How many persons going by in that procession were voters?—A. Well, I said I guessed there were some ten or fifteen.

Q. The balance were boys, were they?—A. Yes, sir. Well, there were some boys and some girls.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. They were following along?—A. Yes, sir; they were following along.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Do you say this was a drum belonging to that military company?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know whether it was or not?—A. I wouldn't be positive. I say we did have a drum that did belong to that company.

Q. Weren't there any other drums in that town?—A. Well, I have seen another drum up there, sir, about three months ago.

Q. Do you know which drum it was?—A. I do not know which one it was.

Q. Who was the drummer of the company that you belonged to?—A. The drummer in our company was Zachariah Williams, sir.

Q. Had he the custody of the drum as the other men did of the guns?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he the drummer on this day? Was he the person drumming on the day of the procession?—A. If he was, it was more than I know.

Q. Did you see him there at all?—A. I think I saw him at Lawtonville, but I could not say I saw him with those parties that was going along in the road.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. He was there at the election?—A. Yes, sir; he was there at the election.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Was it before or after this procession that you saw him?—A. I thought, as well as my memory serves me, I saw him there in the early part of the day.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. What leads you to believe it was in the morning that you saw him?—A. I say as far as my memory serves me, I think it was in the morning that I saw him.

Q. Did you not see him there in the evening?—A. I could not say positive that I saw him there.

Q. Can you say positively that you saw him there in the morning?—A. I say as well as my memory serves me, I think I saw him in the morning.

Q. You cannot say positively whether you saw him or not?—A. In the morning, do you mean?

Q. Yes.—A. I would not be positive on it that I saw him in the morning or in the evening; but it seems, as well as my memory serves me, that I seen him in the morning.

PETER JONES (colored) sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Question. What is your age?—Answer. Twenty-eight.

Q. Where do you live?—A. I live at Sheldon plantation, about three miles from the Sheldon station.

Q. In what county?—A. Beaufort County, sir.

Q. How long have you lived there?—A. O, I was raised there.

Q. Where did you attend at the late election?—A. At Gardner's Corner.

Q. Did you vote there that day?—A. Yes, sir; I vote that day.

Q. What time did you get there?—A. I go there about six o'clock in the morning or a little earlier. I didn't have a watch at that time.

Q. How long did you stay?—A. I staid till nearly sunset—nearly time for the polls to close—before I come home.

Q. Do you know about how many people voted there that day?—A. I can't tell rightly. I suppose 617 or 618.

Q. How many democratic votes were polled out of that number?—A. About 19, I think.

Q. How many white persons attended that poll?—A. I can't tell rightly, sir.

Q. State about the number.—A. I suppose about 13.

Q. You say you got there about six o'clock, and didn't vote till late in the evening?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why did you not vote earlier?—A. Because I was afraid to vote.

Q. Why were you afraid to vote?—A. The time of the strike—I suppose you heard of the company's strike they had down there—I was taken and whipped in that strike, and threatened not to vote on that day the way that I wished to vote. In the strike they came after me to go. I said, "I can't go in the strike, because Mr. Fuller gave me certain wages, and I stay with him;" because $20 could support me, and for that reason I didn't want to go in the strike; and they said if I don't come in the strike they would hit me 180 lashes on the bare skin. I thought that was very hard. They hit me eight or ten, and my wife began to squall, and one fellow cut her across the head and she begged me to strike, and I did go. On the day of the election they say if I vote the democrat ticket they shoot me. I tell them I would vote for General Hampton this time, because the way the strike is going on, and nobody to govern us, and in a mob like that of eight or ten hundred of them, and make a man to do what they have no right, and the Constitution of the United States didn't allow cowhiding. I would not vote for that governor at all. They said if I vote for Hampton they kill me, and so I had to wait till I got a chance to vote.

Q. Did you see any parties on your way to the polls?—A. O, lots of them were all along the road in every direction looking out for fellows who was going to vote the democrat ticket.

Q. What did they say to you?—A. They asked me that morning if I was going to vote the democrat ticket.

Q. Whereabouts did they ask you?—A. I suppose about half a mile before I got to the polls, on the causeway about half a mile. I tell them I didn't know what I was going to do; I intended to vote some way or another. They say if I vote the Hampton ticket they knew what they was going to do about it with me. So I went there late in the evening, and I had a chance to vote the way I wanted. A good many fellows who wanted to vote the way I did didn't, because they was afraid.

Q. How many colored men did you see there who you heard say wanted to vote the democratic ticket, but were afraid to vote it?—A. I can call them by name.

Q. About how many?—A. I suppose about nineteen or twenty of them; a good many didn't vote at all.

Q. They went away without voting?—A. They went away without voting.

Q. Did you hear parties making any threats that day what they would do with colored voters if they voted the democratic ticket?—A. They didn't make them at the polls, what I call threats; they did it off from the polls. They said they wouldn't make any threats right at the polls, because they was afraid the election would be a counterfeit; and if any fellows wanted to vote the democrat ticket, to wait till they got away from the polls, and then take them and cowhide them.

Q. Did they interfere with you any other way besides that?—A. Yes, sir; they did. They never catch me to cowhide yet, but I have to keep mighty close.

Q. Did they take your horse?—A. They took my horse when I went to fetch Tom Yeates. He lives near about there; but he was unwell and was unable to ride, and didn't have a horse, and only had a mule; so I take my horse that day for him, and they takes my horse and buggy from me.

Q. Who took them from you?—A. The crowd was so large, and I was so scared at the time—

Q. Were these colored men who were tending that poll?—A. O, certainly, colored mans that voted at that poll.

Q. They intercepted you on the road, and took your horse and buggy from you?—A. Yes, sir; both from me. I never get it till a good while afterward. They leave my horse at my friend's house, Sam Polites, to take care for me. He vote the republican ticket, and he take care of the horse because he and I was sort of intimate friends, and because he couldn't send the horse to me. He had a gun that belonged to me at the time of the strike, that they take away from me, and when I could come there myself he would let me have the horse, and so I went there one evening and brought the horse off after night. Some of the boys said they would go to Beaufort to vote.

Q. About how many colored men went away from that poll that were afraid to vote the democratic ticket?—A. About nineteen or twenty.

Q. How far were they from Beaufort?—A. It was about seventeen miles from my house; I was fifteen miles from the poll; they could go by railroad.

Q. Did all these men who could not vote there say they were going to Beaufort, or only some of them?—A. Some of them. I suppose those that had money went, and those that didn't have money didn't go; I can't be certain about that.

Q. Were those parties at the polls armed in any way?—A. I didn't see any arms.

Q. Did you see any clubs?—A. O, yes, lots of clubs was there; the same striking clubs, they had them there.

Q. The same clubs they had in the strike?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What sort of clubs were they?—A. Clubs about a long as my arm; 2 foot, pretty near, with tacks driven in the head, and a little hole bored in them and a string around their wrists.

Q. Did many of them have those clubs at the polls?—A. O, not as many as in the strike, but lots of them were there, sir.

Q. Did you see them examine the tickets of men there that day?—A. They did that, sir; they examined the tickets. I saw them take men's tickets from them, to see whose ticket they were going to vote. Those mens, of course, was a little ignorant and ain't got pluck enough and judgment enough to take care of their own self; and they took the ticket and examined it.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Did they examine your ticket?—A. No, sir; they never examined my ticket, sir.

Q. Where did you get it?—A. I got it from Mr. John Tolbert, one of the clerks in the store.

Q. At the voting-place?—A. Yes, sir; at the voting-place.

Q. What time did you get it?—A. In the morning, just a little while after I gets there. But I had it in my pocket.

Q. Were you not afraid you would wear it out, carrying it so long?—A. No, sir; I fold up money in my pocket and it would stay there for weeks.

Q. You were there all day, or nearly all day?—A. All day.

Q. You heard no threat except what you stated was said to you when you were there?—A. No, sir; not right at the poll.

Q. You heard none anywhere except what was said to you while on your way to the polls?—A. Yes, sir; that is all. What was said to other parties I can't say; I never hear them.

Q. When was this strike that you speak of?—A. This strike was some time in August. I don't know; August and September—'long about the last of August and the first of September.

Q. Where was that?—A. The strike commenced in Colleton County first, and went right straight over in Beaufort County.

Q. Who was the strike among?—A. It was among the colored people.

Q. What was it about?—A. About wages and checks and one thing or another like that.

Q. What kind of checks?—A. Printed in Charleston here. The planters generally pay checks and cash them every Saturday night; their note for fifty cents or twenty-five cents, on such a plantation as J. A. Bissell, Shelden, or Cypress; their note for fifty cents at such a time.

Q. Didn't they take them up at a discount, for less than their face value?—A. No, sir; not to my knowing. I will tell you. If I give you a fifty-cent check, and I take it to the store, they give you fifty cents pay for it.

Q. Have you got any yourself?—A. I have been paying it for two years.

Q. You were one who made those payments?—A. I don't make it; I am only a laborer myself; but I happened to be one of the foremens. I receive the checks for whatever mens works for me.

Q. Instead of money you pay them these checks?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know how long the men carried these before they got their money on them?—A. The check goes from Monday morning till Friday, and if you buys goods at his store you can do it. If I give you three dollars in checks, you get it cashed on Friday, and if you don't get it on Friday, then you gets it on Saturday.

Q. And the strike grew out of that practice, did it?—A. So they say, and for wages.

Q. So they got you pretty well frightened in the strike, did they?—A. O, yes, sir; they give me a couple of cuts in the strike.

Q. And you were frightened, were you not?—A. Yes, sir; I was frightened in the strike.

Q. And that lasted till the election?—A. It didn't last not till the election.

Q. But you kept remembering that?—A. O, yes, sir; I kept remembering, because they came on the place.

Q. Hadn't the strike broken up before the election?—A. The strike had stopped before the election.

Q. How long before?—A. I couldn't say rightly how long, whether it was three weeks or lesser or more.

Q. Was it about three weeks?—A. About three weeks, I reckon; I ain't certain.

Q. After it had all been quieted?—A. After the sheriff go down there and they thrashed him.

Q. That day all had become quieted?—A. Quiet! So far it ain't quiet yet, I don't believe.

Q. It is not quiet in your breast?—A. No, sir.

Q. When was it that your horse was taken?—A. The same very day, sir.

Q. What day?—A. Tuesday, the day of election.

Q. Where?—A. At Gardner's Corner bridge.

Q. At what time?—A. I suppose between 12 and 1 o'clock.

Q. I thought you were at the polls all day?—A. O, I was not at the polls all day, right to the poll, but I had to be around there all day. I was right at Gardner's Corner, and I went for Mr. Yoates.

Q. How far did you go?—A. I suppose about two miles from the polls, very near.

Q. Who took your horse?—A. A whole lot of fellows. The name of them I can't tell right now.

Q. You cannot give the name of any one?—A. I can give the name of a couple of them.

Q. Where do you say they left your horse?—A. At Sam Polite's; they left him there to take care of the horse.

Q. Where does he live?—A. He lives at Ball's pretty much. I don't know whether the place is Mr. Ball's or Mr. Dissee's.

Q. The horse was left with a person by the name of Sam Polite, a friend of yours?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did he remain there?—A. He went about three or four days, I suppose, or more, because I went there and got him. Polite said I could come and get him myself.

Q. And he took care of him?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he charge you anything for keeping him?—A. Didn't charge me anything, because he was very sorry they took the horse.

Q. You made so much then, did you not?—A. No, sir; because I wanted the use of the horse.

Q. You made his keeping?—A. I don't consider it at all. I was much obliged for his taking care of him.

Q. Is Polite a republican?—A. O, he is a republican, sir.

Q. A colored man?—A. Yes, sir; a colored man.

Q. What is his business?—A. He is working on a farm, sir.

Q. What is your business?—A. Mine is a foreman for Mr. Fuller; tending to his business on the plantation.

Q. What did you want with the horse?—A. O, I want a horse for everything. I has a great deal of use for a horse. Do you want me to tell you exactly what I want a horse for?

Q. The horse belonged to Mr. Fuller, did not it?—A. O, yes; I tell him my business.

Q. Then Polite's having the horse did not make any difference to you, did it?—A. No, sir; he saw it couldn't be helped, and he didn't mean to charge me or make any deduction because he had the horse.

Q. Was it Mr. Fuller's horse or your horse?—A. It was my own horse, sir; I had it for the purpose of getting around and seeing to my business, in the rice business, and he was gentleman enough not to charge me.

Q. Did he pay you for the use of the horse?—A. Mr. Fuller, sir?

Q. Yes.—A. No, sir; I don't call it pay for the use of the horse. I keeps a horse on the plantation; I tends to his business with a horse the same as an agent does who keeps a horse and goes around and tends to his business; of course he feeds him.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. This horse, I understand you to say, was taken from you because you were going after this man for the purpose of taking him to the poll to vote?—A. Certainly; that is all.

Q. Polite proved to be a friend of yours, did he not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say that these strikers thrashed the sheriff?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How came they to do that?—A. When the sheriff came out there, Mr. Sams, they telegraphed for him; Wilson, the present sheriff, he was off north somewhere, and Mr. Sams he came to quell the riot, and these mens of course gathered and said they would not be quelled, because the posse the sheriff had was white mens, and they didn't intend to be quelled; and Mr. Fuller being the trial-justice out there, he was along too, and they turned in on him and thrashed him and run him off, and Sams tell them if they didn't behave themselves better than that the United States would have to send troops down there and make them do something, and put them under military law; so they run Sams off, and gave him five or six hits and thrashed him, and ran the whole posse off, white and colored.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. How long was this before the election?—A. I think it was near about three weeks.

Q. How long before the election was it that the strike begun?—A. I can't say right what time.

Q. That strike didn't have anything to do with the election?—A. It had to do a great deal with the nature of persons.

Q. Had it anything to do with the election when it occurred?—A. When it occurred it didn't have very much to do with it.

Q. It was a matter other than politics?—A. It begun in another matter.

Q. Did you see them do anything to the sheriff?—A. O, yes, sir; I was right present. The sheriff take me right out of the rice-field. I was with a posse and Mr. Sams came right straight there, and I was riding around the rice-field shooting rice-birds, and he took me as I was.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. You say the strike at first didn't have anything to do with politics?—A. It didn't seem so, sir. They said all they wanted was more wages—one dollar and fifty cents, and more cash money.

Q. After that did it have anything to do with politics?—A. Yes, sir; afterward the colored democrats what vote for Hampton got so scared, so wild, as many of them didn't feel allowed to ride around in the night.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. You say you were a foreman?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What wages did you get?—A. Twenty dollars a month.

Q. What were the laborers paid?—A. The laborers get $12 a month.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. Your wages were the same that other foremen were getting?—A. O, yes, sir; that is the usual wages for all the foremen, and a good many gets more.

Q. They were not complaining of the wages the foremen were getting, were they?—A. No, sir; they only wanted to get $1.50 a day, and that in cash money. When we commenced, Mr. Fuller came down and told me to let the hands know—the drought was so severe this summer gone—that he could not afford to cash the check at the usual time; and if he couldn't cash them Saturday, the next Saturday; and who wanted to work regularly must expect to take them out in goods all the time.

Q. There was no trouble with Mr. Fuller's hands, was there?—A. No trouble at all. There wasn't three men of Mr. Fuller's place that went in the strike.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. You went in the strike?—A. I went by cowhiding, and was compelled.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. These strikers came down from Colleton County?—A. Yes, sir; and these other fellows joined with them, and when they got over there they didn't seem anxious but to whip these foremen, because they didn't seem to go along with them and make speeches.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. Did you make any speeches during the political canvass?—A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. How many?—A. I don't know rightly how many. I spoke pretty much the way I were asked. I didn't attend a great many meetings.

Q. About how many did you attend?—A. Three or four, I suppose; I was called upon to speak.

Q. Where was the first meeting you addressed?—A. The first meeting I attend, sir, was down here at Greenpoint.

Q. Was it a democratic meeting?—A. Yes, sir; it was a democrat meeting.

Q. Who else spoke there?—A. Myself and Henry Elliott, Jack Snipe, a colored man, and one Henry Green, and William Middleton and Julian Gadson spoke there that night.

Q. Was it an enthusiastic meeting?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many attended it?—A. I cannot tell rightly, because it was in the evening when we commenced.

Q. About how many?—A. I suppose about two or three hundred, sir.

Q. Any colored men there?—A. The majority of them was colored mens.

Q. Where was the next meeting at which you spoke?—A. At Gardner's Corner.

Q. How long was that before the election?—A. The next one I attended was a good while before the election, but the last one I attended—

Q. The next one after the first I mean?—A. It was a good while before the election; about, I suppose, two weeks before the election, sir.

- Q. Did you make a speech there?—A. Yes, sir; I did.
- Q. Were you the first speaker?—A. No, sir.
- Q. Who spoke before you?—A. Mr. Nathan Turner spoke before me, a colored man.
- Q. Were you at any meeting where the republicans came in and demanded to have the time divided?—A. I was at one joint discussion they had at Gardner's Corner.
- Q. But that was by arrangement?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Were you at any meeting where the republicans came to a democrat meeting and demanded that they should have half the time?—A. They done that at the third meeting we had at Mr. Sheldon's.
- Q. What occurred at that meeting?—A. They said if the democrat gentlemen was intended to speak they wanted to have half the meeting, or they would break the meeting up; and Mr. Fuller told them if they was any part of a gentleman they would not do it, because all the gentlemen there of the democrats were mens of good judgment, and supposed to be regular gentlemen, and they desired to hear the republicans as well as the democrats; and he said rather than have any row or fuss at all that meeting he would rather break the meeting up; and so he did break the meeting up.
- Q. Who broke the meeting up?—A. Mr. Fuller. He was the chairman that day of the meeting.
- Q. Was he a democrat?—A. Yes, sir; he was a democrat.
- Q. How long was that before the election?—A. That was about a week before the election.
- Q. So you didn't speak there?—A. No, sir; I didn't speak at all, because he said he had better break up the meeting because of the republican meeting. They said they would raise a row, and he said rather than there be any row, or shooting, or anything like that, he would rather that the meeting break up.
- Q. Did the republicans go on and have a meeting?—A. Yes, sir; they did so. But the democrats didn't speak.
- Q. It was a meeting the republicans had called?—A. No, sir; it was a meeting the democrats had called right on Mr. Sheldon's plantation.
- Q. What other meeting did you speak at?—A. At Gardner's Point, on Monday, and at the election on Tuesday.
- Q. Monday afternoon or evening?—A. No, sir; it was about one o'clock. I spoke about one o'clock.
- Q. Who else spoke there?—A. Mr. William Elliott, and Mr. J. C. J. Hudson, and Nathan Turner, and H. B. Stuart.
- Q. Who spoke first?—A. Mr. William Elliott.
- Q. Is he a colored man?—A. No, sir; he is a white man; a lawyer from Beaufort.
- Q. How long did that meeting last?—A. That meeting last a good while. Well, it didn't last there more than about three hours, because a good many of the gentlemen was gone. After the gentlemen began to leave the boys began to get soared, and they said, "Let's adjourn the meeting;" and so they did have the meeting at Sheldon.
- Q. The night before the election?—A. Yes, sir; the night before the election.
- Q. Did you speak there?—A. Yes, sir; I spoke there, right in my own house.
- Q. How many were there?—A. I suppose about thirty of us was there.
- Q. How many were at Gardner's Corner that afternoon?—A. I suppose between thirty and forty.
- Q. You didn't have a large audience there?—A. No, sir; we didn't have a large crowd.

By the CHAIRMAN:

- Q. These thirty or forty at Gardner's Corner were colored men, were they?—A. Yes sir.

The committee adjourned to meet to-morrow, Saturday, December 30, 1876, at 10 o'clock a. m.

CHARLESTON, S. C., December 30, 1876.

The committee met pursuant to adjournment.
General ROBERT SMALLS (colored) sworn and examined.

By Mr. L/PHAM:

- Q. Where do you reside?—A. In Beaufort, sir.
- Q. How long have you been a resident of the State?—A. I was born and raised in the State, and will be 38 years old in April.
- Q. Are you at present a member of the House of Representatives?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. How long have you been a member?—A. I was elected in 1874.
- Q. Were you a candidate in the last canvass?—A. I was, sir; I was a candidate for re-election.

Q. Where was the first meeting you attended?—A. The first meeting was called at Edgesfield Court-House on the 12th of August, which I attended, sir. I left Washington for the purpose of attending that meeting.

Q. Please go on in your own way, and state briefly the occurrences of that day—the time when you got there, and all that occurred.—A. We left Columbia on the morning of the 12th of August, at four o'clock, and as soon as we got into Edgesfield County there were crowds of men dressed in red shirts, with pistols to their sides. Some of them came into the car in which we were and wanted to know if the governor was aboard, or that nigger Congressman—meaning myself. We received all kinds of insults, until we reached Point House station, which is the station we got off at to go to Edgesfield. We then proceeded to Edgesfield Court-House in vehicles, which is seven miles from that station, getting there about nine o'clock. There was a large crowd of men in town, and they were coming in at every hour, on horses, whooping and yelling. The meeting was to have been held at the court-house square, but after seeing such a large crowd of the democrats with clubs coming into town, we deemed it unsafe, and thought it better to hold the meeting outside of town, at a place called the academy grounds, which was about a mile from the court-house. Before we started to go, however, a committee came over from the democratic side and said that they demanded an equal portion of the time of the meeting. We consulted together about it, and we agreed that, as it was a republican meeting and called specially for the ratification of Hayes and Wheeler, that we could not grant the time they asked for, and so informed the committee. Our platform was built in the grove, and our band of music went down the road and met the crowd formed in line that was to march to this place, where we were to have the meeting. Just about that time the democratic party had also formed in line, with General Butler and General Geary at their head, mounted, and between six and eight hundred men, also mounted. And they also started for the same place. When we got to one of the streets at the same time, we were ordered by General Butler to halt and let the white men pass. We halted, and they passed and proceeded to the grounds and surrounded the platform before we got there. When we got to the platform General Butler demanded half of the time, and wanted to know whether we were willing to give it, and that if we did not they intended to have it by fair or by foul means. Governor Chamberlain consented that he should have half of the time. Governor Chamberlain was introduced first. We undertook to elect the chairman of the meeting, and General Butler said, "No; we do not want a chairman." He said, "We intend to govern the meeting; it shall be a fair and square one, and every man shall have thirty minutes each to speak." Governor Chamberlain was introduced first. Then the white clubs all sang out, "No, he shall not speak. General Butler must speak first." General Butler got up and told them to be quiet, to hear Governor Chamberlain speak; that he would have the reply. They course then kept quiet. When Governor Chamberlain had spoken about five minutes, they commenced to interrupt him by calling him all kinds of names. They first asked him, "How about McDivitt?" "What did you get for appointing McDivitt for county treasurer?" "How much did he pay you?" "Why did you not have him arrested?" and all such questions. He had no more chance to speak, but stood there and answered several questions.

Q. Where were the white men?—A. Around the stage. They rode around the stage, and the republicans had to go behind their horses.

Q. How many of them were there?—A. I should judge between six and eight hundred were there that day.

Q. How were they armed?—A. They were armed with revolvers; some of them having as many as three revolvers buckled to their side.

Q. Did any of them have rifles?—A. One man had.

Q. Was there any use made of revolvers?—A. No, sir; except that they had them in their hands. I myself saw a man on the limb of a tree, right over Governor Chamberlain's head while he was speaking, who had his pistol pointed down at him; and General Geary shook his finger at him to stop. They were hung over the platform in the trees. Then General Butler took the stand and spoke thirty minutes without interruption, and heaped a great mass of abuse upon Mr. Chamberlain. In his speech he asked the crowd whether they were White Liners, and they answered no. He asked them again if they were Ku-Klux, and they said no. "Well," he says, "there is the man, Robert Smalls, [pointing to me,] who has used my name in the Halls of Congress as being the leader of Ku-Klux. I dare him to open his lips on this stand to-day." And the cry was heard from everybody, "Kill the damn son of a bitch! Kill the damn nigger!" After General Butler got through, Judge T. J. Mackey took the stand and spoke about twenty or twenty-five minutes amid a great deal of interruption from the democratic clubs.

Q. Did he speak for the republicans?—A. Yes, sir; he was one of the republican speakers. Mr. Chamberlain, Secretary of State Hayne, and myself were the republican speakers. After Mackey had gotten through, General Geary took the stand, and his speech was confined principally to abusing Mr. Chamberlain.

Q. Personal abuse, was it?—A. Personal abuse, sir. He charged him with everything. And when he had been speaking about twenty minutes, he said to the crowd, "Must I hit him again?" And they said, "Yes; give him some more." And he looked around upon Mr. Chamberlain and said, "You damn bald-headed renegade and bum-rider of Sherman's Army, and now so-called governor of South Carolina!"

I was to have spoken after General Geary, but after General Geary got through Judge Mackey got up to defend Governor Chamberlain against some of the abuse of General Geary, and the democrats hooted him down, and in no shape or form would allow him to speak. General Butler got up again and told them to keep quiet; that if Judge Mackey spoke he would reply to him. Judge Mackey then went on and spoke for about five or ten minutes, and then took his seat. Then General Butler got up and spoke for about five minutes in reply to Mackey's abuse, as he said, and with that the stage fell. As the stage fell down General Butler got upon the cross-piece that was laid there as a rail, and said he had replied to all that was necessary in Judge Mackey's speech, and that now he would put another gentleman—I have forgotten his name; he is a member of the present house—upon the stand. Mr. Lawrence Cain, who was then chairman, said that by agreement I should speak. With that a large crowd outside, between me and the wagon I was sitting in, said, "No; that God damn nigger shall not speak here to-day. If he opens his mouth here to-day we will take his life." Finding that the crowd was getting very furious, as I thought, and finding that my life was in danger—the expression I heard from a dozen or more men—myself, Mr. Jllson, and Mr. Hayne thought it was best to leave the meeting, and we left and went over to Cain's house.

Q. How many colored people were there?—A. From fifteen hundred to two thousand.

Q. You say it was called a republican ratification meeting?—A. Yes, sir; the first meeting of the campaign.

Q. Had the colored people any arms?—A. Not that I saw, sir. A few men had pistols. At Cain's house, I saw a few that had pistols.

Q. Were all these white men—these six or eight hundred—there with their horses?—A. All these men were mounted, sir.

Q. Where were they from?—A. They were from various portions of the county.

Q. Were there any there whom you know?—A. I do not live in Edgefield, sir, and am not personally acquainted with any of the men, except General Geary and General Butler. I do not know what portion of the county these men lived in, but, as I have stated, we met a great many on the road.

Q. What time did the meeting break up?—A. The meeting broke up about two o'clock. We had to leave there at four o'clock in order to catch the train to go back to Columbia.

Q. Where did you go from there?—A. I went from there back the same night to Columbia.

Q. On the way back what occurred?—A. After we got dinner we started off. We left the village at four o'clock in a buggy, and drove very fast for the Point-House Station, getting there about from a half to three-quarters of an hour before the train arrived. About thirty minutes before the train arrived twenty men dashed down the road at full speed. We got into the cars. They stood all around the windows, and one fellow said, "Where is that fellow Smalls; bring him out of the car; let us have him out here." I sat at the window, but paid no attention to it. Then four or five of them came into the car and walked through, and said, "Where is that nigger Congressman," and passed along. One fellow said, "Here he is;" and he then passed between me and the door and stood up and looked back at me, and said, "Let us have a look of his hair." One of them said, "No, damn it, he won't come back here again." Another said, "Let us get him out and hang him; that is the only way to keep him from coming back here." With that the conductor pulled the string and the train started off.

When we got to Johnson's Station another crowd came in the car and went through pretty much the same thing, till we got down to what is called Ridge-Spring Station.

Q. This was on the 12th of August?—A. The 12th of August; yes, sir.

Q. How many other meetings did you attend during the canvass?—A. I attended one more meeting in Edgefield County after that, on the 14th of October.

Q. Was that a republican meeting?—A. That was also a republican meeting.

Q. State whether the democrats came there in force at that meeting.—A. On the 14th of October I also attended a meeting, and in going to that meeting we left Columbia on the four-o'clock train.

Q. I do not care about the details of that meeting now. I only wish to know whether the democrats came in force at that meeting?—A. They came there with about two thousand men.

Q. How were they organized and equipped?—A. They were not so extensively armed as they were at the first meeting, but there was any number of them who had pistols buckled to their sides.

Q. How were they uniformed?—A. They were dressed in red shirts.

Q. How many of them were there there?—A. At that meeting there was about two thousand men came into town mounted on horses.

Q. If they disturbed the meeting in any way, please state how.—A. We went over to the same place—they held a meeting in the town—and they organized their meeting before we did.

Q. If they disturbed your meeting in any way, state how.—A. General Butler and General Geary rode over to our meeting on horseback and stated that they were going to ride around our meeting. They then went back and organized their men, General Butler at the head of their columns, columns of four abreast, and marched around our meeting, whooping and yelling for Hampton as they marched around. Phillip Brown was speaking at the time they marched around.

Q. Was Thompson there?—A. Yes, sir; Jim Thompson was there.

Q. Were you at the meeting at Blackville?—A. Yes, sir; on the 19th of October.

Q. Was there any disturbance at that meeting?—A. The organization of the clubs came in the same manner.

Q. How many?—A. I should judge there were between six and eight hundred mounted on horses.

Q. How were they uniformed?—A. The greater part of them were dressed in red shirts.

Q. Did they have any arms?—A. I did not see any arms but on one man, and he was at our meeting.

Q. Was your meeting disturbed any?—A. The meeting was only disturbed by this one man. When George W. Clark, a republican, was speaking, this man said he was a "God damn liar," and with that he drew his pistol, and some of the men there caught him.

Q. Were there any white men there at that time?—A. Yes, sir; plenty of them; and with that the United States marshal stopped him.

Q. There was another meeting at Allendale. When was that?—A. On the 23d of October.

Q. Was there any disturbance there?—A. There was considerable disturbance.

Q. How many white people were there?—A. I should judge there were about one thousand there.

Q. Democrats?—A. Democrats.

Q. How were they uniformed?—A. I noticed about, perhaps, one hundred who were dressed in red shirts.

Q. How did they come there?—A. I do not know, sir; I was rather late in getting to the meeting.

Q. Were they on foot when you saw them?—A. All on foot. I came up on a special train from Beaufort.

Q. How did they interfere with that meeting?—A. There was considerable noise all around the outskirts of the meeting. There were some five or eight shots fired—exchange shots between parties there. One white party, shooting at a colored man, missed him and shot a democrat in the face. That was all on the outside, and did not interfere with anybody that was speaking.

Q. During this period did you receive a threatening letter?—A. I received, I suppose, a dozen or two during the campaign.

Q. I speak of one in regard to your circulating congressional documents. When did you receive that letter?—A. Some time in October.

Q. Where was it post-marked?—A. It was post-marked Barnwell, sir. Barnwell village is called Barnwell.

Q. Was it an anonymous letter?—A. It was.

Q. What has become of that letter?—A. I really do not know. It must be somewhere among my old bundles. I received so many letters of that kind that I never thought it was necessary to preserve any of them.

Q. Is it in existence or not?—A. I do not think it is, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN

Q. Did you look for that letter before you came here?—A. No, sir; I have not looked for it.

Q. You do not know whether it is preserved or not?—A. I do not know that it is.

Q. Have you any recollection of destroying it?—A. I have no distinct recollection of destroying it.

Q. You have not looked for it particularly?—A. No, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Can you send and get it if it is in existence?—A. I doubt that very much, sir; I would rather state that it has been destroyed. I make it a regular practice of looking over my old letters now and then and destroying them.

Q. You believe it to be destroyed?—A. O yes, sir; I do not recollect of destroying that particular letter, but I think it has been destroyed.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. But you have not looked for it to see whether it has been destroyed ?—A. No, sir ; I have not looked for it to see whether it has been destroyed. Day before yesterday I sat down to look over a lot of letters, and destroyed, I suppose, a hundred of them—letters that had been written to me in the summer in regard to business here in Washington.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. Do you destroy all your letters except business letters ?—A. I do, more or less ; yes, sir. Letters for particular use I mark.

Q. Did you do it with this letter with a view of preserving it ?—A. No, sir ; as I have stated, I have received so many of these letters during the campaign—during the last two or three years—that I did not think of preserving them.

Mr. Lapham here offered to prove the contents of the letter, but was overruled, on the ground that the proper legal basis had not been laid.

Q. Were any complaints made by the democrats to you for circulating congressional documents ?—A. No, sir.

Q. Where were you during election-day ?—A. I was in the town of Beaufort all day, sir, by the special request of the democrats of that town.

Q. During that day did you discover the circulation of a ticket like this, (showing the witness a ticket, of which the following is a fac-simile :)

Constitutional Amendment—YES.

A. That was the regular republican ticket, sir, printed for the entire State.

Q. The other is the ticket which you discovered in circulation?—A. Yes, sir; the democrats they got up an imitation of the republican ticket.

Mr. LAPHAM offered the two tickets shown the witness in evidence, copies of which are given on a preceding page.

Q. You brought these tickets here, did you not?—A. I did, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. You say you saw this ticket at Beaufort?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see it anywhere else?—A. I was only at the Beaufort poll. I was there all day.

Q. You did not see it anywhere else?—A. I was not at any other poll.

Q. What time of day did you see it there?—A. Between eight and nine o'clock.

Q. Who had it there?—A. All the democratic distributors.

Q. Did you see all the democratic distributors with them?—A. I saw them in the hands of about six men.

Q. Colored men?—A. Both colored and white.

Q. How many white men had them?—A. Well, the clerk in Dr. Stuart's drug-store and young Harrison also had them. A colored man by the name of Holmes had them, a colored man by the name of Simmon had them, and a colored man by the name of Barkis Middleton had them.

Q. Were they democrats?—A. Yes, sir; and a colored man by the name of Rhett had them; and I further saw that these tickets come from all the polls where there were any democratic tickets polled. I was at the board of county canvassers when they counted the votes, and those tickets appeared from nearly all the precincts in the county.

Q. How many of these votes printed in red ink did you see?—A. Which do you mean, republican or democratic?

Q. Democratic.—A. I saw them in nearly every poll.

Q. How many did you see?—A. I did not count particularly every vote.

Q. I asked you how many you saw. You say you saw some.—A. I saw some, but I could not tell the number. The democrats polled about two thousand two hundred votes in Beaufort County.

Q. My question is, how many of those tickets did you see?—A. I cannot answer that question.

Q. Did you see a dozen of them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, now, how many did you see?—A. You get back to the same question again. I say I saw some of those tickets come in from every poll in Beaufort where any democratic votes were polled at all, so that those tickets were at every poll in the county; and they were so reported to have been cast at every poll. Here is another style of democratic ticket they had, [producing a ticket of which that given below is a facsimile.]

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. Where do you know of that ticket being circulated?—A. This ticket was circulated all about the polls at Beaufort.

Q. That was the ticket that made its appearance there at the polls at Beaufort?—A. Yes, sir; lying on the manager's table. Every distributor had three or four tickets. Everything was friendly at the Beaufort poll, and we exchanged tickets and laughed over it, and everything of that kind.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. The only name of a democratic candidate that ticket has on it for the State is Hampton?—A. Yes, sir.

(Mr. Lapham now offered the ticket, copied above, in evidence.)

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. Did you hear anything during the canvass from the democrats in regard to the discharge of laborers in case they did not vote the democratic ticket? and, if so, state what you heard.—A. No, sir; I did not hear anything.

Q. You didn't hear any threats of that kind made yourself?—A. No, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. Do you live in Beaufort?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say that you attended the polls there that day at the special request of the democrats?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why did they request you especially to attend the polls there?—A. About three days prior to the election, Dr. Stuart sent for me.

Q. Who is Dr. Stuart?—A. Dr. Stuart is a democrat and a very respectable gentleman, living in that town, with the largest practice of any physician in the town. He sent for me to say that he had been informed that on the day of the election the colored women were going to have a row in town. He said he did not believe a word of it, but that all the white ladies were very much disturbed about it, and on examination had found that all the leading republicans, such as myself and Gleaves and others, were going to be out of town on that day, and for that reason he was inclined to believe it. I told him that there was not a word of truth in it, because I did not believe that there could be a riot of any kind gotten up in the town of Beaufort except that I knew something about it. I told him if they feared anything of the kind, however, I would remain there. He said if I could remain in town he would feel more safe. "As for myself," he said, "I feel perfectly safe; I do not believe a word of it." "But," he says, "the ladies of the town would feel better satisfied if you were in town, as I feel that you can control your people here." I told him that if that was the desire of the white ladies of the town I should remain.

Q. You remained there during the day?—A. I remained there during that day, sir; all day.

Q. What was the vote at Beaufort that day?—A. The vote was 561 republicans to 115 democrats.

Q. What was the vote at that town in 1874 between Green and Chamberlain?—A. I cannot tell you the exact number, sir; but there was a difference of 17. Chamberlain carried the town by 17 majority.

Q. What was the aggregate vote in 1874?—A. The aggregate vote, I think, was 500 and something. I have forgotten the exact figures.

Q. What was the increase of vote in Beaufort this year over the vote of 1874?—A. It was something very near 3,000, sir.

Q. Who carried that county in 1874?—A. Chamberlain carried it two to one.

Q. What was Chamberlain's majority in that county in 1874?—A. It is a matter of record. I think it is about 3,000.

Q. What was the republican majority this year?—A. Something over 5,300 and some odd votes. The vote of this year tallies about with the vote of 1868 and 1870.

Q. You have no registration in this State, have you?—A. Only the registration of 1868.

Q. You have had no registration since 1868?—A. No, sir. We have the United States census for 1870 and the census of the State for 1875.

Q. Voters in this State can vote at any poll in the county, can they not?—A. Any poll in the county, sir.

Q. This first meeting at Edgefield was at what time?—A. On the 12th of August.

Q. Was that before or after the nomination of Governor Hampton?—A. That was before the nomination of anybody.

Q. It was before the nomination of either General Hampton or Mr. Chamberlain?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. About the opening of the canvass?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say that Governor Chamberlain and Judge Mackey spoke there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What other republican?—A. They did not allow any other republican to speak.

Q. I ask you what other republican spoke?—A. None other, sir.

Q. What democrat spoke?—A. General Butler and General Goary and this gentleman that is a member of the house now. I have forgotten his name.

Q. The man who was afterward elected to the legislature from that county?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is his name?—A. I do not remember his name. His name is familiar to me, too. He is a man who takes a leading part in the house.

Q. You say that during Governor Chamberlain's speech he was interrupted by the crowd asking him about McDivitt?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was McDivitt?—A. McDivitt was the county treasurer of that county. He ran away, and it was charged that he was a defaulter, and for whom Governor Chamberlain had offered a reward of $1,000.

Q. Had Chamberlain offered a reward for him then?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many county treasurer defaulters have they had in that county. They had two or three before that, hadn't they?—A. Not that I know of.

Q. Did you never hear of it?—A. I thought you objected to hearsay testimony?

Q. I asked you if you had not heard of any other defaulter before that?

(Mr. Lapham objected.)

The CHAIRMAN. That is a matter of public notoriety.

The WITNESS. I am reflecting. I do not want to evade any question. I am trying to recollect, now, whether there was or not. It strikes me that there was a treasurer there who was charged with being a defaulter.

Q. McDivitt had been appointed in his place, had he not?—A. Well, now, I do not know, sir. Edgefield is 200 miles from my county, but it strikes me forcibly, as all treasurers have to be confirmed by the senate, that McDivitt was appointed in this man's place.

Q. There was a good deal of feeling out there in Edgefield County about this treasurer's defaulting and the loss of money, was there not?—A. The first time I was ever in Edgefield in my life was that day to attend the meeting. Edgefield was always considered a county not very safe to go into.

Q. Edgefield is in your congressional district, is it not?—A. Yes, sir. I take what I said in my last answer back. I attended a meeting there two years ago. I attended the meeting and came away the same afternoon.

Q. How many colored men were at that meeting that day?—A. I should judge between 1,500 and 2,000.

Q. It was a large meeting?—A. Very large, sir.

Q. You say that you saw several men there with pistols?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You do not pretend to say that all the democrats you saw came there in that procession had pistols, do you?—A. I mean to say that every white man had two or three pistols buckled to his side.

Q. Every white man?—A. Every white man I saw mounted, sir.

Q. Were there any colored men in that procession?—A. I think there were nine, sir.

Q. Did they have pistols, too?—A. They had pistols buckled to their sides.

By Mr. EDEN:

Q. This is the first meeting you are speaking about?—A. Yes, sir; there were nine colored men in that procession.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. You say you saw some colored men with pistols?—A. Yes, sir; I had one myself.

Q. Well, it is quite the usage in South Carolina for people to wear arms, is it not?—A. Well, among the whites it is, sir; that is the general rule.

Q. Don't colored people carry them?—A. Well, I have seen some with them, but they don't carry them so generally as the whites. It is a rare thing in the up-country to go without carrying a pistol. I have seen them in the ears.

Q. You say that General Butler, in his speech, asked this crowd if they were White-liners and Ku-Klux?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then he turned upon you and said you had charged that upon him?—A. Yes, sir; I was sitting in a wagon, not more than ten feet from the stage; the wheel of the wagon nearly touched the edge of the stage.

Q. And he said you had charged that upon him in Congress?—A. And he said that I had charged that upon him in Congress.

Q. Who replied to Chamberlain?—A. General Butler, sir.

Q. General Butler replied to Chamberlain?—A. General Butler replied to Mr. Chamberlain, sir.

Q. And he spoke about five minutes?—A. General Butler spoke about thirty minutes without being interrupted by anybody.

Q. I thought you said he had devoted five minutes in reply to Chamberlain?—A. That was the second time General Butler spoke.

Q. It was in reply to Chamberlain or to Mackey, which?—A. General Butler replied to Chamberlain in half an hour's speech.

Q. Then Mackey spoke?—A. Then Mr. Mackey replied to General Butler.

Q. In defense of Chamberlain?—A. In defense of the republican party.

Q. Mackey made a pretty fair speech himself, didn't he? He is a pretty full talking man, is he not?—A. I looked upon his speech that day as acting the part of a traitor.

Q. Why?—A. Because he went there to make a republican speech, and when he was introduced General Gary introduced him as a democrat in disguise.

Q. There are a good many of that sort of men in this State, democrats in disguise, are there not?—A. To their shame, sir, there are.

Q. Mackey spoke for Hayes, didn't he?—A. He did on that occasion, and very strong for Governor Chamberlain.

Q. At that time neither Governor Chamberlain nor General Hampton had been nominated?—A. No, sir.

Q. At that time Mr. Chamberlain was regarded very favorably by the democrats in this State, was he not?—A. He was sir.

Q. Mr. Chamberlain himself, previous to that, had been under some suspicion as to his fealty to his party by a great many republicans in this State?—A. I do not know, sir; I was in Washington, you know, all the time.

Q. Don't you know that to exist as a political fact?—A. No, sir, not to that extent. I, for one, was certainly in favor of Governor Chamberlain.

Q. But wasn't there a considerable element of the republican party in this State who looked upon Chamberlain's fealty to the party with suspicion at the beginning of the last summer?—A. I cannot say.

Q. You are a politician here in the State, and are familiar with its politics. Don't you know that to be a political fact?—A. I was in Washington. I have heard, of course—I have heard that there was a great deal of dissatisfaction here among the republicans.

Q. At that time there had been no convention, and it was not known who would be nominated on either ticket, was it?—A. No, sir; there had been no convention yet.

Q. This man Gary that you speak of as having made a speech there is rather a violent and extreme man, is he not?—A. I consider him one of the wildest and most extreme men in South Carolina.

Q. At this meeting at Blackville you say the only disturbance there was by one man who had a pistol, and who said that one of the speakers was a God-damn liar. He was arrested and taken off, was he?—A. Yes, sir, and kept until the meeting adjourned, and then let go.

Q. Do you say that there was a United States commissioner there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At this second meeting at which you were at Edgely, there was a United States commissioner with you, was there not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. This man Thompson, from Columbia?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And United States deputy marshals?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they arrest anybody there that day?—A. No, sir.

Q. This ticket that you speak of being distributed at Beaufort, all that you know about it is that you found the ticket in circulation by the democrats. Did you have any talk with them about it at the time you got it?—A. No, nothing definite. Of course, the democrats were friendly with me in Beaufort, and we had a talk, of course, about the tickets.

Q. Did they make any statement to you at the time you got the ticket why it was printed that way?—A. No, sir. The face of the ticket will show why it was done.

Q. This other ticket that you presented here, printed in black ink, has all the republican candidates on it except Hampton for governor?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Who was circulating that ticket—the dark ticket with Hampton's name on it? Who was it circulated by in Beaufort?—A. By some of the men who claimed to be Hampton men.

Q. Was it by democratic or republican men?—A. By the democrats, sir; the republicans distributed nothing but our regular ticket.

Q. You saw how the democrats had these tickets; how did they hold them?—A. There was a regular democratic ticket—a black ticket—and they had that red ticket underneath it. They would go up and offer a man the ticket, and if he said, "No, I want a republican ticket," they would say, "Very well, I will give that to you."

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did you see that?—A. Yes, sir, I saw that; and he would pull that red ticket out. The red ticket would be sticking out beyond the black ticket, so you could see the head of the Union republican ticket with "victory" printed on it.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. You saw the tickets given out in the way you described?—A. I saw that in the hands of Mr. Harrison, and that is the way I discovered it, by seeing him offer a ticket, and the man refused, and then Harrison saying, "I will give you a republican ticket;"

and I took the ticket up and examined it. I asked him for a ticket and he gave me one.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. What was that man's name?—A. Joe Harrison.

Q. Is he a white man?—A. He is a white man, and a storekeeper in Beaufort—a member of the democratic club.

Q. Was he the only one you saw with it?—A. He was the only one I saw. When asked about it, he says, "Let us exchange; you vote my ticket and I will vote yours," and handed me one of those red tickets. This was after I found it out, and I got to talking to Mr. Clancy about it. He is a northern man, and a very jovial man. He says, "Here, Smalls, you vote my ticket and I will vote yours."

Q. Where is this man Clancy from?—A. I think he is from the State of New York originally; I am certain he is from New York.

Q. He lives at Beaufort?—A. Yes, sir; he has been living there for several years now. His sister keeps the hotel there.

Q. There was a number of men in the country who voted the whole republican ticket except for governor, was there not?—A. I do not know. Our colored republicans generally got the republican ticket.

Q. I say there was a number of republicans who voted the whole republican ticket excepting Hampton for governor?—A. I am satisfied there was a considerable number in the town of Beaufort, because Hampton ran ahead of his ticket there.

By Mr. EDEN:

Q. When did you come down from Columbia?—A. I came down from Columbia last night was a week ago.

Q. Was the subcommittee there examining witnesses from Edgefield before you left there?—A. That I do not know. There were two men from Edgefield there waiting to see the committee.

Q. I only wanted to know whether it was a fact that they were taking testimony from Edgefield?—A. There were none examined before I left Columbia, to my knowledge.

Q. What distance is Edgefield from here?—A. You would have to go to Columbia or Augusta to get to Edgefield. It is about two hundred miles from here.

Q. How near is it to Columbia?—A. It is on the Columbia and Augusta road. It is seventy-five or eighty miles, I believe.

A. E. WILDER recalled and further examined.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Question. Look at these two ballots, (handing witness ballots already in evidence.) Will you state whether these are the same description of ballot you saw at Mitchellville?—Answer. They are the same, sir.

Q. One is the regular republican ticket, and the other a democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The same description of ballot that was found in that box during the late canvass?—A. The same.

Q. Do you know Mr. Van Ness?—A. I do.

Q. What is his first name?—A. I do not remember his initials.

Q. Mr. Van Ness, of Beaufort, I mean, who was one of the managers at Gray's Hill?—A. Yes, sir; he was one of the managers at Gray's Hill.

Q. Did you call on Mr. Van Ness about two weeks ago with a view of getting his signature to any paper?—A. Yes, sir; it was an affidavit with reference to their returns made by the managers at the Gray's Hill precinct. It was a little irregularity.

Q. What was the irregularity?—A. I am not positive. There were three precincts where the managers made clerical errors in their returns. I think, at this poll, they only included in their returns three of the electors on each side; three republicans and three democrats. I won't be positive that that was the poll.

Q. You are right about it. It was an omission of a portion of the electors on each ticket. And you had an affidavit to correct that mistake?—A. Yes, sir; I have an affidavit to correct that error.

Q. Is that all you asked him to do?—A. That was all.

Q. And that was the object?—A. That was the object.

Q. Were you in Columbia at the time the congressional committee arrived there?—A. I was.

Q. How long before?—A. I arrived there on the morning that the legislature met, on the 28th.

Q. How many days had you been there?—A. Ten days. I think it was ten days.

Q. You were there, then, during the whole of the same week?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hear the address of General Hampton to the assemblage on Tuesday evening?—A. I did.

Q. To the clubs who were there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State what he said.—A. He said, "Gentlemen, I do not know what you are here for; you have come to attend the fair; but, if so, you come one day too soon." And he advised them to keep quiet.

Q. That was the only allusion he made to the fair?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. On the next evening, Wednesday evening, did you hear the address made by Moise?—A. This address of Hampton was made on Tuesday, the 29th, I think; I am not certain of the date; but the evening before the committee arrived in Columbia, Mr. Moise addressed them a short time.

Q. Where was that?—A. It was just below the Wheeler House, on the same street.

Q. A public address in the street?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. If he said anything on that subject, state what he said.—A. He said, "Gentlemen, I want you all to go home. The congressional committee are coming here tomorrow, and we want to see no demonstrations of such crowds"—or language to that effect—"while they are here."

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. When did you tell Judge Lapham about this?—A. Last evening.

Q. How came you to tell him about it?—A. Well, I was in his room, and we were talking over the affairs that occurred in Columbia.

Q. When were you examined here before?—A. Yesterday.

Q. What are you staying in the city for?—A. Mr. Lapham requested me to stay and testify as to the affidavit that Van Ness made.

Q. You voluntarily told him about this?—A. I did.

Q. You considered it of political importance, did you?—A. Well, I didn't think at the time I was telling him this that it would come before the committee.

Q. You knew that the committee had been up to Columbia?—A. I did.

Q. And you told him about this in his room last night? Was this after he told you that you must remain here to testify about the Van Ness matter?—A. I am not certain whether it was or not.

Q. What did you say about it?—A. I think it was after.

Q. What were you doing up at Columbia at the time you speak of?—A. I went up for the purpose of seeing the governor inaugurated.

Q. Did those other people come there to see the governor inaugurated, too?—A. This was after the governor was inaugurated.

Q. That was after Chamberlain was inaugurated?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Didn't they come there to see Hampton inaugurated?—A. Well, I went up there for another purpose, too.

Q. What other purpose?—A. To secure the appointment of treasurer of Beaufort County.

Q. To get the appointment of treasurer from Governor Chamberlain?—A. I did.

Q. Who prepared this affidavit to be signed by Van Ness?—A. It was the gentleman who is in the comptroller-general's office.

Q. At Columbia?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that after the congressional committee got there?—A. It was before.

Q. Do you remember what day it was?—A. I do not.

Q. Was it after this speech by Hampton that you speak of?—A. Yes, sir; but not after the speech of Moise.

Q. It was between the speech of Hampton and the arrival of the congressional committee?—A. It was.

Q. Prepared in the comptroller-general's office, and you brought it down with you?—A. I did.

Q. Did Van Ness sign it?—A. He did not.

Q. Did the other managers sign it?—A. I think they did.

Q. Did you see them?—A. I didn't see them. I gave it to Mr. Wheeler, the gentleman who will be before you.

Q. You do not know whether it was signed yourself, of your own knowledge?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was that the only affidavit you brought down?—A. No, sir.

Q. How many did you bring down?—A. Three.

Q. For three other precincts?—A. Two other precincts.

Q. Three altogether?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you present them to Van Ness too?—A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Were there other affidavits made?—A. Only those three affidavits.

Q. Did the managers of the other precincts sign the other affidavits?—A. I do not know of my own knowledge. Mr. Cavandar was the gentleman who drew up the affidavits.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Did you ask Mr. Van Ness to make any new return, or present any new managers' return, or only an affidavit?—A. No, sir; there was simply a clerical error in their return.

Q. Did the others relate to clerical errors also?—A. Yes, sir.

F. D. J. LAWRENCE (colored) sworn and examined.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Question. Where do you reside?—Answer. I live at Beaufort. I was, the day of election, however, at Gray's Hill precinct, seven miles from town.

Q. What time did you go to Gray's Hill precinct?—A. I arrived at Gray's Hill about half past six o'clock.

Q. How long did you stay there?—A. I staid there till the afternoon, about between two and three o'clock, and went back to Beaufort. During my stay everything passed off quiet.

Q. Who was United States supervisor there for the democrats?—A. I am not certain as to the other; I know one, John F. Porteous, in the interest of the democratic party.

Q. Was he there when you reached there?—A. He was there; he was outside when I reached there.

Q. What was he doing outside?—A. He was outside with two large batches of tickets.

Q. Where did he have the tickets; in his hands?—A. Yes, sir; turned head and tails.

Q. What was he doing with them?—A. Asking the people to vote the republican ticket—saying to them, these are the republican tickets.

Q. Did you ascertain what tickets they were in fact?—A. I came out, sir, and started for the crowd that surrounded Mr. Porteous. I inquired, when I got near the tail feet of the mob, and they said one man had received a ticket from Porteous, and he handed the ticket to me and asked me if it was a good ticket, and I looked at it and see it headed "Union Republican Ticket," with "Victory," and the first name appeared was Tilden, and Hampton for governor, and I found it was a democrat ticket—all the names.

Q. Look at these tickets, [handing witness two ballots already in evidence,] and state whether they were tickets like these?—A. Precisely the same, sir.

Q. How many had Porteous in his hands?—A. He had two large batches.

Q. How was he holding them?—A. He was holding them in this way, two together.

Q. That is, reversed?—A. Yes, sir; reversed, and gave them out this way.

Q. State what you saw him do.—A. I saw him give out a ticket to a man, and pull it from underneath.

Q. Had the man asked for what?—A. He asked the union republican ticket, and it was a democrat ticket, and he pulled it from under the republican ticket. Mr. Porteous gave it.

Q. And what occurred when you learned that?—A. The voting ceased for fully five minutes or more, and everybody was talking and running about and looking after the tickets in each other's hands until they was satisfied that the correction was made before they would commence again.

Q. What was said or done?—A. Some spoke very loudly to Mr. Porteous, very disrespectful, for giving them the republican ticket which was not the republican ticket. They said to him, "You cheat us; you tell us this was a republican ticket, and it was not;" and after some talk the crowd dispersed. Mr. Porteous went in the house then, and took his seat again beside the ballot-box, remaining in his position as supervisor.

Q. Did he come out again?—A. Yes, sir; he came out again.

Q. How long after?—A. Well, he staid in there about half an hour or more, and when he came out he had the real democratic tickets—white—different ink.

Q. He came out with tickets printed in black ink?—A. Yes, sir. He resumed canvassing as before, asking the people to vote for these. The people would not vote it and drew a large crowd around him, talking again. One man sang out in the crowd, "You ought to pay me for the wood I have been chopping for you." Mr. Porteous got insulted then, and they talked pretty loud to each other.

Q. There was words about it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did he remain out that time?—A. Well, he remained out, I will say, one hour or more, trying to get all the votes he can; begging them and asking them.

Q. Where did he then go?—A. He went in the house then again.

Q. Where did he remain after that, while you were there?—A. When I left he was inside.

Q. He remained in until you left?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When it was discovered that Porteous had these red tickets, what did he say, if anything, about it?—A. Well, he made some excuse. He said that they had better vote that ticket anyhow, because the other ticket—there was not many getting in the box. He said this was the best ticket any way.

Q. How was the voting after that, while you remained? Was there any further disturbance—that is, while you were there?—A. No disturbance at all, sir.

Q. Was there any feeling exhibited there, that you saw, except these two instances with Mr. Porteous?—A. No, sir; none at all.

Q. Do you know Mr. Hammond, a white man, a railroad-man?—A. I do, sir; I am personally acquainted with him.

Q. Did you see him there that day?—A. I did.

Q. Do you know whether he voted?—A. I don't think he did; he was there talking, however, to the crowd. I saw him standing off, talking to a large crowd. I won't say whether he voted or not.

Q. You don't remember his voting?—A. I don't think he voted.

Q. Did you talk with him? Did you hear him say anything about voting?—A. I didn't hear him say anything about voting.

Q. How many colored people were there that day around the poll?—A. There was a large number, sir.

Q. How many white people?—A. Not many, sir; I would not say five white persons were there.

Q. Did you see any arms?—A. No, sir.

Q. Nothing of that kind?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was there any trouble there during the day while you were there, except what you have stated about Porteous?—A. Nothing at all, sir; the people are naturally quiet in that section of country.

Q. They were quiet on that day?—A. Yes, sir; on that day generally quiet.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. You live in Beaufort, do you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you lived there?—A. I returned to Beaufort the 25th of November last, a year ago—November ultimo, a year ago.

Q. Where did you come from when you went there?—A. From Charleston.

Q. How long had you lived in Charleston?—A. Twelve years or more.

Q. What business were you engaged in at Beaufort?—A. Attorney at law.

Q. How long have you been practicing law?—A. I was admitted the 5th of February, 1875, and practicing acceptably from that date to the present.

Q. To yourself or the community?—A. I don't think that have any bearing upon the case, but I think it was the community; yes, sir; to the community I regard it, sir.

Q. Did you have any expressions of approbation from the community as to your professional services?—A. I think I have, sir.

Q. What were they?—A. They were satisfied, sir, with my practice as such.

Q. The community so expressed itself?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You practice constantly, I suppose?—A. Not very, sir.

Q. Did you make any political speeches in the late campaign?—A. I did, sir; took a very active part; closed up my office.

Q. Where did you canvass?—A. In Beaufort County. Well, I canvassed generally in the five congressional district.

Q. Where else did you canvass besides canvassing in Beaufort County?—A. I canvassed a part of Barnwell, Colleton, and Beaufort.

Q. What time did you leave Beaufort on the morning of the election?—A. I leave Beaufort that morning, I think, about half past five o'clock, in a buggy.

Q. At whose request did you go to Gray's Hill?—A. At the request of General Smalls.

Q. Why did he request you to go out there?—A. I don't know his reason. He asked me to go out and do what I can and assist the people, and see that they voted the proper tickets.

Q. Was there another colored man there at Beaufort by the name of Lawrence?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is his name?—A. There are several Lawrences there, sir. There is one Lawrence that will testify here by the name of William Lawrence; he was at the poll.

Q. At what poll?—A. Gray's Hill poll, the poll I am testifying now about.

Q. What time did he come there?—A. I met him sitting right beside the box.

Q. At what time?—A. About half past six o'clock, I stated.

Q. About half past six you met him there?—A. Yes, sir; I met William Lawrence. I met him at the poll when I arrived.

Q. Do you know how he came to be there?—A. William Lawrence there you mean?

Q. Yes.—A. I don't know how he came to be there. I regard that he went there to vote.

Q. Beaufort was his home, was it not?—A. No, sir; he keeps a store right there within two miles of the poll.

Q. Then he didn't come from Beaufort? You say he lived out there within two miles of this poll, and that this was his poll?—A. Yes, sir. Do I understand you to say he didn't come from Beaufort?

Q. Yes.—A. He didn't live in Beaufort.

Q. Did you see any other man named Lawrence there from Beaufort except this one named William?—A. No; I don't recollect. I have got a brother there by the name of Lawrence, but he didn't come there. He voted in Beaufort.

Q. You say you were sent there by General Smalls?—A. He requested me to go.

Q. You went at his request?—A. Not entirely; I went because I was desirous of doing something.

Q. You went there in the interest of your ticket and party?—A. Yes, sir; the ticket of the party which I sympathize with.

Q. What time did you see Porteous with those tickets?—A. Immediately upon my arrival. When I jumped out of the buggy he was standing there with a large group.

Q. That was a little after six o'clock you saw him with a large group around him?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had the voting begun then?—A. Yes, sir. I met men in buggies two miles, who stated to me they voted, and I held up a ticket like that—a red ticket.

Q. You held up the republican ticket to them?—A. Yes, sir; the republican ticket; and I put to one or two the question if they voted, and they said yes, and I said, "Voted a ticket like that?" and they said, "Yes," they voted one like that. I was driving in a buggy very fast.

Q. You are very certain of having held up that ticket to them, and asked them if they had voted it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say that the second time you saw Porteous out he was having words with a colored man?—A. I stated I didn't know his name. But a man in the crowd demanded of Porteous to pay him for the wood he had cut for him, instead of worrying about the ticket.

Q. Had they any words?—A. They were very loud. I regarded it as an insult to Mr. Porteous. I should not like a man to speak to me that way; they said you had better pay me. But at the same time there was no disturbance.

Q. There was quite a large crowd around?—A. Yes, sir; there was a pretty large crowd around.

Q. Porteous then went back into the house?—A. Not immediately; he staid there and talked quite a long time before he went into the house.

Q. When they got through with that talk he went into the house and remained in there during the time you were there?—A. No, sir; he came out again, I stated, with his real ticket then.

Q. You stated that when he came out the second time with his real ticket was when this controversy occurred between him and this colored man?—A. O, no, sir; I didn't state it that way. If I did I will ask leave to correct myself.

Q. What do you say now was the time when you heard this talk of this man demanding pay for this wood that he had cut?—A. I now say it was the first time he was out there. He might have been there the second time too.

Q. You didn't hear that the second time when he came out?—A. I might have heard it. I would not say not. I am satisfied I heard it the first time.

Q. And you think it may have been renewed when he came out the second time?—A. O, it might have been renewed.

Q. What is your impression about it?—A. Without you desire me to say so, sir, I do not say that I heard him the second time.

Q. Do you know how many democratic votes were polled there that day?—A. Yes, sir; I have got a diary right here of every vote in the county—a memorandum in short: nine democrat votes were cast there.

Q. How many republican votes?—A. Four hundred and seventy-six.

Q. How many white men did you see at the polls that day?—A. I don't know, sir. I would say there was five persons there. There is very few white people. I could name three: John F. Porteous, this United States supervisor, and one man by the name of Van Ness and this Pat Hammoud.

Q. Did you not state at the beginning of your testimony that Porteous was a United States commissioner?—A. I said he was an ex-United States commissioner.

Q. When you left the poll there did you return to Beaufort?—A. I did.

Q. At which place did you vote?—A. I voted at Beaufort.

Q. When did you come here?—A. I came in yesterday evening.

Q. At whose request did you come here?—A. At the request of the committee.

Q. Who requested you to come?—A. I was summoned by the committee to come here.

Q. Who summoned you? Who told you to come here?—A. The sheriff of Beaufort County.

Q. You were not summoned, I suppose?—A. Yes; he summoned me.

Q. Did he read the summons to you?—A. He told me there was one for me. He didn't read it to me.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. What is the sheriff's name?—A. William Wilson. He is the sheriff of Beaufort County.

Q. Did he come with you?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was there any reason why he didn't come along?—A. He started, but he was prevented. His deputy stopped him at Sheldon's to make some arrests.

Q. He started to come with you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How old are you?—A. I am thirty, I think. I was born the 17th of April, 1846.

Q. Were you ever a slave?—A. I was.

Q. Whose slave was you?—A. Auther G. Rose. His father is president of this bank here in town—the Southwestern Railroad Bank.

Q. Where did you read law?—A. Here in Charleston, with C. W. Butts, without an intermission of six years.

Q. He was elected to Congress?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where were you admitted?—A. I was admitted here by Judge Reed in February, 1875.

Q. What office does he hold?—A. The judge here of the circuit court.

Q. Have you been practicing since that time?—A. Practicing every day and every week, sir; making my bread and supporting my family by it, sir.

Q. Have you a family?—A. I have, sir.

NATHANIEL W. HAYWARD (colored) sworn and examined.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Question. Where do you reside?—Answer. I reside, sir, at Gray's Hill.

Q. How long have you lived there?—A. I believe, sir, that I lived there about nine or ten years.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. My occupation, sir, is farming.

Q. What is your age?—A. I think, sir, my age is between twenty-eight and twenty-nine. I were born in 1847.

Q. Were you ever a slave?—A. I was, sir.

Q. Whose slave were you?—A. John F. Porteus's, sir.

Q. When were you restored to freedom; by the proclamation?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you at Gray's Hill on election-day?—A. I was, sir.

Q. What time did you go there?—A. I think I went there, sir, about half past six o'clock.

Q. Did you see Mr. Porteus there that day?—A. I did, sir.

Q. What time did you first see him?—A. I saw him immediately as I got up there. He was supervisor.

Q. What was he doing when you saw him?—A. When I went up in the morning he was inside of the house—when I first went there in the morning.

Q. How long did he remain inside?—A. I guess he was in the house, sir, about an hour and a half or two hours.

Q. Where did he then go?—A. He came outside of the house, sir.

Q. What was he doing?—A. He was around the poll, electioneering.

Q. Did he have any ballots?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What occurred there? If there was any disturbance about his ballots, state what it was.—A. There was no disturbance at all, sir.

Q. Was there anything said about the ballots he was circulating?—A. Yes, sir; he called to me and asked me to go and electioneer for the Hampton ticket.

Q. Mr. Porteus requested you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you tell him?—A. I told him I could not do it.

Q. What further did he say?—A. About the time that I and him commenced talking, we was talking to ourselves privately, and then all the boys begin to come around him and asked him to pay them what he owe them for chopping wood for him; and I told him then—he used to be my old boss, and I didn't want to get into no fuss—I told him his business was in the house, and he had better go back in the house, and he went as far as the door; and he called me again and hand me a bunch of tickets, and asked me to go around and electioneer again, and I told him I couldn't. He told me if I would electioneer the Hampton ticket that I would be a man if Hampton get in power.

Q. What did you say to that?—A. I told him that if I had to be a man by electioneering for General Hampton, that I didn't think I would. Then he asked me why I would be so foolish, and my reply to him be, that if I had my hand in the rattlesnake's mouth, and somebody would be good enough to open his mouth and let me get my hand out, I don't think I would be fool enough to put it in again; and then Mr. Porteus went in again in the house.

Q. What became of the ballots he gave you?—A. I didn't take them out of his hand at all.

Q. What further occurred?—A. After that he came out again and tried to electioneer again, and found he could not do any good, and he didn't say any more about it.

Q. Where did he go to then?—A. He went back in the house again, sir.

Q. Where did Porteus remain during the rest of the day?—A. He was in the house the rest of the day.

Q. He didn't come out among the electors any more?—A. No, sir; he didn't come out to electioneer no more.

Q. Did you hear anything there about a red ticket—a democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir. I didn't hear at all; I saw the tickets myself.

Q. Who was circulating them—who was charged with circulating them?—A. This man Robert Hamilton was charged with that. The precinct chairman was charged with that.

Q. Was he a railroad-man?—A. No, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Was he a white man?—A. No, sir; he is a colored man.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. What time did you first see that ticket?—A. I saw that red ticket in the morning.

Q. Did you see Porteus have them?—A. No, sir, I didn't.

Q. What were the tickets that he showed to you?—A. The ticket that he showed me was a white ticket—straight-out white ticket—democrat ticket.

Q. Did you hear any complaint made against Porteus there that day?—A. None at all, sir.

Q. Do you know why the men asked him to pay for the wood they had cut for him? You regarded that as an insult, did you not?—A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Do you know why they did it?—A. They did it because he owed them, sir. They chopped wood for him, and he owed them, and he didn't pay them.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. They said that he owed them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You do not know yourself, except from what they said?—A. Yes, sir, I do. I know what they said to me before the fuss, and I know that he owed them.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. You know the fact?—A. Yes, sir; I know the fact.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. How do you know he didn't pay them?—A. Because he told me. He was getting me to haul the wood.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. See if that is the kind of ticket you saw there that day; [handing witness tickets already given in evidence.]—A. Yes, sir; this was the very kind of tickets.

Q. One of them the straight-out republican ticket, and the other an imitation?—A. Yes, sir. When I first saw these tickets, in the morning, the chairman he had the ticket—Robert Hamilton—he had them just like that. He had the republican ticket underneath there, and the democratic ticket on like that, [indicating.]

Q. On top?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he a democrat?—A. No, sir; he claimed to be a republican.

Q. Did you stay there until they got through canvassing the votes?—A. I staid there, sir, until the ballots were counted that night.

Q. Were any of these red tickets found in the box?—A. Yes, sir; I believe some was found there.

Q. Do you know how many?—A. No, sir; I do not know how many red ones.

Q. Did you hear anybody else say that to Porteus, that his place was inside of the house?—A. Yes, sir; several people told him so.

Q. What did he say to that?—A. He didn't say anything at all, sir.

Q. How was the election that day?—A. The election, sir, was very quiet. I have been manager, and been supervisor at that poll from the time the poll was a poll; and it went on better that day, went on better that election, than any other election we had there.

Q. Was there any violence there?—A. No, sir; none at all.

Q. Do you know Mr. Hamilton, a railroad-man?—A. Pat Hammond, you mean, sir.

Q. Do you know him?—A. Yes, sir. I think he is a section boss.

Q. Did you see him there that day?—A. I did, sir.

Q. Do you know whether he voted or not?—A. No, sir; he didn't vote. He came there and went off.

Q. Do you know the reason he didn't vote?—A. I do not know the exact reason he didn't vote, but he came there with all the boys that voted at the railroad—all his hands voted, but he didn't. He didn't come to the poll at all, but for what reason, to my knowledge, he didn't vote, I do not know.

Q. Was there anything to prevent his voting?—A. Not at all.

Q. Was there any disturbance going on at the time he came there?—A. No, sir; none at all.

Q. His hands went up and voted?—A. Yes, sir; they went up and voted.

Q. And there was nothing to prevent his going up and voting?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did the managers all sign the return?—A. I do not know whether they did or not, sir.

Q. Did you see any men having arms there that day?—A. O, no, sir; no arms at all was around the polls.

Q. Did you see Mr. Lawrence, from Beaufort, there?—A. F. D. Lawrence do you mean, sir?

Q. Yes.—A. Yes, sir; he was there. He eat breakfast at my house; him and Thomas Hamilton.

Q. Did he go there before you or after, or did you go together?—A. When Mr. Lawrence came out he met me at the polls.

Q. How near did you live to the polls?—A. I guess, sir, I live—I live in call and hearing of the poll, anyhow.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. You say Lawrence came out from Beaufort and ate breakfast at your house?—A. He did sir.

Q. What time did he eat breakfast?—A. I went to the poll about half past six o'clock, and I think about seven or a little after seven Mr. Lawrence and Mr. Hamilton came.

Q. About seven or half past seven you went back to breakfast?—A. I didn't went back to breakfast, but I sent them up to the house for breakfast.

Q. They came up to the polls?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did they come there?—A. In a buggy, sir.

Q. They didn't get out of the buggy at all?—O, yes, sir; they get out of the buggy.

Q. You were there when they came up in the buggy?—A. I was.

Q. And met them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did they do when they got out of the buggy?—A. They hadn't done anything at all.

Q. How long did they stay at the polls before they went off to breakfast?—A. Not very long.

Q. About how many minutes?—A. I do not know. I am afraid to say, because I don't know.

Q. Was it a few minutes?—A. Yes, sir; I guess perhaps twenty-five or thirty minutes.

Q. Then they went up to your house and got breakfast, did they?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long were they gone?—A. I think about a quarter of an hour.

Q. Did they go up to the house and get breakfast in fifteen minutes?—A. Yes, sir; they drove up in the buggy to my house.

Q. And then came back?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And they did all that in fifteen minutes?—A. I say I suppose it. It might have been longer, I reckon. It was not very long, sir.

Q. When they first came up in the morning, was there any sort of disturbance there?—A. The only disturbance I saw there was the dispute about these two tickets that Mr. Hamilton had. That was the only dispuement.

Q. The only dispute that occurred, that you know anything about, was that ticket that Hamilton had?—A. When they came up; yes, sir.

Q. When they came up, was that the time they had the dispute about these tickets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The dispute with Hamilton?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was Portens at that time? Was he in the house?—A. Yes, sir; when the dispute about the ticket was, at that time, he was in the house.

Q. What time was it that he came out and spoke to you about electioneering for Hampton?—A. I don't know what time it was; I cannot tell.

Q. About what time?—A. I hate to guess.

Q. Was it after these men had gone to breakfast and returned?—A. Yes, sir; after they had went to breakfast and came back.

Q. He came out and asked you to electioneer for Hampton, and offered you democratic tickets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The tickets he offered you were what are called the straight democratic tickets—the tickets printed in black ink?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You didn't see him with any of those red tickets?—A. No, sir; I didn't see him with any of those red tickets at all.

Q. This man Hamilton, you say, is the president of the precinct club, or was the president?—A. He is the precinct chairman of the republican party.

Q. How did he have those tickets; democratic ticket on top?—A. That is right, sir.

Q. Could he read?—A. O, yes, sir; he is a good scholar, sir.

Q. Was he distributing them?—A. He was, sir.

Q. And a controversy was gotten up about the ticket?—A. About the ticket; yes, sir.

Q. What time was it that this difficulty occurred between these colored men and Mr. Portens about paying them for hauling or cutting wood?—A. Forcutting wood, sir.

Q. Was that when he came out and asked you to electioneer for Hampton?—A. Yes, sir. He was out some time before that, and was talking with me, and then, after he done talking with me, then he offered me the tickets, and I wouldn't take them, and these boys see him come up, and they asked him for their money.

Q. After he had been out talking with you, did you tell them what he had said to you; that he wanted to get you to vote the democratic ticket?—A. No, sir; I didn't.

Q. They saw you talking to him?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When they saw him come out again, they told him he had better pay them for the wood?—A. That was the first time they axed him for the money.

- Q. Was that all they said?—A. Yes, sir; he owed them.
- Q. They asked that publicly, did they?—A. Yes, sir; they did, sir.
- Q. Was there a crowd around?—A. O, not many, sir.
- Q. How many?—A. There was three men that I knowed that he owed.
- Q. Did they become excited about it?—A. No, sir; they was no way excited; jist the same as I would ask you, you owe me so much for laboring.
- Q. But they did it publicly, there at the polls, did they?—A. They did, sir.
- Q. And after that he went back into the house?—A. I told him he had best go back.
- Q. Then he went back?—A. Yes, sir; he went as far as the door, and called me the second time.
- Q. Then it was that he asked you to take these tickets?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You declined to do it, and he went on then into the house?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Do you know how many voters there were there that day?—A. I think I do, sir.
- Q. What was the number?—A. About 785 or 786.
- Q. How many democratic votes were polled?—A. Nine, sir.
- Q. Were you up near to the polls all day until the polls closed?—A. Right close to the polls; right around the building during the day, from half past six o'clock in the morning until six o'clock at night, when the polls closed, and I staid there until the last ticket were counted.
- Q. These hands that Pat Hammond, this railroad man, brought up, were they colored men?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. They went up and voted?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. But he went off without voting?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

- Q. What time did Lawrence go back to Beaufort?—A. I think, sir, if my remembrance serves me right, he went back about two or three o'clock in the afternoon.
- Q. Was it before or after that that Porteus asked you to support Hampton?—A. Before he were gone, sir.
- Q. Where was Hamilton; you say your recollection is that he was distributing those red tickets?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Where was he?—A. He was there, sir.
- Q. What was his duty there that day?—A. His duty, sir, as the precinct chairman; the county chairman delivered all the tickets to him the day before the election.
- Q. The chairman of the republican party?—A. Yes, sir; like you was going to vote to-morrow, and this precinct chairman received the tickets to-night.
- Q. Do you know who he received the tickets from?—A. I do, sir; he got them from Sammy Green, the county chairman.
- Q. Which ticket do you refer to?—A. I refer to the republican ticket.
- Q. Who the democratic ticket?—A. We said Mr. Hamilton used the democratic ticket to one party, and the republican ticket to some.
- Q. And Porteus was complaining to him for doing that?—A. No, sir; all the men, when they find out how they—and how they came to find out this was a democratic ticket—when we first find out that they look alike, we vote them—
- Q. Do you know where Hamilton got these democratic tickets?—A. I know what he said, Hamilton himself said.
- Q. What he said there publicly?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Was there any complaint made of Mr. Hamilton by the colored people for having those red tickets?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. What did Mr. Hamilton say in answer to it?
(Question objected to and overruled.)
- Q. Did you hear Hamilton say anything in Mr. Porteus's presence about it?—A. No, sir; not in Mr. Porteus's presence.
- Q. Was he there?—A. Mr. Porteus was then in the window, and Mr. Hamilton was out of the house. Then Mr. Porteus said you musn't charge Mr. Hamilton—you musn't charge him and Mr. Van Ness.
- Q. When the colored men charged Hamilton, then Porteus stated what you say?—A. Yes, sir; musn't charge Mr. Hamilton—you musn't charge him and Mr. Van Ness.
- [Mr. LAPHAM. I now offer to show what Hamilton said.
[Offer overruled.]

By the CHAIRMAN:

- Q. You have stated that the tickets that Hamilton had, the democratic ticket was on top, and that the ends of the tickets were reversed?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

- Q. You do not know where Mr. Hamilton got those tickets, except from what Porteus said?—A. No, sir; I don't know anything about it at all.
- Q. You don't know how long he had had them?—A. No, sir.
- Q. Did you hear Porteus complain any after that—after he said that about that red democratic ticket? After he had said not to blame Hamilton and Van Ness, did you hear the people say anything about Porteus?—A. No, sir; I didn't hear them say anything about Porteus. They didn't say anything about blaming Mr. Porteus, because they allowed him to give the democrat tickets, if he can.

Q. Did you not hear anything said about its being a red democratic ticket?—A. The red democrat ticket—when they was issuing this ticket they didn't call it the democrat ticket until we found it out.

Q. Wasn't there any complaint made about it until you found it out?—A. No, sir; not to my knowledge.

NAT GADDUS (colored) sworn and examined.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Question. Where do you live?—Answer. At Gray's Hill precinct, sir.

Q. How old are you?—A. I couldn't tell you direct; but when I lived with Mr. Pendleton, in 1866, I believe I were 44. That is what my old master told me.

Q. Were you a slave?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why do you speak of being 44 years old in 1866? What event was that?—A. That was the age he gave me. I didn't keep no count.

Q. What time did he give you your age?—A. In 1866.

Q. Was that when you were freed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have kept it ever since?—A. I keep the count that he gave me from that time.

Q. What do you do for a living?—A. Farm, sir.

Q. Were you at Gray's Hill on election-day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time did you go there?—A. I went there at six o'clock, sir.

Q. How late did you stay?—A. Well, I went there three times. I was there, and I went three times in the day.

Q. You went there at six o'clock; how long did you stay?—A. I was there till eleven o'clock, and I went home and got my dinner, and I went back to see how the votes was coming on.

Q. When did you go back?—A. About one o'clock.

Q. Then how long did you stay?—A. Until the sun nearly set, sir. Then I went home.

Q. You were not back there again?—A. No, sir; I was very close, but I weren't back again.

Q. Do you know Mr. Porteus?—A. Yes, sir; I do know him, sir.

Q. Did you see him there that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you see him?—A. He was out at the poll. Him was in, and after we got up, and about an hour or two, after six o'clock, he came out with his votes in his hand and asked us to vote the ticket, and they told him no. Well, he said, you may as well vote it, because when one of the republican tickets get in, about fifty of the democrat tickets is in. He says you may as well vote for the democrat ticket anyway. And the boys began to tell him "That is not your place; you had better get back in the house to the poll." They made a great racket, and then he went back and came out again. Then they asked him a question, something about Robert Hamilton being the precinct chairman, "How came Robert Hamilton to have two tickets?" and he said first that he got the republican ticket from Robert Hamilton, and the next time he say he didn't.

Q. What further was said?—A. Well, they didn't have no more conversation with him. Then the boys was making a great racket. You couldn't hear what he said. Then when he g' in the poll, then he come to the window and then he speak with me. After he come to the window he says, "Nat, I knowed you a long time, and you ought to be a sensible man at this time, to knowing that if you would vote the democrat ticket, your tax will come down;" and I axed him, "Mr. Porteus, why not make the republican and democrat vote one. If the republicans is true, why not the democrats come to the republicans and be one?" He says, "No, the republicans desire to load it up," he says, "we are working for the interest of bringing our tax down." I said, "Since I have had the liberty of freedom, I find this tax hain't broke me yet, and I desire to pay my tax, and so I vote according to the dictate of my own mind." And so I didn't hold any more conversation there.

Q. Did you hear anything there about the democratic ticket in red ink?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you hear about that?—A. Well, the democratic ticket on the top was a Union republican, and they had them out there, and been fooling a good many of the people with them, and Frank Lawrence come directly afterward, and Thomas Hamilton came up directly afterward, and showed the difference between the two tickets, because a good many of them didn't understand it.

Q. Where did they come from?—A. From Beaufort. A good many of them didn't understand the ticket because each of them on top said, "Union republican ticket."

Q. They called attention to it?—A. Yes, sir; they called attention to it.

Q. What was said about it when that was discovered?—A. They made a row with Robert Hamilton, who was the precinct chairman. They made a row with him; how he came to fool the people with the different tickets; and Robert Hamilton said he didn't—

The CHAIRMAN. Don't state what Robert Hamilton said.

Mr. LAPHAM. I propose to show what Hamilton said.

(Proposition overruled.)

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. What did Porteus say about it?—A. Mr. Porteus, he left the poll, sir; and come out of doors.

Q. What did he say?—A. He say first that he got the democrat ticket from Robert Hamilton. That was Porteus's first word. They axed Robert Hamilton how he came with the two tickets—he was the precinct chairman—which he got out there.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. When did they ask Robert Hamilton about that?—A. The same men, or some.

Q. How long after this talk with Porteus?—A. They spoke to Robert Hamilton first. They didn't went to Mr. Porteus, and after Mr. Porteus heard his name calling about the ticket, he immediately came outside of the polls to the boys.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. What did Mr. Porteus say about the ticket?—A. After Mr. Porteus came out he say he got the ticket from Robert Hamilton, and Robert Hamilton say he didn't. He say, "Let us see Mr. Porteus," and then Mr. Porteus say he didn't get the ticket from Robert Hamilton. The boys then commenced—

Q. Did Mr. Porteus say who he did get it from?—A. No, sir; he didn't say who he did get it from.

Q. The boys commenced what, then?—A. The boys commenced to quarrel about the different tickets.

Q. Who did they complain of?—A. They complained of Robert Hamilton, who was the precinct chairman, who handed out the tickets. They came to him to get the tickets, because they believed he was the precinct chairman, and would have the right ticket.

Q. After Lawrence had come up and discovered—A. When Mr. Lawrence came up and discovered this—this was a ticket handed from Mr. Porteus—he come out and handed a handful of tickets from out of the polls, and Mr. Lawrence get one of the tickets, and then Mr. Porteus say he get the ticket from Robert Hamilton.

Q. Mr. Hamilton, then, you say, denied that he gave them to Porteus?—A. Yes, sir; he deny it.

Q. Was there any complaint made about Mr. Porteus; did you hear the men say anything about Mr. Porteus?—A. No, sir; no man had anything to say about Mr. Porteus at all, only when they commenced to pushing Mr. Hamilton back. There was a great crowd, and Mr. Porteus went back to the house. Mr. Van Ness he didn't come out. Only Mr. Porteus, and Mr. Porteus went right back again for the house. The boys told him to go back and not to interfere with them out here. "You set in there, and we is outside to cast our vote."

Q. Was there any disturbance that day except what arose about these tickets?—A. No disturbance at all, sir. Everything was quiet along, very quiet all the time, sir.

Q. Did you see any interference with Porteus except what occurred about the ballots?—A. Not a thing else was done there, sir. I lived near the polls, and could come every ten minutes, sir.

Q. Do you know Hammond, the railroad man?—A. Yes, sir; I do.

Q. Did you see him there?—A. Yes, sir; he was there, sir.

Q. Did you see him there on election-day?—A. Yes, sir; he was there.

Q. Did you see him there on election-day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know why he didn't vote?—A. Yes, sir; he told me the next day when I got on the road.

Q. Was there anything to prevent his voting when he was there?—A. Nothing, sir, to prevent him. He could have voted if he had a mind to.

Q. You staid there until nearly sundown?—A. Yes, sir; after I went back the second time.

Q. And no disturbance there other than what you have stated about this ballot?—A. No, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. When were you freed?—A. I cannot tell exactly, but just the same year the soldiers came home. I just come from Mr. Pendleton's the same year.

Q. That was during the war?—A. The same year I came home—the same time Colonel Howard be in Anderson, because I come through here, and he gave me to come as far as Ninety-Six, and I had to foot the other balauce.

Q. Did you hear any talk between the colored men and Porteus at the polls that morning about his owing them for chopping wood?—A. Yes, sir; one man did, axed him, but for what reason he turned to the men I didn't pay any attention. I didn't heard the reflection, but the man did ax him, "Why don't you pay me for my wood?"

Q. What time was that?—A. Same time he came out of the poll—out of the house amongst them.

Q. When was it they told him to go back in the house, and not be interfering with the men out there?—A. After the racket commenced. As soon as we commenced to speak, and as soon as he started to go back to the house, the boys said, "You had better go back in the house, and not disturb us out here."

Q. You say Porteus said he had got them from George Hamilton?—A. From Robert Hamilton; that was his first question, sir.

Q. Then you say that Hamilton went up and talked with Porteus?—A. Yes, sir; he goes up to Porteus to know if he did get the ticket from him, and when he did get up he says, "No, I didn't get it from Robert Hamilton," but who he got it from he didn't said.

Q. Where was Porteus then?—A. He was outside then—outside of the poll.

Q. Where was he when he had this talk with you about your voting the democratic ticket?—A. That time he was in the poll, and came to the window and called for me at that time, sir.

Q. He tried to get you to vote the democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir; he told me that.

Q. And the talk between you and him why you should vote it was talk about reducing the taxes?—A. Yes, sir; he said the tax wouldn't be so high.

Q. You didn't agree to vote it?—A. I didn't agree to vote it, sir.

Q. That is all that transpired between you?—A. Yes, sir; that's all.

Q. You say you were back and forth between your house and the polls that day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You went to your home to your dinner?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know how many democratic votes were cast there that day?—A. I believe nine, sir.

Q. Do you know how many republican?—A. I could not tell you direct, sir.

Q. How many white men were there?—A. No white men, except Pat Hammond, Mr. Porteus, and Mr. Van Ness. They was the only white men there at that time.

Q. Was that all you saw there during the day?—A. That is all I saw.

Q. You say you only saw three white men, including Pat Hammond?—A. Two, including Pat Hammond.

Q. Were there any women there that day?—A. Yes, sir; some be there.

Q. How many?—A. About four of them was there, sir.

Q. How long were they there?—A. They were there pretty near the whole day, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. What were they doing?—A. They were selling grub, sir; ground-nuts and hominy they had there, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. For the people to eat?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there a dinner there on the ground that day?—A. No more than they had around them.

Q. Any cooking going on around the ground there?—A. They carried a cook there, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Did the women make any disturbance there?—A. None at all, sir; we was on this side and they was on the other side, under a large oak tree.

By Mr. EDEN:

Q. Did Robert Hamilton remain there, or did he go away?—A. He remained there, sir, until they broke up.

WILLIAM LAWRENCE (colored) sworn and examined.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Question. Where do you reside?—Answer. I live in Beaufort Island.

Q. Where were you on the day of the election?—A. At Gray's Hill, sir. I was one of the managers.

Q. What time did you get there?—A. Well, I got there before sunup.

Q. Before the voting had commenced?—A. O, yes, before the voting commenced.

Q. Do you know Mr. Porteus?—A. John F. Porteus? I do, sir.

Q. Did you see him there that day?—A. He were there. He slept at one of the colored men's houses till the morning light appear, then he arrive at the poll.

Q. Did you see them when they came to the polls?—A. Yes, sir; I got there a little before they did.

Q. Did you see either of them have any ballots?—A. No, sir; I never—the box, do you mean?

Q. No, the tickets?—A. After we get in the house Mr. Porteus did. He fetched a bundle of tickets with him.

Q. Did you see them?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did he do with them?—A. He had them right in the house, right there by him.

Q. Did you see what he did with them afterward?—A. After the voting commenced?

Q. Yes.—A. After the voting commenced. He was one of the supervisors of the poll, and our business was right there at the poll, and after the poll commenced then they was going on very quiet and nice. But he get a little worried, and he get up and leave us, and go out there, and commenced talking to the voters to vote his ticket, and they didn't agree to do it, and so he seemed to get a little mad, though he didn't say anything at the time. And some of them get after him about some money he had owed them for some wood they had cut and hadn't paid for. And so he commenced talking, but what he was saying I could not tell, for I was in the house, and then he comes in. After he comes back we say, "Your business is right here. You have no right to go out and have talk; let them do as they please." And he comes in and sets down, and after he sets down he gets a little worried, and he goes out again among them and tried to get them to vote his ticket, and we scolded him and tell him to stay inside.

Q. What did they say to him outside?—A. They was talking to him, and after he try to get them to vote his ticket, and they not agreed to do it, he didn't feel good after that. He all the time be worried. They go right along voting the republican ticket, and so he seems quite dissatisfied, but they go on and vote the way they please.

Q. Did you see or hear anything about a red democratic ticket like that? [Hands witness a ticket already in evidence.]—A. Yes, sir; just like that, the color of that. He had those.

Q. Who had them?—A. Mr. John F. Porteus. But still they were not our tickets.

Q. What tickets were they?—A. My ticket was just the color of that, but different names.

Q. What candidates were on the tickets he had?—A. Mr. Tilden's ticket.

Q. But looked just like the one you had?—A. Exactly; and so he told me to take his tickets and put them on the window so they might see it and vote it in place of our ticket, and I told him I guess not. I said, "You had better do it yourself." So he gets up and puts it on the window-sill.

Q. Did you see him put them there?—A. O, yes, sir; right by me; and those that can't read take it off, and some show them and they find it out.

Q. Who found it out, if you remember?—A. Mr. Days, I think, for one.

Q. Do you remember Mr. Lawrence coming there from Beaufort?—A. Yes, sir; he was there, but he was outside. But I was right in confinement—no more than what I could see.

Q. When they found it out that this ticket was a democratic ticket, did you hear the people say anything about Porteus?—A. O, yes, sir; after they finds out the tickets, you know, they commenced to get worried. That was not the ticket they intended to vote.

Q. What did they say?—A. They say, "This ticket look like ours, but how come it to be so?"

Q. What did they say to Mr. Porteus? Didn't they say anything to him about it?—A. They didn't say anything. After they find out the ticket they just fling it down.

Q. Were you there all day?—A. All day, sir; until six o'clock—afternoon.

Q. Was there any disturbance there that day except what you have stated?—A. Nothing at all, sir; right quiet. Mr. Porteus, he was well satisfied, after the election of the quietness.

Q. Did he say it there at the time?—A. He said it there at the time before us all. He said he was perfectly—and he was the only man who gave that statement—that he was well satisfied.

Q. Did you stay until the votes were counted?—A. O, yes; I was one of the management.

Q. Was there any complaint made about the election there while you were making up the returns?—A. No complaint at all.

Q. Did the managers sign it?—A. Yes, sir; they did. Mr. Porteus, particularly; and we was well satisfied to see him be so satisfied.

Q. Do you remember whether any of these Tilden tickets in red were found in the box?—A. O, yes; they was.

Q. How many of them?—A. Well, I believe, with the red and white, it was nine.

Q. How many of the red?—A. I forget now, ostentially, how many red they was; but I remember the whole amount was nine.

Q. Do you remember whether there were any of the red ones in the box?—A. O yes; the red ones was in there.

Q. I mean red Tilden tickets.—A. Yes, sir; in the box when we counted them; just like that one.

Q. There were some of them in there?—A. There was; yes, sir.

Q. But you don't remember how many?—A. Not particularly; but the red and the white, like this one—this one made nine.

Q. Did you see any women there that day?—A. There was some women out there selling hominy and cakes.

Q. Did they have anything to do with the election?—A. O, no, sir; they was way off under the trees. I went there and buy my dinner myself.

Q. Do you remember what time Mr. Lawrence got there from Beaufort?—A. Not particularly, sir.

Q. What time was it that this red ticket was discovered—the first that you heard it spoken of?—A. About a quarter of an hour after the voting commenced; then we find out about this ticket, that it was the wrong ticket. Mr. Van Ess he tell us he would be very glad if they would get in about fifty on a mistake.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. Were you asked to state anything about what Mr. Van Ess said?—A. No, sir.

Q. Why did you state it, then?—A. I state all what I see done.

Q. You say you state all you saw done?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is the talk of people what was done?—A. Just what I see.

Q. You stated what Mr. Van Ess said?—A. I did.

Q. You were not asked to state what he said?—A. No, sir.

Q. Why did you volunteer it, then?—A. I stated all what I know.

Q. You say that this discovery about the presence of this red democratic ticket was about a quarter of an hour after the poll was open?—A. Yes, sir; as near as I can guess, after the voting commenced.

Q. Who was present when the poll was opened; were all the managers there?—A. All of them was there but Mr. McGill; he didn't get there at his time, and they had me sworn in.

Q. You were not one of the appointed managers before that?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did Mr. McGill come?—A. He come after.

Q. How long after?—A. I think about very near a half hour.

Q. He didn't act as manager then at all?—A. No; he could not be manager.

Q. You acted as manager all through?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time did Mr. Porteus get there?—A. He get there before the time was to be voted.

Q. Before the polls were opened?—A. Yes, sir; exactly. But, still, I was there a little before, waiting on them.

Q. You say Mr. Porteus showed you the red tickets with democratic names on them?—A. O, yes; I am certain of that.

Q. That was at the table in the house where you were taking the vote?—A. Exactly; that was in the house; he had a bundle of them.

Q. He asked you to put them out on the window?—A. On the sill of it, so the voters could see the tickets.

Q. And you say you declined to do it?—A. He axed me to do it.

Q. I say you declined to do it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you say he put them on the window?—A. Yes, sir; on the sill.

Q. You say a man by the name of Days pointed out to the voters that they were the democratic tickets?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who is Days; is he a colored man?—A. Yes, sir; a colored man.

Q. What time of day was that?—A. Well, that was about a quarter of an hour after the voting started. I could not tell particularly what hour it is.

Q. You opened the polls at six o'clock in the morning, and it was a quarter of an hour after?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time did you see this man F. D. Lawrence there, from Beaufort?—A. Well, sir, the hour I could not state particularly, because I didn't observe, you know, exactly what time.

Q. About what time?—A. I says about as near as I can guess, more or less—about two hours or about three hours after the voting commenced.

Q. You say that Mr. Porteus went out among the voters?—A. A good while after the voting commenced he left the house.

Q. And when he came in you say the manager scolded him?—A. Tell him he had no right to leave his poll.

Q. And you told him to stay in there?—A. Yes, sir; he was sent to attend to his business in here.

Q. Who told him that?—A. I for one, and Mr. McGill—he was in there too.

Q. McGill was not acting as manager, was he?—A. He was not acting as manager, but he was writing down the names with Mr. Van Ess. He had his paper, you know.

Q. Who was the other manager beside you and Mr. Van Ess?—A. William Middleton. Two of them is right at the box, and—

Q. And you and Mr. McGill made that remark to Mr. Porteus in there, to attend to his business?—A. And Mr. Middleton.

Q. The other manager?—A. And Mr. Van Ess, too—all of us in the room.

Q. Mr. Van Ess was in the room, too, was he?—A. Yes, sir; all of us.

Q. But you and McGill and Middleton told Porteus to stay in there, and attend to his business?—A. Attend to your business for what he was sent.

Q. How many of those red tickets did you find in the box?—A. Well, the red ones I could not tell you particularly how many of them it is.

Q. Did you find over two or three?—A. Well, I think we find over two or three, but I could not tell precisely. I might give you a written statement, but the total amount was nine.

Q. Then how many of the white democratic tickets did you find in the box?—A. I think it is two or three, but I am not sure.

Q. Of the white or the red, which?—A. The white, I think. The white was the lesser, I suppose, by my judgment. It was less than the red.

Q. Only nine altogether?—A. Yes, sir; I know that. I was particular as to that—only nine.

Q. Were you ever a manager there before?—A. O, yes, sir; I managed there before.

Q. When, in 1874?—A. Two years back.

Q. How many votes were polled there two years ago?—A. We haven't polled as much as what we polled now.

Q. How much less?—A. I could not tell particularly how much less.

Q. Do you know how many Chamberlain got there two years ago?—A. No, not particularly, sir.

Q. Do you know how many Greene got? He ran against Chamberlain for governor.—A. No, sir; I could not tell how many. I was for Greene head and heels myself.

Q. Who carried that poll, Greene or Chamberlain?—A. O, Chamberlain totes the poll, but I was for Greene at that time.

Q. How much did Chamberlain carry the poll?—A. I could not tell you particularly, sir, but I know he have the majority. I know he totes it—Chamberlain.

SAMUEL GRANT (colored) sworn and examined.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Question. Where do you live?—Answer. Saint James Goose Creek Parish.

Q. What was your voting-place at the recent election?—A. Whaley's Church, sir.

Q. Did you attend there?—A. I was a manager at that poll, sir.

Q. What time did you get there?—A. I was at the poll about five and a half o'clock in the morning.

Q. How late did you stay?—A. The poll closed at six o'clock.

Q. Did you stay until then?—A. Yes, sir; I did. I staid until the vote was counted and until the box was sent to the city.

Q. Did you accompany the box to the city?—A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. What is your age?—A. My age is about twenty-two, sir.

Q. What was the conduct of the people there at Whaley's Church on the day of the election?—A. Nothing that I knows of, no more than everything went off pretty lively, as I understand. If there was anything went off disagreeable, it is more than I knew.

Q. Was there any disturbance at the election?—A. None at all, sir.

Q. Did you see any tickets there except the regular republican and democratic tickets?—A. No, sir.

Q. During the day I mean. Do you remember whether there were any found in the box except the two regular tickets?—A. None but the two regular tickets; that is the republican and the democrat ticket.

Q. Did you assist in the count?—A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Who was the democratic supervisor there?—A. Only one, Mr. Chors, as I know; he was there; he called himself one. I don't know rightly whether he was or not.

Q. Do you remember any difficulty between him and the men that day?—A. None at all, sir.

Q. Did the managers all sign the returns?—A. Yes, sir; I believe so.

Q. Any complaint made about the fairness of the election—about the election having been an unfair one?—A. No, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. What is your age?—A. Twenty-two, sir.

Q. When were you twenty-two?—A. I think it was last year; but if I had my age I could tell you positive about the time.

Q. Can't you tell when you were twenty-two years old?—A. Well, I got my age from my old mistress; but I am certain I am twenty-two.

Q. How do you know it?—A. I can prove that by the age of what she sent up home to my father.

Q. When were you born?—A. I could not tell that positive; but my old mistress can tell.

Q. You don't know when you were born?—A. No, sir; I don't know exactly the very identical time I was born.

Q. You were there when you were born, but you don't know the date?—A. No, sir.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. Wood-merchant and a farmer, sir. I sells wood winter and summer, and farm, too.

Q. Sell wood here in town?—A. Yes, sir; I am in the city twice a week.

Q. Do you own your own farm?—A. I do, sir.

Q. How much do you own?—A. Me and my father owns seventy-five acres.

Q. You live with your father, do you?—A. I do, sir.

Q. How many people voted there that day at Whaley's Church?—A. Well, I could not tell exactly how many people voted there; but I can tell you how many voted there when we got through—when we got done counting. I could tell how many tickets were found in the box. Altogether, for the republicans, it was five hundred and eighty-two, and I believe, from my memorandum, it is ten democrat tickets. In this way they had two rolled up in each other. That is what we found—two democrat tickets rolled up in each other.

Q. You found two tickets in one?—A. Yes, sir. We found some republican tickets two in one—two of them.

Q. How many white people voted there that day?—A. Well, I can't hardly tell that right off now, sir. It is pretty near outside of my recollection right off, because there was so many people I didn't pay strlet attention whether they was white or black.

Q. Did you see any arms there that day?—A. Right at the polls, sir?

Q. Did you see any guns there?—A. No, sir. I see none during the day.

Q. You were in the room?—A. I did go out once, on one occasion.

Q. Where did you go when you went out?—A. I went out on some certain occasion on business for myself, sir.

Q. You didn't see any disturbance there?—A. None at all; no disturbance; none whatever.

Q. Did you see any parties there with sticks or clubs?—A. Well, no, sir; if that is your remark. I never see any there.

Q. You were not out among the crowd?—A. No, sir; I hadn't time to be in the crowd.

Q. You brought the box to town?—A. Yes, sir; myself and Daniel Middleton.

Q. When did you bring it?—A. We brought the box down on Sunday morning, myself and Daniel Middleton and A. P. Ford.

Q. Can you read and write?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Read and write?—A. Yes, sir; I can read and write a little.

Q. Can you write your own name?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Anything more than your own name?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you write a letter?—A. Yes, I can.

Q. How much can you write?—A. I can write a letter to the city here for anything I want, sir.

Q. You were never a manager there before, were you?—A. I was never a manager before; no, sir.

By Mr. EDEN:

Q. Did you not see any guns in the road on the day of election?—A. No, sir, I didn't see no guns; but at night—

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. What was done after the polls closed?—A. After the polls closed, while we was counting the votes, I heard some report of guns about a quarter of a mile from the church.

Q. Did you hear the singing of the song, "Hold the fort," for Hayes and Wheeler?—A. I did, sir.

Q. When was that sung?—A. That was about just before the poll closes.

Q. Who sang it?—A. Mr. Ford.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. How long before the poll closed was that sung?—A. Well, at the time Mr. Ford was singing that, Mr. Hard—I asked him what time it was, and he tell me it wanted ten minutes to six, and I replied to Mr. Ford that there would be no one come there this evening, and then Mr. Ford raised that singing. Then, after the poll closed, every one went off.

Q. The guns you heard fired were a quarter of a mile from the polls, you say?—A. I suppose it was a quarter of a mile, but it was not inside of the house.

Q. You did not hear any guns there at the polls?—A. Right at the polls, do you mean?

Q. Answer the question. Did you hear any guns there about the polls?—A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. The guns were a quarter of a mile off. When did you hear them?—A. After the poll closed.

Q. How long after the polls closed?—A. I never observed that; while we was counting the ticket.

Q. Was it in the night?—A. O, yes, sir, it was in the night, because six o'clock was dark.

Q. And it was in the night while you were counting the ballots at the poll?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You didn't make any inquiry about what it was?—A. We hadn't time for that.

Q. Nothing was said about it?—A. No, sir; because I was tending to my business in the church.

SAMUEL J. BAMPFIELD (colored) sworn and examined.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Question. Where do you reside?—Answer. In Beaufort County, sir.

Q. At what point?—A. The town of Beaufort.

Q. Were you one of the candidates upon the republican ticket at the last election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. For what office?—A. Clerk of court.

Q. For that county?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you take part in the campaign in Beaufort County?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. At what places did you attend meetings?—A. I attended meetings at all of the important precincts—Brunson, Lawtonville, Early Branch, and other places.

Q. Commencing with the Brunson meeting, when was that?—A. I attended two meetings there during the campaign. The first meeting was held in the early part of the campaign; I can't just think of the date.

Q. Was it a republican meeting?—A. It was a republican meeting.

Q. And was called as such?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. If there was any interruption at that time, state briefly what it was.—A. Well, at the first meeting there was a disturbance. We went up there and we had a joint discussion. The democrats requested that they should be allowed to speak, and they were allowed three speakers. There were three on each side. During the discussion there was one of our speakers arose to speak. One of the democrats objected, saying that he had been previously convicted, I think; and he went on and spoke, and when he got through he referred to the objection, and this democrat, Mr. Tillinghurst, said that he was a liar. No, it was the other way; he accused Langley with something, and said he was a liar, and Tillinghurst struck Langley, and then a general mêlée ensued. We did all we could to stop it, and after a while everything was quieted down. The democrats went up to the town, and some came with bars of iron and guns, but everything was quieted down after a while.

Q. Was that meeting appointed for a joint discussion?—A. No, sir; that was called as a republican meeting.

Q. How came it to be a joint discussion?—A. They asked that they be allowed to be represented.

Q. How many democrats were there?—A. I guess there must have been about two hundred democrats.

Q. Were they armed in any way?—A. They were armed with pistols.

Q. Were they in uniform?—A. No, sir; not at that meeting.

Q. Were they on foot or on horseback?—A. At that meeting they were on foot, most of them.

Q. Coming to the second meeting—A. The second meeting was called for the purpose of ratifying the nomination of Hayes and Wheeler. When we were at Early Branch we received a special messenger from Brunson, who was sent around by the road on horseback, to tell us not to come up. They expected us, but they told us not to come.

Q. How did the message come?—A. It was sent around by a man.

Q. Did you go on then?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Tell what you found when you got there.—A. When we got there we found the town crowded with men.

Q. How many men did you find there?—A. There must have been three hundred and fifty. There might have been more. Some had come from Barnwell. They came on horseback.

Q. They were mounted men?—A. Yes, sir; they were mounted men.

Q. What uniform, if any, had they?—A. They had no uniform. They were not uniformed at that meeting.

Q. How were they armed?—A. They all had their carbines, but they were in the house at the time. They were all armed with pistols; each had two pistols strapped to his side.

Q. Had they guns also?—A. Yes, sir; they had guns.

Q. Where did they leave their guns?—A. In one of the stores there.

Q. What occurred when you got to the ground where the speaking was to be?—A. When we got to the grounds they came up; they sent a committee, and the committee informed us they wanted to have a joint discussion. Of course, the circumstances were such that we could not refuse if we wanted, and so we consented, and when we arrived there were very few republicans in town, and when we went down to the meeting there was not more than about one hundred, I suppose, of our men. The democrats came down in clubs.

Q. How many came there at the first meeting?—A. Three hundred and fifty or four hundred men, I suppose. They filed around in companies, and the different men were issuing threats. One man, for example, nearly mashed my toes, and said, I suppose for my benefit, that he didn't want any damn lies told there, and if any of us attempted to tell any of our damn lies that we would be pulled down from the stand. Several made use of such language. After we had arranged, they elected a chairman for each of the parties, and when it was suggested by one of the republicans that certain men be elected to keep order, the captains of the different companies rose and said, "We will keep order so long as you tell the truth and don't tell any damn lies," and pistols were freely displayed. The men sat in their saddles, and threw their pistols up, and caught them generally, which seemed in a threatening manner. And it was then agreed that each speaker should have thirty minutes, and the speaking was opened by one of our speakers, Mr. Myers, and he was interrupted considerably in the beginning, but after awhile they quieted down, and of course he had to be very cautious in what he said. The chairman of the county committee, Mr. Moore, was there, and he requested us to be very quiet. He said he could control the Beaufort men, but the Barnwell men he didn't know so well, and, to use his language, we were in a tinder-box, and they were liable to go off at any time, and asked us not to allude to the recent riots. These men came from Barnwell, where these riots had occurred, in that neighborhood, and, of course, in our speeches we had to be prudent.

Q. Did you speak at that meeting?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any interruption?—A. Yes, sir; frequently men would interrupt me during my speech.

Q. In what way? What did they say?—A. Well, they would say, "That is a lie," some of them; and then some would holler, "Time up," and interrupt me in different ways.

Q. Did the democrats remain there until the meeting closed?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who was in command?—A. Well, the chairman of the meeting was Mr. Hoover.

Q. In command of the companies, I mean?—A. Each company had its own captain.

Q. Was there not a general commander?—A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. How many men were there from Barnwell?—A. I think three companies were from Barnwell.

Q. How far was that?—A. Forty miles, I suppose it was, to Lawtonville, in the adjoining county.

Q. Did you hear anything said there about going to Lawtonville the next day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you hear them say?—A. They expressed it that they intended to go on to Lawtonville the next day, where we were to have another meeting.

Q. Where you were to have a republican meeting?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you go to Lawtonville?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What state of things did you find when you reached there?—A. When we reached Lawtonville we found quite a number more of the republicans than there were at Bronson, and they were all excited. After we reached there we found the Lawtonville rifle-club company there; and after a while several of the other rifle-clubs—one from Bronson and one from Beach Branch—rode up.

Q. Were there any there from Barnwell?—A. No, sir; I do not think so.

Q. How many men were there at Lawtonville?—A. At Lawtonville there were, I suppose, about in the neighborhood of two hundred and fifty.

Q. White men?—A. White men.

Q. How were they organized?—A. They were organized into clubs. They marched up.

Q. What arms did they have?—A. Each of them had three revolvers, or two of them.

Q. Had they any guns?—A. No, sir; not that I saw.

Q. Were they mounted or on foot?—A. They were mounted.

Q. What occurred there about the discussion?—A. They again requested a joint discussion, to which we agreed, assented, and the discussion went on. There was no particular interruption at Lawtonville except individuals in speaking; for instance, there were parties spoke to me, private democrats; in speaking of the situation, they said it was a question of race; that the colored race was making the issue with them and they proposed to fight it out on that line. If the colored men didn't vote with them they would not give them any employment, and they would turn them off their lands.

Q. That threat was made there, was it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many colored men were there there?—A. I suppose there must have been three or four hundred.

Q. Was any one prevented from speaking there?—A. No, sir; except that we had to observe some caution.

Q. What other meeting did you attend?—A. Well, I attended the meetings all over the county.

Q. Was there any other meetings where the democrats appeared in numbers?—A. No, sir; the upper portion of the county is the only portion where they are in large numbers and where intimidation was used.

Q. These two places are in the upper portion of the county?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What do you know, if anything, of your own knowledge, about men being discharged?—A. No, sir; I could not say that I absolutely know of it.

Q. Do you know the fact that men left their places immediately after the election?—A. O, yes, sir; I have secured homes for quite a number of families.

Q. How many?—A. Well, there were four or five families in the neighborhood of Early Branch.

Q. That is in your county, is it?—A. In my county; yes, sir.

Q. Are those all of which you have any personal knowledge?—A. O, there are others in Beaufort that are settling on Broad River.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. Is it an unusual thing for persons or families to move into Beaufort?—A. Very unusual, sir.

Q. Is it unusual for them to move from one point to another?—A. Do you speak of one point of the county?

Q. Yes; from one point to another.—A. Well, those who have come into Beaufort come from the upper portion of the county.

Q. My question is, is it unusual for families in your county to move from one point to another?—A. I cannot say that it is.

Q. Was there any immigration into Beaufort County just before the election?—A. O, no, sir.

Q. None at all?—A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Where did you hear parties say that it was a question of race?—A. They told me so at Lawtonville.

Q. How many parties did you hear make that observation?—A. Mr. Sirglea, a gentleman, made it to me. He was talking in a crowd. He was spokesman.

Q. He said that you colored people made that issue and that they would meet it?—A. That was the bent of his remarks, I believe.

Q. At this first meeting at Bronson, who made speeches?—A. Mr. Langely and myself, and Mr. Wheeler and Mr. Robinson—Joe Robinson.

Q. Any one else?—A. I am trying to think. I think Mr. Hamilton was there.

Q. Who were the colored orators?—A. Those are the colored orators I have just referred to.

Q. Who were the democratic orators?—A. A Mr. Tilinghurst, Mr. Moore, Mr. Youmans, and I forget the other two.

Q. Was Mr. Miller there?—A. I don't think he was at this meeting—at the first meeting.

Q. How many colored people were at that meeting?—A. If my memory serves me right, I think there was about two hundred and fifty.

Q. And how many whites?—A. There could not have been more than one hundred and fifty whites; I cannot recollect the proportion.

Q. They were not there in uniform?—A. No, sir.

Q. You saw no guns?—A. No, sir.

Q. You say you saw some pistols there at that meeting—at the first meeting?—A. I do not recollect distinctly that I did.

Q. You say there was a difficulty between Mr. Tilinghurst and somebody?—A. Mr. Langley.

Q. They were two of the men that made speeches?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How was that difficulty brought about?—A. When Mr. Langley rose to speak Mr. Tilinghurst objected, saying that he was a convict. Mr. Langley made no reply to him at the time, but proceeded, and at the close of his speech he then made some allusion.

Q. What did Langley say about the accusation?—A. He said it was untrue. And then went on to speak of Tilinghurst, about what had occurred about him as a lawyer before Judge Meyer, and Mr. Tilinghurst arose and repeated the charge, and Mr. Langley told him he lied, and then he struck him, and of course the fuss ensued.

- Q. It was quieted down, and no further trouble occurred?—A. No, sir; no further trouble occurred.
- Q. What time was that meeting?—A. I could not fix the date.
- Q. Was it before the State nominations?—A. Before the State nominations.
- Q. And before the presidential nominations?—A. No, sir; I do not think it was.
- Q. That was not a ratification meeting, then?—A. I think it was held for the purpose of ratifying the nominations of Hayes and Wheeler.
- Q. Were all these meetings you attended ratification meetings?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Then you called them all ratification meetings?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. When was the second meeting?—A. The second meeting was after the State convention. I cannot recollect now.
- Q. After Chamberlain's nomination, was it?—A. O, yes, sir.
- Q. Was it after Hampton's nomination?—A. Hampton was nominated before Chamberlain.
- Q. They were both nominated, then?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And when you got there you found how many democrats there?—A. At this last meeting do you mean?
- Q. Yes.—A. I think there was about 350.
- Q. Were they there when you got there?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. What time did you get there?—A. We came up on the train. I think the train arrives there about 2 o'clock, or a little after.
- Q. You did not see them with guns?—A. No, sir.
- Q. Did you see the guns that you say were in the store?—A. I did not.
- Q. You say you saw them with some pistols?—A. O, yes, sir; each one had a brace of pistols.
- Q. Every man?—A. Yes, sir; I think I can safely say every man.
- Q. You say they were not in uniform?—A. No, sir; not that I could notice.
- Q. Were they in their shirt-sleeves?—A. No, sir.
- Q. How could you, then, see their arms?—A. They took particular pains to display them.
- Q. What did they do?—A. Well, in several instances they would throw back their coats; others would take them out and throw them up and catch them.
- Q. How many did you see throwing them up and catching them?—A. I could not tell you a definite number, but quite a number.
- Q. Did you see more than one do that?—A. O, yes.
- Q. How many did you see doing that?—A. In all, I could not tell you.
- Q. Can you approximate the number?—A. No, sir; because my mind was not directed to that.
- Q. Were you one of the orators there?—A. I do not know whether I could come under that designation or not. I endeavored to speak.
- Q. Who else spoke; what other republicans?—A. Mr. Myers and Mr. Miller.
- Q. Who spoke first?—A. Mr. Myers.
- Q. Who followed him?—A. I did, sir.
- Q. Who spoke next?—A. Mr. Miller; that is, in the republican order; but we alternated.
- Q. Who spoke first?—A. Mr. Myers first.
- Q. Who followed him?—A. Mr. Worne, I think.
- Q. Then who spoke next?—A. Then I followed.
- Q. Then who followed you?—A. Mr. Voss, a colored democrat.
- Q. Then who spoke?—A. Then Mr. Miller.
- Q. Then who?—A. Then Mr. J. W. Moore.
- Q. Then who else spoke?—A. That was the end of it.
- Q. How did you divide the time?—A. Thirty minutes each.
- Q. You say there was no disturbance at that meeting?—A. No, sir; no outrage.
- Q. Do you say that as you passed around some one said that he didn't want to hear any damn lies?—A. O, yes; quite a number said that.
- Q. And you thought that pertained to you?—A. I thought so by the proximity of the party to me.
- Q. He didn't speak to you, did he? Were you passing around when you heard that remark?—A. I was standing near the stand.
- Q. Did this party pass by you?—A. He passed by.
- Q. How many were with him?—A. Well, the whole crowd were there then.
- Q. The party was moving around before the speaking commenced?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And said they didn't want to hear any damn lies?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You had no objection to that, had you? You did not propose to tell any damn lies, did you?—A. He wanted to be the judge of the damn lies.
- Q. The sole judge?—A. He and his own party were the sole judges.
- Q. Did he say that?—A. O, no; it was not necessary.
- Q. His observation was, that he did not want to hear any damn lies?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You did not propose to tell any, did you?—A. By no means.

- Q. Then you didn't feel alarmed, did you?—A. No, sir; I was not alarmed at all.
- Q. These club organizations you say each one had its president; you called them captains.—A. I think that would be a better designation.
- Q. Why do you call them captains?—A. Because they were under drill—under command. They filed around and he gave orders more like a captain than a president.
- Q. There was no field officer—no general commander? Each club had its own captain?—A. Each club had its own captain.
- Q. They requested a division of time and you consented to that?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. What did you say about a committee?—A. A committee met us in the town—three captains of the different clubs—and they said they wanted to take part in the discussion.
- Q. Then was the programme arranged?—A. To which we consented.
- Q. Then they came on to the ground?—A. Then we arranged. We wanted to get away from Bronson before night. We had to go to Lawtonville, and we thought it would be unsafe to travel after night, and wanted to get away early, so we restricted our number of speakers to three, and restricted the time to thirty minutes, and gave them the arrangement, and it was carried out.
- Q. Did you speak first in order of time, in order to get away?—A. No, sir; the understanding was that we were to open and close the meeting.
- Q. Who opened the meeting?—A. One of our speakers opened it. The reason why we didn't close the meeting was they had agreed with us that each speaker should speak thirty minutes. When Mr. Moore had ended his thirty minutes, they deliberately, without asking us anything about it, moved that his time be extended thirty minutes more, which was put and carried by their chairman, and Mr. Moore proceeded and went on with his speech.
- Q. How long did he speak?—A. We left him speaking.
- Q. How long did you stay after he went on beyond his thirty minutes?—A. When that motion was put and carried, I said we had better go, and we left.
- Q. The arrangement when you began was that you were to open and to close?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. The arrangement was not that the democrats were to open and close?—A. No, sir.
- Q. You say Mr. Miller spoke also?—A. He spoke.
- Q. What did you hear there about the meeting to be held at Lawtonville the next day?—A. I heard several parties saying that they were going over to Lawtonville. They spoke very freely. There was a good many there who seemed to be very bitter, and they didn't hesitate to speak what they thought; and there was quite a good deal of threatening language that I could not reiterate now, because I am one that do not think bitter things, and do not pay much attention to such language.
- Q. I was asking you what was said there about going to Lawtonville the next day?—A. They said in a threatening manner that they would go to Lawtonville the next day.
- Q. Who said that?—A. Several of the democrats.
- Q. You did not see these same rifle-clubs there at Lawtonville?—A. No, sir; we saw the Bronson men, but not any of the Barnwell men.
- Q. How many clubs were there?—A. There were six clubs at Bronson.
- Q. You say when you got to Lawtonville that the republicans were a good deal excited?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. What time did you get to Lawtonville?—A. We got to Lawtonville the next day, I think, about twelve o'clock.
- Q. Were all the parties then on the ground?—A. Not all; no, sir.
- Q. Who came after you did? Did any clubs come after you got there?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. How many?—A. Two clubs came after I got there.
- Q. How many clubs were there there altogether?—A. That would make three. There was a club there already.
- Q. The Lawtonville club was the only club that was there when you got there; the others came afterward?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You say they had no guns?—A. Not that I observed. They didn't come in town with guns.
- Q. You didn't see any?—A. No, sir.
- Q. Did you see any pistols?—A. O yes, sir.
- Q. Did the republicans have any pistols?—A. Well, I suppose so; I had one.
- Q. Is it not quite common for people of both colors in this State to carry revolvers?—A. Probably; well, I can't say that it is not.
- Q. You have stated, I believe, that you spoke there; was that the last joint discussion you had?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You continued in the canvass up to the election?—A. I did, sir.
- Q. Made speeches up to the time of the election?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Did you speak outside of the county?—A. No, sir.
- Q. What is your occupation?—A. I am a lawyer by profession.
- Q. Do you practice law?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. At Beaufort?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. How long have you been practicing law?—A. Since last spring.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

Q. Where did you read law ?—A. I read law, part of the time, sir, about two years ago, at Lincoln University, in Chester county, Pennsylvania, but since I have read under Judge Wiggan, in this State.

Q. At what point ?—A. Beaufort, sir.

Q. Where were you admitted ?—A. Admitted by the supreme court at Columbia.

Q. Who were the judges ?—A. Chief-Justice Moses and Associate Justices Willard and Wright.

Q. Were you examined by the judges or by a committee ?—A. By a committee.

Q. And they reported to the judges ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you receive your education at Lincoln University ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long were you there ?—A. I was at Lincoln altogether, I think, in all the departments, about seven years, sir.

Q. What is your age ?—A. I was twenty-seven on the 5th of this month.

Q. Were you ever a slave ?—A. Yes, sir ; I was the slave of Edward L. Trenholm.

By Mr. EDEN :

Q. You only attended two joint discussions during the canvass, as I understand it ?—
A. I attended three.

Q. One at Bronson, one at Lawtonville ; where was the other ?—A. At Early Branch.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. The only collision that occurred at any of those meetings was the one between Langley and Tillinghurst ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was occasioned, was it not, by Langley, the colored man, giving Tillinghurst the lie ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then a blow was passed, Tillinghurst struck him, and they were parted, and the difficulty stopped there ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You saw no guns in the hands of either party at any of those meetings ?—A. At that meeting the democrats went up to the town and brought their guns down.

Q. You saw no guns ?—A. I saw them at that meeting.

Q. Which meeting was that ?—A. The first meeting at Bronson, where the collision occurred.

Q. That was after the collision occurred ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the colored men have pistols the same as the white men ?—A. No, sir ; I did not see them. If they had them they didn't display them so freely.

Q. Did they display them at all ?—A. I did not see them, sir.

Q. Don't you know the colored men all went armed with pistols ?—A. I could not say that I know it ; no, sir.

Q. Don't you know that a good many of them went armed with pistols all the time ?—
A. I could not say that I do.

Q. Was there a militia company in the neighborhood of Bronson ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say there was a militia company in the neighborhood of Bronson ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was composed of colored men, was it not ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. They all had State arms, hadn't they ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they keep them at their homes, or where did they keep them ?—A. According to the agreement with the captain of the rifle-club—

Q. I am asking you now about the State militia ?—A. I am going to tell you what they did with their arms.

Q. I am not asking for that. Was that company at Bronson a company of State militia ?—A. In the capacity of a company ? No, sir.

Q. Were there men there who composed it ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many of them ?—A. I could not say, because I could not designate them.

Q. Did you know where their guns were ?—A. I was going to tell you ; by agreement—

Q. I am asking you where they had their guns ?—A. The guns were taken away at my request, and left up at the house of Mr. Jones. There could not have been, probably, more than fifteen or twenty that had guns.

Q. At your request these militiamen who had guns left them at Jones's house ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far was that from the speaking-ground ?—A. I suppose about a quarter of a mile.

Q. Had they brought them up into town with them ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. These guns that they brought up into town were publicly displayed, were they not ?—A. O, yes ; they were on the streets with them.

Q. Those were State arms that they had, were they not ?—A. Not all of them.

Q. A portion of them were State arms, were they not ?—A. They might have been.

Q. Don't you know that they were ?—A. I really could not say.

Q. Did they have bayonets on them ; that is at the meeting at Bronson ?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was the next meeting you attended?—A. The next meeting was at Bronson—the next joint discussion.

Q. I thought I had just been asking you about the Bronson meeting?—A. We had two joint discussions at Bronson.

Q. I understood you to say a while ago that you had one at Early Branch, one at Bronson, and one at Lawtonville?—A. Yes, sir; but I attended two at Bronson.

Q. Well, the one that you are speaking about now, when these colored men left their guns at Jones's house, was that the first or second meeting?—A. That was the first one; when the collision occurred.

Q. Now, when the collision occurred, did the colored men go after their arms?—A. No, sir.

Q. You don't know whether they did or not?—A. I know they did not.

Q. You went from there to Lawtonville?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there a company of colored militia in that neighborhood?—A. There is a company there; yes, sir.

Q. Did they have guns?—A. Yes, sir; I think they had.

Q. Do you know whether any of them were there at Lawtonville that had guns?—A. No, sir; I don't think they had.

Q. You did not see either party have guns there?—A. No, sir.

Q. Then everything was quiet, I understand you to say?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there a meeting after that at Early Branch?—A. No, sir; we went to Bronson the next day.

Q. The meeting at Early Branch was the first meeting?—A. The first.

Q. I believe you said there were no guns or pistols there?—A. No, sir. The democrats were in very small force at Early Branch; there could not have been more than thirty or forty.

Q. And they were unarmed, so far as you know?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were there many colored men there at that meeting?—A. Yes, sir; pretty good for that section; in the neighborhood of two hundred and fifty.

Q. Did you see any of them with arms there?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did they have a militia company in that neighborhood?—A. No, sir; there is none in that neighborhood.

Q. Do you know how many militia companies there were in your county—Beaufort County?—A. All over the county, do you mean?

Q. Yes; taking the whole county.—A. I think there were about six or seven.

Q. They were all armed, were they not?—A. The best portion of them; yes, sir.

Q. Were they not all armed?—A. They probably were; I could not say.

Q. All colored men, were they not?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Do you know how many rifle-clubs there were in your county among the democrats?—A. There were five, to my knowledge; there might have been more.

Q. How were they armed?—A. I have never seen them parading with their guns; I have seen rifles directed to them.

Q. Have you not seen them when they were in the possession of their rifles?—A. No, sir.

Q. At no place?—A. No, sir; I was at Yemassee one day, and I saw on the platform three or four boxes of rifles and ammunition directed to Hoover.

Q. Who is Hoover?—A. Captain of the club at Hoover's Station.

Q. Captain of the rifle-club?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that?—A. In the early part of the campaign.

Q. What month, according to your recollection?—A. I think it was somewhere in the month of June or July; I could not exactly say.

By Mr. EDEN:

Q. Did you see the rifles, or only the boxes?—A. Just the boxes.

Q. You didn't see what was in the boxes?—A. No, sir; I didn't see inside.

Q. Don't you call all democratic organizations rifle-clubs?—A. No, sir; there is a club in Beaufort that is not a rifle-club.

By the CHAIRMAN:—

Q. Why do you call them rifle-clubs? You didn't see them with any guns?—A. Because they call themselves so; that is the name they designate themselves by.

Q. Where did you hear them designate themselves so?—A. At the Bronson meetings. The captain of each club, of each rifle-club, in speaking of the peace, said they would vouch for the peace of the rifle-club at such and such a place.

Q. The reason they were designated rifle-clubs in the canvass was because they had been organized as rifle-clubs before they were ordered to give up their guns?—A. After the President's proclamation?

Q. Yes.—A. I never met them at a political meeting again.

Q. Were you at any political meeting after the President's proclamation? Were you at any meeting at which these democratic clubs attended?—A. In a body?—no, sir.

Q. These militia companies you speak of were not required to give up their arms, were they?—A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. And they were not required to disband?—A. I never saw any of them in the capacity of companies; not to my knowledge.

T. H. WHEELER (colored) sworn and examined.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Question. Where do you reside?—Answer. I reside in Beaufort.

Q. How long have you lived there?—A. I have lived there nearly four years.

Q. Where did you live before going there?—A. At Philadelphia.

Q. Are you a native of Philadelphia?—A. I am, sir; I was born there.

Q. What is your occupation?—A. My occupation is that of a lawyer.

Q. When were you admitted to practice?—A. I was admitted in Washington in 1871, I think.

Q. In the city of Washington?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where did you read law?—A. In Howard University; graduated from there.

Q. In what court were you admitted?—A. I was admitted into the District court; that is, the supreme court of the District of Columbia.

Q. And you have been admitted to practice in the supreme court of this State?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your age?—A. My age is 26.

Q. You have always been a freeman, then?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What do you know in regard to this labor strike in Beaufort?—A. I was present at a meeting held immediately after the strikes upon the Combahee, and during the continuance of the same.

Q. In what county is that?—A. In Beaufort County.

Q. Where was this meeting held at which you were present?—A. The meeting was held at a place called Gardner's Corner. We call it Youstus Oaks.

Q. What was the cause of that strike?—A. The cause of the strike was the issuing of checks.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Do you know it of your own personal knowledge or have you heard of it?—A. It was immediately after and, I think, during the continuance of the strike. It was before the labor question was settled on the Combahee.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. How large a meeting was this?—A. It was a very large meeting. I suppose four or five hundred attended it.

Q. All laborers?—A. The most of them were.

Q. Was the subject of their grievances there discussed and talked over?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. State what they were.—A. That the planters in that section had issued—

The CHAIRMAN. I do not think this is competent at all.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. What was this meeting you attended?—A. The meeting was called at the instance of General Smalls, who said he desired a meeting to be called near Gardner's Corner, in order that the question of strikes might be settled, together with political questions.

Q. Who attended the meeting?—A. General Smalls attended, Mr. Hamilton attended, Mr. Bampfield attended, and Mr. Myers attended. There might have been others there; but I know those I have mentioned were there.

Q. You are speaking now of the persons who were there as speakers, I suppose?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What class of people were there?—A. Laborers.

Q. Strikers?—A. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you propose to show what those strikers said at that meeting?

Mr. LAPHAM. That is what I propose to show; what they claimed their grievance was.

Q. Will you state whether the excitement growing out of the strike ceased at any period of time; and, if so, when?—A. It ceased almost immediately afterward.

Q. When were these strikes?—A. I do not remember exactly the date; but it was some time late in the summer, about the time they were harvesting the rice.

Q. About how long before the election?—A. Some time before the election; some two or three months. It was before any nominations had been made.

Q. Did you take any part in the canvass?—A. I attended very nearly all the important meetings that were held.

Q. Were you at any meetings called by the republicans where the democrats appeared in any force? and, if so, state the first.—A. The first meeting at which I attended where the democrats came in force was at Bronson. It was the first meeting that was held at Bronson. The democrats had a meeting the same day at their club. They came to us and asked us to divide the time with them.

Q. How were they there?—A. There were a hundred or two there, I suppose, most of whom were armed.

Q. How armed?—A. With rifles and pistols. They came to the meeting, leaving their guns at the house at which they had assembled, which was not more than five hundred yards, I should judge, from the place where the meeting was held. They brought with them, however, their side-arms—pistols and the like. They cursed and damned all republicans generally. They said they desired nothing but the truth, and that we had had a fashion of telling the colored people lies, and that they didn't intend that we should do it. We went on with the meeting until Mr. Langly, the county auditor, spoke. He and Mr. Tillinghurst had some words. I was not near enough to hear the exact language of either. They finally came to blows, and the meeting was broken up, the democrats rushing to the house where they had their arms and obtaining them. I was insulted and threatened—

Q. What was said?—A. One man said I was nothing but a d—d northern radical; that South Carolina intended to rule, and that Hampton should be elected, and that they didn't intend to hear me. I finished my speech, however—

Q. This was before Hampton was nominated, was it not?—A. No, sir; this was after Hampton was nominated. They said they didn't intend that I should speak; I spoke, however. After finishing my speech, the colored people advised us all to leave, and we left without adjourning the meeting. Mr. Baupfield was present. Mr. Hamilton, I think, staid after we had gone.

Q. Was anybody speaking when you left?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who?—A. A democrat by the name of Tillinghurst, a lawyer in Bronson.

Q. The republicans left the meeting and went away?—A. The republicans left the meeting.

Q. Had the republicans any arms there?—A. I didn't see any; some of the men had clubs.

Q. Were you at any other meeting at Bronson?—A. No, sir.

Q. At what other places were you?—A. I was at a meeting at Hardeville, where the democrats claimed time.

Q. When was that?—A. That was late in the canvass; I don't remember the date.

Q. Was it a republican meeting?—A. It was a republican meeting.

Q. What occurred there?—A. The meeting was held at night, and the democrats came and claimed time, and insisted upon having half of the time; they were in such force—

Q. How many were there?—A. I suppose there were three hundred there; there were about seventy-five colored men.

Q. Were the democrats that came there in uniform?—A. No, sir.

Q. Had they any arms?—A. They had side-arms.

Q. By side-arms, what do you mean?—A. I mean pistols.

Q. You say they demanded half of the time?—A. They demanded half of the time, and knowing their superior force we granted it. The meeting commenced, and about the time that I was speaking a man by the name of Sweat, from Savannah, came up and said that I was a d—d radical son of a b—h.

Q. A man from Savannah, Ga., said that?—A. A man from Savannah, Ga.; he was in the crowd, and said I was a d—d radical son of a b—h, and told Mr. Moore to tell me so, and that he didn't desire to hear me tell any more d—d radical lies. Mr. Moore, I think, prevented a disturbance; I know he didn't desire any disturbance. Mr. Moore was chairman of the democratic executive committee in Beaufort.

Q. Is that all that occurred at the meeting?—A. There was nothing more occurred, other than that we were constantly interrupted by parties unknown to me—mostly white men—cursing, calling us d—d sons of b—s, d—d radical rascals, county thieves, and the like; so much so that most of the colored people left, because they were afraid to stay.

Q. When was this—how long before the election?—A. This, I suppose, was a month before the election. It wasn't more.

Q. Was it before or after the Bronson meeting?—A. It was after the Bronson meeting.

Q. Did you attend any other meetings to which the democrats came?—A. There was only one other meeting, and that was a quiet one, at Grahamville.

Q. Afternoon or evening?—A. This was in the afternoon. There were not more than two or three democrats who were invited to speak, and there were present five or six hundred colored men.

Q. Did you hear any threats about discharging laborers at either of these meetings?—A. Yes, sir; at the meeting held at Matthew's Bluff, Mr. Johnson, a wealthy farmer in that section, openly stated that he would discharge, and advised all person who were democrats to discharge, any person who was in their employ who did not vote with their interests and vote the democratic ticket.

Q. Did he say that publicly?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many colored people were there?—A. I should judge there were two or three hundred.

Q. Did you hear that at any other place?—A. I don't know as I heard it at any other meeting. I heard it often on the streets.

Q. You mean you heard planters make that threat?—A. I heard planters in the town of Beaufort make that allegation.

Q. How long before the election?—A. Some weeks before the election; in fact, from the beginning of the campaign.

Q. Do you know of any colored persons being dismissed from employment since the election?—A. Yes, sir; I know of quite a number who have been dismissed, and have interceded in getting land for them and employment.

Q. For how many?—A. Well, I don't think the number is less than two or three hundred.

Q. Two or three hundred persons?—A. Two or three hundred persons who have come from the upper country—that is, from the upper portion of the county of Beaufort, who have settled upon lands of Sheriff Wilson, Holmes, and others. Some are now quartered in the house of Mr. Crawford.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Upon what information do you predicate your statement here under oath that two or three hundred families or persons have been discharged in the upper part of Beaufort County since the election?—A. Because quite that number have come to me.

Q. Do you know it of your own personal knowledge?—A. I do not know as I can say that these men, of my personal knowledge, were discharged.

Q. Don't you, as a lawyer, know you cannot state as evidence anything that is hearsay?—A. I do not know but that under certain circumstances you may.

Q. Under what circumstance can a witness testify to hearsay testimony?—A. Where he is asked the question.

Q. Then you made that answer, knowing it to be hearsay testimony?—A. I made that answer, believing what I said to be true.

Q. Is that the ground upon which you testified?—A. I testified on the ground that I believed it was true.

Q. You were asked the question how many persons you knew that had been discharged, and then you then testified to a matter you had gained from hearsay?—A. You have my answer.

Q. Did you see these persons leave their homes?—A. Some of them I did.

Q. How many of them did you see leave their homes?—A. I don't know how many.

Q. About how many did you see leave their homes?—A. I saw half a dozen at least.

Q. Where?—A. From the section around Lawtonville.

Q. When?—A. Since the election.

Q. What were you doing at Lawtonville?—A. I was investigating a murder case, sir.

Q. Were you at the houses of these half dozen people when they left?—A. No, sir.

Q. How did you see them leave, then?—A. I saw them come off the place. I saw them take their things away from the place. I saw them in the road.

Q. Were they all in one place?—A. No, sir.

Q. How did you see them all leave, then?—A. I saw them at several places in the road with their things.

Q. Did you see them leave their houses?—A. No, sir.

Q. Then how do you know where they came from, if you did not see them start?—A. I know it as far as a man can reasonably know anything.

Q. You did not see them leave; you saw them on the road?—A. I saw them on the road with their things.

Q. Were they all together when you saw them?—A. No, sir.

Q. How many were together?—A. I saw them generally in groups of two or three.

Q. And you saw as many as five or six? That is as many as you saw in the road?—

A. I say I saw that many. I may have seen more.

Q. When you speak of two or three hundred people leaving their places in the northern part of Beaufort County, it is only from hearsay? You didn't see them start?—A. I didn't see them in the road. Some of the men, I know, lived at these places.

Q. How many do you know personally? Give their names.—A. Now, to give names is something I can't do.

Q. If you knew them personally cannot you give their names?—A. I didn't say that I knew them personally.

Q. What did you say?—A. I said because I knew they belonged there.

Q. How do you know that they belonged there if you did not know them?—A. Because I had seen them there.

Q. When did you see them there?—A. Time and time again, when I have been through the county.

- Q. And you cannot give their names?—A. No, sir.
- Q. Not one?—A. Yes; I know the names of one or two.
- Q. Give them.—A. I know one by the name of Clarke.
- Q. What is his Christian name?—A. I don't know his Christian name.
- Q. Where did he live?—A. He lived near Lawtonville.
- Q. Near what place?—A. I don't know whose place.
- Q. Give the name of the other.—A. I know a man by the name of Johnston, who came from some place near Hamburg.
- Q. How do you know that he came from near there?—A. Because I knew he came from there. I had seen him often.
- Q. Had you ever seen him on his farm?—A. I don't know whether I had.
- Q. Do you know, of your personal knowledge, that he had lived on a farm?—A. I don't know as to that.
- Q. Do you know what his business was?—A. I knew he was a farmer.
- Q. Did you ever see him farming?—A. No, sir.
- Q. Who else do you know that came down?—A. I don't know as I can recollect any other names.
- Q. That is all you can state?—A. That is all I can state.
- Q. You saw these people at Beaufort?—A. I did, at Beaufort.
- Q. All of them?—A. No, not all of them.
- Q. Do you state here that you saw two or three hundred people come into Beaufort since the election and make their homes there, or have you just heard of it?—A. No, I haven't heard anything of the kind. I know it from information of the men themselves who have come down from time to time, asking that I obtain them places; in fact, asking every man from Beaufort.
- Q. Do you know the name of any one man that has applied to you for a place?—A. I do not know that I do.
- Q. Can you state the number that have applied to you personally?—A. Well, I should say at least fifteen or twenty.
- Q. Do you know where they came from, except what you learned from them?—A. No more than this, that most of these men we come in contact with, sometimes as witnesses and at public meetings.
- Q. How did they get in court as witnesses if they came down since the election?—A. I am saying what I knew previously about these men. You asked me how I knew these men, and I told you I came in contact with them as witnesses in court.
- Q. And yet you cannot give their names?—A. I don't know as I can, positive.
- Q. Have you not stated this number from rumor—from what you have heard? You have no personal knowledge of what you have detailed here, have you, in regard to that matter?—A. I know from general information; I know it from personal application.
- Q. You have given the number that applied to you?—A. And the rest I know, of course, from general information.
- Q. Have you had any person make application to you to get him employment before this last month?—A. The instances before were very rare.
- Q. How long have you been living in Beaufort?—A. Nearly four years.
- Q. You never had any persons apply to you before to know where they could get employment?—A. No, sir; I might say very rare.
- Q. Is it unusual for colored people to come to Beaufort seeking employment?—A. In such numbers, yes, sir.
- Q. You have not stated that you know of more than fifteen or twenty. Is that an unusual thing?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Is it an unusual thing in a population like that of Beaufort County, a laboring population, going from farm to farm seeking labor?—A. It is an unusual thing for men to come down there and say they have been driven from their places on account of political opinion.
- Q. Do you state it to be a fact that it is an unusual thing for laborers in Beaufort County to go from one place to another to get employment?—A. To go from one place to another? No, I do not think so.
- Q. These laborers do not stay always on the same farm, do they?—A. They do, as a rule.
- Q. They never leave the same farm?—A. When you ask me if they never leave, you ask me for an exception.
- Q. I ask you that question. Do they never leave their places of employment?—A. I suppose they do.
- Q. Does not the stability of laborers at any given point depend upon the season and the crop and the amount of cultivation that is carried on in that particular neighborhood? Is it not some years greater than others?—O, well, I don't think so.
- Q. There is no difference in the seasons, and no difference in the amount of planting and cultivation in different seasons?—A. There may be slight differences, but I don't think it amounts to anything.

Q. Have you had any experience in the country as a farmer, or have you been living in Beaufort all the time?—A. I have been living in Beaufort most of the time.

Q. Have you lived elsewhere than in the town of Beaufort?—A. No, sir; but my business calls me to the country.

Q. You have been engaged exclusively in the business of the law?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have never planted, have you?—A. Never an acre in my life.

Q. And the only contact you have with the people is in your profession?—A. Yes, sir; the only contact I have with them is in my profession.

Q. Then you do not know how these farms are conducted, except from observation?—A. O, yes, sir.

Q. You do not know it otherwise?—A. Of course, a man does not know otherwise who does not farm.

Q. The question is, whether you know from your own observation about the manner in which farms are conducted and how the laborers are employed.—A. Of course, I know from my own observation.

Q. What observation have you had?—A. I know, first, from seeing men with whom I am familiar living upon the same plantation; and I know further, with what I have seen and learned from others, that it is policy to keep laborers together. It is policy to keep them together from year to year, to the planters' interests; and therefore on that ground it would seem to dictate that they should stay on the farms from year to year.

Q. Does not the amount that a planter plants and the condition of the season have anything to do with whether a given number of laborers remain on a place over one season to another?—A. As a rule, the lands in Beaufort County are cultivated—

Q. I ask you the question whether or not the amount that a planter cultivates and the condition of the season does not have to do with the number of hands that remain upon his place?—A. I don't think the condition of the season has anything to do with it. I think the amount of crop he would put in would necessarily have something to do with it.

Q. Does not the amount that these planters cultivate vary, according to the season?—A. Well, I couldn't answer that, because I don't know; but I don't think it does.

Q. And the number of hands employed would vary?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the hands would go from one place to another? They wouldn't remain at a place without employment, would they?—A. I shouldn't think so, sir.

Q. With regard to this first meeting you were at, at Bronston, when was that?—A. I don't know exactly the time.

Q. Who were the speakers there that day?—A. Mr. Langley spoke, Mr. Bampffield spoke, and Mr. Hamilton—I don't know whether he spoke or not, because I left him there.

Q. Then this difficulty that you speak of between Tillinghurst and Langley, Mr. Bampffield witnessed it, did he not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then the circumstance you speak of is the same one that he saw?—A. Yes, sir, the same.

Q. How do you say that difficulty originated?—A. It commenced about some words which one of them used to the other; I don't know which one. I was not near enough to hear the remarks of either. The first I saw was the strike by Tillinghurst.

Q. Was that on or off the stand?—A. It was on the stand.

Q. Did you not hear Langley give Tillinghurst the lie?—A. I did not; I wasn't near enough to hear anything.

Q. Did the meeting break up on that row?—A. The meeting was nearly broke up; we had no meeting after that. I spoke after that, and attempted to introduce Major Gothe, who refused to speak on account of the noise. I attempted to speak myself, but was so constantly interrupted by the cursing that was going on that it was impossible for me to proceed.

Q. Bampffield was there all the time and saw what you did?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had the same opportunities for seeing that you had?—A. I think he had.

Q. You say you attempted to speak after that?—A. I did; after that difficulty.

Q. How long did you speak?—A. I suppose I spoke probably eight or ten minutes.

Q. Who else spoke?—A. Mr. Tillinghurst was speaking when I left.

Q. Who spoke immediately after you?—A. Mr. Tillinghurst.

Q. He was concluding, was he?—A. No, sir.

Q. Who was to speak after him?—A. O, you mean who was to conclude the meeting? I don't know whether he was or not.

Q. Do you know whether any one spoke after him or not?—A. I don't know; I left.

Q. Where did you go then?—A. We left, and went to French's house.

Q. How many arms do you say you saw there that day?—A. I said there were about one hundred and fifty or two hundred men there.

Q. You did not see any guns?—A. I did see guns; saw them come there armed.

Q. Where did you see them?—A. At the station.

Q. Did you and Bampffield go there together?—A. He and I went on the train together, yes. I don't know whether he and I came from French's house where we ate dinner, or not.

Q. Where did you see the guns?—A. In the hands of the parties.

Q. After you got there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The guns, you say, were in the hands of the parties?—A. When I saw them they were in the hands of the parties.

Q. Were the parties there on the ground when you got there, or did they come afterward?—A. I suppose some were there, and some came there afterward.

Q. How many democrats, do you say, were there?—A. I should judge between two and three hundred.

Q. Were they uniformed?—A. No, sir.

Q. Were they on horseback?—A. Some were and some were not.

Q. About what proportion were on horseback?—A. But a few were on horseback.

Q. And when you saw them they had guns?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had they the guns up where you were speaking?—A. No, sir.

Q. Where did they have them?—A. When we came up to the railroad depot we saw quite a number of men at the station with guns. We then went over to French's house, which is some distance from the railroad station. I came back. I don't know in whose company I was when I came back; but I remember coming to the station, and most of them were then armed. There was a meeting-house to the right of the station, and they went over there and deposited their guns. I suppose that was five hundred yards from the place where the meeting was held.

Q. It was in a meeting-house, you say, where they put their guns?—A. I don't know whether it is a church or a school-house; but I know it was a house at which they held their meetings.

Q. Did you see any colored men there with arms?—A. I did not.

Q. Did not the militia company bring their guns and leave them in the house?—A. No, sir; never saw that in my experience.

Q. Were you at the second meeting at Bronson?—A. I was not.

Q. What other meeting were you at where there was any joint discussion?—A. At Hardeeville and at Grahamville.

Q. When were you at the meeting at Grahamville?—A. In company with General Smalls, on the same day that the meeting was held at Bronson.

Q. You held a meeting at Grahamville?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who spoke there?—A. Mr. Rentigreeve, from Hilton Head, General Smalls, and myself, on the republican side.

Q. Did Miller speak there?—A. No, sir. Dr. De Wezie, Charles E. Bell, a lawyer, spoke on the democratic side. Bell, I think, was a candidate afterward for probate judge.

Q. Were you at any other joint discussion?—A. No, sir; they were discontinued then.

Q. What was the name of this large planter that you heard talking about discharging men if they did not vote the democratic ticket?—A. Frank Johnston.

Q. Where does he live?—A. I think he lives in the neighborhood of Matthews Bluff. I do not know exactly where he lives.

Q. Where did you hear him say that?—A. He said that to me while I was speaking at Matthews Bluff.

Q. When was that?—A. I think it was a week and a few days before the election.

Q. He said it to you while you were speaking?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What provoked that remark on his part?—A. He asked that he be allowed to speak, and he was refused. He said then he intended to question the speaker. There was one Ball Anderson commenced to speak. He was rather an ignorant man, and Johnston commenced to question him. I asked Johnston if he would defer his questions until some one got up there who was able to answer.

Q. And you thought you were that man?—A. No, sir. There were other speakers there who spoke before me; Mr. Myers spoke before me.

Q. But you made that suggestion yourself?—A. I suggested that he wait for some of the other speakers who were able to answer. When I commenced to speak he said that he desired to ask me several questions, and asked me if I would answer them, and I told him I would endeavor to. He asked me several questions; I don't remember what they were.

Q. What did he ask you?—A. I cannot tell exactly. He asked me as to the management of county affairs. He asked me also as to indictments against the treasurer which had been quashed; and several other things he asked me—I can't remember them exactly, but they were of a political nature.

Q. What was the treasurer's name?—A. Holmes.

Q. Was that of a political nature?—A. I should judge it was of a political nature. But those indictments were some time before the election.

Q. Indictments against Holmes, the treasurer?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was he treasurer before the election?—A. Yes, sir. That was in May. I do not mean the meeting was in May, but the indictments which were made against him at the June term of the court.

Q. Did he continue to be treasurer after that?—A. Yes, sir. The indictments were all quashed.

Q. Who was treasurer before him?—A. The treasurer before him, I think, was Mr. Wilder.

Q. What became of Wilder?—A. He is in Beaufort now—at least he is not in Beaufort; I saw him out in the entry of this building a little while ago.

Q. What other questions did Mr. Johnston ask you besides county affairs?—A. He asked me several questions. I do not remember what they were—about State matters. I think he asked me whether I didn't think Hampton would make a better governor than Chamberlain, to which of course I answered no. And he also asked me if I favored Chamberlain's nomination, and of course I answered yes. I cannot remember really what he said at that time now. But he spoke of the matter that occurred a year ago—probably it has been two years ago—about General Smalls and Nat. Myers having been refused at an eating-saloon at Combahee.

Q. You still have not answered my question.—A. I am getting at it. He said, "Yes; they were refused, and he would refuse them himself." I asked him if he would refuse the Congressman of his district, and he said he would refuse any "nigger" eating with him; that if any "nigger" on his plantation voted against his interests and the democratic party he would discharge them.

Q. Did he make that remark right in connection with this eating-saloon affair of Smalls?—A. Yes, sir; just at that time.

Q. He went right off from that and made that statement?—A. I do not know. There may have been some other words in relation to it, but it came in about that time.

Q. Did you say nothing during all these questions of his?—A. He was constantly interrupting and I was constantly answering during this whole conversation.

Q. During these questions he was asking you, to which you were making replies, he was going from one thing to another?—A. As I told you in the beginning, I do not remember the exact language that either of us used. He was asking questions and I was answering them. I may have asked him some questions.

Q. Do you state here that his declaration to you that he would not keep any man in his employ who voted against his interests, followed immediately after his remark that he would not eat with any "nigger"?—A. I cannot say that it did. I would not say so.

Q. Then why did you make two statements together?—A. I say it was just about that time. You asked me what he said, and I have told you all that I remember.

Q. You remember those two remarks coming together?—A. I do not know as I remember them coming together.

Q. You do not know that they came in the way you have stated?—A. No, sir.

Q. You do not know what answer or observation on your part may have excited that remark of his?—A. No; I do not know exactly what I may have said.

Q. Was that the only threat of that sort that you heard made at a public meeting?—A. That is the only threat at a public meeting that I can remember of that sort.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Did he not say at that time that he would advise others to do the same?—A. Yes; that he would advise all others to do so—to discharge all who didn't vote for their interests and the democratic party.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did he make any statement in that connection why he regarded it for their interests that they should vote that ticket?—A. No, sir; he did not.

By Mr. EDEN:

Q. Were you ever present, and did you ever hear and see a planter discharge a colored man on account of his politics?—A. No, sir.

Q. So you have no actual knowledge of any one being discharged on account of his politics since the election?—A. No, sir; I think that would be impossible.

Q. At this meeting that you attended at Bronson, do you not know that some of the colored militia had arms down at Jones's?—A. No, sir; I do not know it. Furthermore, I was at Jones's house, and I never saw any.

Q. Was Bampffield at Jones's house with you?—A. I don't know whether he was or not. It has been so long ago that I really can't remember.

Q. What time were you at Jones's house?—A. I was at Jones's house just before the meeting.

Q. And you say you don't recollect whether Bampffield was with you or not?—A. No, sir; I don't recollect.

Q. And you saw no arms there?—A. No, sir.

Q. You know there was a company of colored militia in the neighborhood, do you not?—A. No, sir; I do not know that. The only organized company of militia I know of outside of the town of Beaufort is at Lawtonville.

D. P. CONDY (colored) sworn and examined.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Question. Where do you live?—Answer. At this present time I am residing at No. 6 Chalmers street.

Q. In this city?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you lived in this city?—A. I have been here since a boy of thirteen.

Q. How old are you?—A. Forty-three, sir.

Q. Do you know a club here in the city of Charleston called the Carolina Club?—A. Yes, sir; I do, sir.

Q. Have you been in the employ of that club?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long?—A. Three years, sir.

Q. Who composed the club?—A. There is a good deal of members. I can give you the names of the club.

Q. Are they living in Charleston?—A. Yes, sir. There is Mr. Jervy, a young lawyer; he is the president; and Lee Howard, vice-president.

Q. Was anything said to you about your time being up on Monday last?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What led to your leaving?—A. On my political opinion. I was asked whether I was a democrat or a republican.

Q. When were you asked that?—A. I was asked that in August, and in September I received a writ to leave or vote the democrat ticket.

Q. What did you say to that?—A. I received that writ on the 14th of September, and I was to give a week's notice what I would do. I specified if I couldn't vote as I wanted to I wouldn't vote on either side, if I could retain my position, and it came to the push in the latter part of September; they told me they wouldn't have no use for me up to the 1st of January—this Monday coming; and I told them then, "Gentlemen, I would rather go on the 1st of December;" and they said, "No; you can stay till the 1st of January, till you find a suitable place."

Q. You are to leave on Monday?—A. On Monday; yes, sir.

Q. Do you know William Ballin?—A. He was the head superintendent.

Q. How long has he been there?—A. Four years, exactly.

Q. Do you know whether he was discharged?—A. He was discharged for the same principles, sir.

Q. When was he discharged?—A. On the 1st of December, sir.

Q. What was he discharged for?—A. For his political opinions, simply.

Q. Do you know whether he went up and inquired what he was discharged for?—A. Yes, sir; we had a meeting to that effect. We two went before them; we was the only responsible men.

Q. William Ballin left the 1st of this month?—A. Yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. You say a writ was served on you?—A. Yes, sir; on the 14th of September.

Q. What do you mean by a writ? Was it in writing?—A. In writing, sir; by the secretary of the club. The writ I destroy. I got my character—what he give me as my place of business—but the writ was outside of this. I called it an intimidation writ.

Q. You carry a paper in your pocket—a certificate from whom?—A. A certificate from the secretary of the club.

Q. Let me see it. [Witness hands paper to the chairman.] This you got on the 27th of December, did you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that the time the writ was served on you?—A. O, no, sir; the writ was served on the 14th of September.

Q. What was it that you call it a writ?—A. The writ specified these words—

Q. Was it in writing?—A. In writing, sir.

Q. Who was it from?—A. From that same gentleman.

Q. Did he hand it to you?—A. Out of his own hands.

Q. What did you do with it?—A. I destroy it.

Q. What did it state?—A. It said, "You can either vote or not, but vote the democrat ticket; if you ever vote the republican ticket you must leave the club."

Q. It said, if you ever voted the republican ticket you must leave; what was the balance of it?—A. It says, "You can either vote or not, but vote the democrat ticket; but if you vote the republican ticket you must leave." My objection was not to vote the democrat ticket at all, sir; I never did vote it, and I couldn't do it. They simply said to me, in words, if you don't vote either side you can retain your position.

Q. Did they ever say to you that if you did not vote either side you could retain your position?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who told you?—A. That very gentleman who signed that.

Q. You say that this gentleman who signed this paper told you that if you did not vote either way you could retain your position?—A. Yes, sir; that was the understanding.

Q. And he stated that to you?—A. He stated that verbally by his mouth to me.

Q. When did he state it to you?—A. He stated that to me, sir, in September; the very month he gave me that writ. I says, "It's very hard you said to me I must leave." He said, "No, no; if you don't vote either side you can stay."

Q. Did he give you any reason for it?—A. He said they intended to carry the election if they could.

Q. And wanted you to vote the democratic ticket?—A. Yes, sir; he wanted all who could vote to vote that ticket.

Q. What is this Carolina Club?—A. It's a society, I believe.

Q. How long has it been in existence here?—A. Before I could remember—a long time.

Q. It's an old club, is it?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Of a social and literary character?—A. A young gentlemen's social club.

Q. What was your position there?—A. I was bar-keeper; that is, tend cash affair and served drinks; served the gentlemen with the drinks as they come in.

Q. What did they pay your for your services?—A. Twenty-five dollars, sir, for the last four months; $20 at the first start.

Q. You were paid $25 latterly?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have they employed anybody in your place?—A. Not now. One man had the head superintendent's place; but my place is not filled yet.

Q. When did they tell you to leave?—A. That is my certificate, as I call it; I leave on the first of the month.

Q. Did this gentleman notify you to leave?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When?—A. In December, in these words—it was in the latter part of November; when he paid off the superintendent he said to me, "Daniel, we will not want your services no longer up to the 1st of January."

Q. That was the 1st of November when he paid you off for that month, and he then notified you that he would not want you any longer than the 1st of January?—A. Yes, sir; he wanted me to run this month out. I said to him then I would rather go on the 1st of December. "You are falling from your word. You said if I did not vote on either side I could retain my position, and as you fall from your own words, I feel myself a man." And I went and looked for a suitable place for my family, which is large, and I came back to the gentleman to repeat his word over to me, if he please. And he said, "You know the committee will not go back on their word; they will not discharge none who don't vote." I said then, "I came back because I haven't voted, and I say I will stay until the 1st of January, and when I gets a suitable place to put my family I will do so." Then I ask for my character, and he gave it to me on that date. Those were his words, sir.

Q. This conversation of yours was with the secretary, Berkley Grimball?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you did not recognize their right to change servants at all?—A. I don't think it is right at all. If you have a good servant about, that is, a competent servant you can rely upon in business, a trusty servant—I say if you have a servant about you, sir, that is capable of his business, an honest servant, I don't think it is right for you to discharge that servant on his political views, for I think every man at this time has a right to vote as he pleases so to do.

Q. Have not men who employ servants a right to dismiss them if they want to?—A. I say if he is an honorable servant it is left to him to do as he pleases.

Q. If they can get a man just as competent as you are, who votes with them, don't you think they have a right to employ him?—A. I am simply showing you my views of the point.

Q. You do not think they ought to have discharged you?—A. I say I don't think they ought to discharge. They can do as they choose.

Q. Don't you recognize their right, in South Carolina, to employ men of their own political preference if they want to?—A. Yes, sir; I recognize that, if they want to, of course.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. What is this club called?—A. Carolina Place.

Q. Who is in Bullin's place?—A. A young boy by the name of Isaac Ramsey.

Q. He is the superintendent?—A. Yes, sir.

J. F. J. MULLIGAN sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Question. Where do you reside?—Answer. Beaufort County.

Q. What is your age?—A. Thirty.

Q. Do you hold any official position in Beaufort County; and, if so, state what.—A. Trial-justice.

Q. Were you the justice before whom the case was tried on the day the difficulty occurred between the Ellises and Miller?—A. I was, sir.

Q. State briefly what was the occasion of the difficulty, what brought it about, and all the facts connected with it, as far as you know.

Mr. LAPHAM. What do you propose to prove by this witness?

Mr. EDEN. We propose to rebut Miller's testimony.

Mr. LAPHAM. All you would be entitled to show by this witness would be the cause of complaint before him.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. What was the man's name that Miller defended?—A. He was defending a colored man, two of them, by the names of Zachariah Irving and Rafe some one; I don't remember his name; and young Ellis—W. P. Ellis—was on the other side.

Q. What was the nature of the charge?—A. Malicious trespass.

Q. On whose property?—A. For entry, after notice, of inclosed lands—upon the lands of John G. Goethe.

Q. Who was he—what relation to the Ellises?—A. He was a brother-in-law of W. P. Ellis.

Q. Proceed now with the occurrences there. What was the point in Miller's speech that provoked the difficulty?—A. Miller was the attorney for the defense, and he stated, as well as I can remember, that the charge was conceived in fraud, and spoke as if the parties were Ellis and—

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Give his words.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Give the substance of it.—A. Well, sir, I think that he mentioned—

Mr. LAPHAM. I object to the witness stating what was mentioned.

By Mr. EDEN:

Q. Give the substance as near as you can state it.—A. That is as much as I could state of his words, that the charge was conceived in fraud.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Was there any other imputation besides that?—A. He went on to say a good deal, but I couldn't remember his words.

Q. Was it very abusive?—A. Yes, sir; he used abusive language. I don't remember what it was now.

Q. State what occurred then.—A. After that old Captain Ellis, the father of W. P. Ellis, was sitting in the court-room, in a chair, or on a bench, I don't remember which, got up out of his seat, and I spoke to him to keep his seat. He is a very old gentleman. All then remained quiet till after court.

Q. How old a man is old Mr. Ellis?—A. I suppose he is about 70—between sixty and seventy.

Q. Is he a man in good health?—A. No, sir; his health is bad.

Q. What is his condition of health?—A. Well, he has had a stroke of palsy.

Q. When you spoke, it all quieted down?—A. All quieted.

Q. And the trial proceeded?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see anything occur after that?—A. After court they all went out of the court-room and started off home. I saw nothing else after that until I saw Mr. Miller.

Q. When did you see Miller?—A. Some of the parties came to me and told me there was a row down in the road, about two or three hundred yards from my house.

Q. State what you saw?—A. That is all I saw.

Q. You did not see the row?—A. I didn't see it; no, sir.

Q. Where was old man Ellis during this row?—A. He remained in the court-room with me.

Q. He was not out there at all?—A. No, sir; he didn't go.

Q. Did you see Miller when he came back to the house?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did anything occur there between him and Ellis?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did old man Ellis say anything to him?—A. No, sir.

Q. He was in the house where you were?—A. Miller went in my yard. I was in the court-house.

Q. Old man Ellis was in the court-house with you?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And nothing transpired between old man Ellis and Miller?—A. No, sir.

Q. State whether there was any arrangement made there at that time about the hearing of another case over where Miller lived; and, if so, state what it was and when it was that you went there.—A. I had another case that was to come on at the same time, at Stafford's Cross-Roads.

Q. On the same day?—A. Yes, sir. Miller told me that he didn't want to come back there, and asked me to have the trial up to Isler's Cross-Roads, where he lived. I had held court up there a good many times previous to that time. On the day appointed I went up.

Q. How long after?—A. I suppose some six or eight days. I don't remember; I suppose about that time.

Q. About eight days after?—A. I suppose about that.

Q. Do you remember the day of the week; whether it was Thursday or not?—A. To the best of my recollection, it was on Thursday.

Q. State whether you went up there.—A. I did. It was a preliminary examination. Miller was the attorney for the defense, and J. E. Larricy attorney for the State. There was a good many persons there, both white and black, when I got there. Miller told me that he had seen his party, and that they would waive the preliminary examination. Therefore we had no preliminary examination, and the parties were bound over to court.

Q. About how many persons were there?—A. I suppose there was twenty whites and twenty or thirty colored.

Q. Were there any parties there armed with guns that you saw?—A. I saw no guns, either by the whites or the colored.

Q. Were you there at Miller's house?—A. Yes, sir; I went in his house.

Q. Was there a man in that party by the name of Johnston?—A. Capt. W. C. Johnston was there, sir; and the parties all retired after Miller said he would waive the preliminary examination—the party broke up and all went home.

Q. Do you know whether W. C. Johnston had any interview with Miller that day or not?—A. Yes, sir; I think so.

Q. Where did that occur; there at that time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hear it?—A. No, sir; I seen them talking.

Q. Where?—A. In Miller's piazza.

Q. Did you hear what transpired between them?—A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Were there any other parties present there?—A. There was a good many present, but I don't remember who they were.

Q. Were they parties there attending the trial?—A. Yes, sir; kept going in and out. They all broke up and went home. All was peaceable and quiet.

Q. This assembly there had nothing to do with Mr. Miller, had it?—A. Nothing in the world, only in regard to the case in which he was attorney.

Q. This appointment had been made by arrangement with him?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far was Miller's house from this room where you held the court?—A. About a hundred yards.

Q. Where did you attend on the day of the recent election?—A. I went in the morning and swore in the managers at Nix's Cross-Roads precinct.

By Mr. EDEN:

Q. How soon after that trial did Miller leave there and move down to where he is living now?—A. I don't think it was over four or five days.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. In this difficulty that occurred between Miller and Ellis, did you hear anything of a political character suggested in connection with it?

Mr. LAPHAM. I think it would be better to ask the witness to state what was said. I object to his giving inferences.

The CHAIRMAN. I will call his attention directly to what Miller testified to. [To the witness.] Did you hear any statement made there in your yard when Miller came back by any one to the effect, "Let us not have another Hamburg affair?"—A. I did not.

Q. You have said that there was no statement made by old man Ellis at all?—A. None that I heard.

Q. And he was in your house when Miller came back?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Old Mr. Ellis was in the court-room?—A. Yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. He was in there all the time?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did not go out, if I understand you, to where Miller was?—A. Not till he went home.

Q. How long was that after the trouble and difficulty was over?—A. I suppose about half an hour.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. How many persons were in the court-room, as you call it, during this trial?—A. I don't remember, sir, how many were in the court-room.

Q. You remember something about it. Give me your best recollection.—A. Well, sir, I couldn't state exactly the number.

Q. About the number?—A. I would say about fifteen or twenty.

Q. Can you give the names of any of them?—A. Yes, sir; I can give the names of some.

Q. Give the names of those that you remember.—A. There was Capt. N. W. Ellis; there was M. D. Ellis—

Q. Who was he?—A. Son of Captain Ellis. W. P. Ellis, another son; J. W. Ellis, another son; S. F. Ellis, another son; Smart Robison, a colored man; Bill Roberts, Thomas E. Miller, J. E. Larricy, and Capt. W. C. Johnston.

Q. Johnston was present there, and heard all that was said and saw the whole occurrence?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you say whether any of them were armed?—A. Whether I can say they were or not, do you mean?

Q. Yes.—A. I cannot say, sir; they might have had something, but I saw none.

Q. Did you see whether the old man had any weapon?—A. I don't think he had, sir; I saw none.

Q. Can you remember what the old man said?—A. I don't think he said anything at all.

Q. What time did he rise in his seat?—A. He arose out of his seat when Miller was speaking.

Q. You were listening to Miller, were you not?—A. Yes, sir; I was.

Q. You did not see him at the moment he arose, did you?—A. Yes, sir; he was sitting right in front of me on a bench.

Q. Did you see him when he arose?—A. Yes, sir; I saw him.

Q. And you think he didn't say anything?—A. I don't think he did, sir.

Q. Did any one say anything?—A. Yes, sir; Mr. F. S. Ellis spoke.

Q. What did he say?—A. He asked Miller if he meant to say that they were dishonest.

Q. If who were dishonest; the Ellises?—A. Yes, sir. I ordered him to stop, and that ended it.

Q. At first you ordered the old man to sit down?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then ordered S. F. Ellis to stop?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember whether Miller made any answer to what Ellis said?—A. I don't remember.

Q. The trial went on without further interruption?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You discharged the prisoners?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know how Miller was there?—A. He came on horseback, sir.

Q. Did you see him mount his horse after he left the court-room?—A. No, sir; I did not, sir.

Q. You did not come out of the court-room?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did they all go out except the old man?—A. No, sir; J. E. Larricy, one of the attorneys, staid in, and two or three other men whose names I don't remember just now.

Q. Was there any complaint or anything said about the discharge of the defendants?—A. Nothing that I heard, sir.

Q. Nothing said to you?—A. No, sir.

Q. How many went out about the time Miller went out?—A. Well, they kept going out.

Q. Most of them went out, didn't they?—A. There didn't more than three or four stay in the room.

Q. Where did you next see Miller?—A. I next saw him in my yard, sir.

Q. Who was with him?—A. Smart Robinson, a colored man, was with him, and Peter Roberts, Zachariah Irving, and Rafe were with him.

Q. What were they doing there with him?—A. They were in my yard, sir; sitting down on the steps.

Q. What called you there?—A. I had gotten through and started in the house.

Q. Where did you leave the old man?—A. I left the old gentleman out, sir; he started home.

Q. He had gone out of the court-room?—A. Yes, sir; and he was fixing to go home.

Q. Where did you go when you saw Miller in your yard?—A. I went on in the yard, into the house.

Q. Did you go right into the house?—A. Yes, sir; I talked with him at the step, and then went into the house and put up my books.

Q. Where did you leave Miller and the other men?—A. I left them sitting on the steps, sir.

Q. Did you come out of your house again?—A. Yes, sir; I came back.

Q. How long were you in the house?—A. I suppose about ten minutes, sir.

Q. What occurred while you were in the house you do not know, of course?—A. No, sir.

Q. When you came out where did you go?—A. I went out to the steps where Miller and these men were, sir.

- Q. What occurred then?—A. Nothing else occurred.
- Q. What did you come out for?—A. I simply came out there, as far as the steps, to talk with them.
- Q. Did you talk with them?—A. Yes, sir; I have stated I went back to talk to them.
- Q. To talk about what?—A. Nothing very particular, as I know of.
- Q. You did not see that Miller was hurt?—A. Yes, sir; I saw that.
- Q. Where did you see that he was hurt?—A. He was hurt on the side of the head, sir.
- Q. Badly hurt?—A. Well, I didn't examine it; but I don't think it was very bad, sir.
- Q. You could see that he had been struck on the side of the head, could you?—A. O, yes; I saw that.
- Q. Whereabouts on the side of his head?—A. I think it was on the right side of the head.
- Q. What was the appearance of it?—A. Well, sir, it was a bruise about an inch or an inch and a half long.
- Q. It was not a cut?—A. Yes, sir; the skin was cut a little.
- Q. Any blood?—A. Yes, sir; some blood.
- Q. For South Carolina, you think it was a pretty light blow?—A. It wasn't a hard blow, sir. I have seen a good sight worse.
- Q. You did not examine it?—A. No, sir; I didn't examine it.
- Q. Did Miller complain of it at that time?—A. He didn't complain much at that time.
- Q. Did he say anything about his injury?—A. Yes, sir; he told me Mr. Ellis had struck him.
- Q. Did he say with what?—A. He said with a stick, sir.
- Q. Did he say he had knocked him off his horse?—A. No, sir; he didn't say that.
- Q. How long did you remain out there then?—A. I remained out there, as well as I can remember, some twenty or thirty minutes.
- Q. What were you staying there so long as that for?—A. I was just talking with the parties who was out there, sir.
- Q. Do you say that Miller did not give you a full account of the assault on him?—A. No, sir; he did not give me a full account of it that day.
- Q. That night?—A. Not that night, sir.
- Q. Was he in a condition to?—A. Well, sir, he was talking with a good many. He was talking with Captain Johnston and a good many others.
- Q. Did you hear the talk between him and Captain Johnston?—A. No, sir; I did not.
- Q. Did you not hear Captain Johnston request him not to prosecute Ellis?—A. I think I heard Captain Johnston ask him not to prosecute—
- Q. Ellis for striking him?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Was it not arranged there that Miller should give an answer the next Thursday whether he would or not?—A. Yes, sir; I heard that.
- Q. When was it that Miller requested you to try the other case at his house instead of the court-room?—A. I think I stated at the office—
- Q. You have stated that Miller requested that the examination should be at his house?—A. At Isler's Cross-Roads, near his house.
- Q. When did he make that request of you?—A. I think it was that day, sir, that he requested me to have it up there.
- Q. Do you not know that it was after this trouble with Ellis, and that he gave that as the reason?—A. I think it was after, sir.
- Q. What reason did he give for not wanting to come there?—A. That is what he told me, sir; that he didn't want to come back.
- Q. Did he not tell you why?—A. No, sir.
- Q. Did he not tell you he was afraid to come there?—A. I suppose he thought I knew the reason why.
- Q. But you understood it was because of this difficulty with Ellis?—A. Yes, sir; I understood that from what he said.
- Q. Who went to Miller's house on Thursday, the day you were to have the trial? Did you go there before these people came or after?—A. There was a good many there when I got there.
- Q. They didn't come into the house at all, did they?—A. Some of them did not.
- Q. Did the bulk of them?—A. Not all of them. They kept going in and out.
- Q. Do you remember whether you went in?—A. I went into Miller's house, sir.
- Q. Was there a yard to his house?—A. Yes, sir; there was a yard.
- Q. Where did you go in; through the gate?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Miller states that some of the men who came there had arms, and laid them by a log in front of his house?—A. I didn't see any, sir.
- Q. May they not have been there and you not have seen them?—A. Possibly. If they had, they were hid. I didn't notice anything of the kind.

- Q. The bulk of the people had got there before you, had they not?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And whether they came with arms or not you cannot say?—A. I saw none.
- Q. You do not know whether they had any when they came or not?—A. I think if they had carried guns I would have seen them.
- Q. But you did not arrive there until after they got there?—A. But I saw a good many go off.
- Q. Can you tell whether they had any side-arms?—A. If they had, I didn't see them. They might have had them under their coats or elsewhere.
- Q. In what room was it that you saw Captain Johnston and Miller engaged in private conversation?—A. It was soon after I got there; I heard them talking on the piazza.
- Q. How long were they talking together?—A. I suppose, maybe, half an hour, sir.
- Q. What the subject was you do not know anything about?—A. No, sir; I didn't go up at all.
- Q. Was it after that conversation that Miller said to you he would waive the examination?—A. It was after that conversation; yes, sir. I asked him what he proposed doing, and he said—
- Q. The only point was after he had this interview with Captain Johnston?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And then the parties went away, I understand you?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Did Captain Johnston go away with them, or did he linger?—A. He went, I think. He was one of the first that went.
- Q. Were any of the Ellises there?—A. Yes, sir. W. J. Ellis was there.
- Q. The one that had struck him was there?—A. The one that Miller alleged struck him.
- Q. He was one of the parties that was there?—A. Yes, sir. He went with Captain Johnston, I believe, in a buggy.
- Q. Now, don't you know that Miller immediately began his preparations for moving?—A. Well, sir, he didn't stay over four or five days.
- Q. Don't you know that he began making preparations to move at once?—A. Well, sir, I went home, and the first I knew he was gone before I knew he was going.
- Q. The arrangement under which he went you do not know anything about?—A. No, sir.
- Q. And he has never been back there since?—A. I seen him pass once or twice.
- Q. I mean to live there.—A. No, sir; his family is not there.
- Q. Is the house vacant?—A. No, sir; there are some colored people living in it.
- Q. Did it not stand vacant for some time?—A. Yes, sir; it did.
- Q. Until a recent period?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. How many in family had Miller?—A. He had a wife and one child.
- Q. Where is he living at the present time?—A. I am told he is living in Grahamville.
- Q. Did you take any part in politics this fall?—A. Well, sir, not a great deal.
- Q. Well, some?—A. Well, sir, if I was to say I had taken none, I would, of course, be out of it.
- Q. Which ticket did you support?—A. I voted the democratic ticket, sir.
- Q. Did you ever vote it before?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Ever since you have been in South Carolina?—A. Yes, sir. I voted for Judge Green the last time.
- Q. Prior to that, in 1872, how did you vote? In other words, don't you know you have ranked as a republican?—A. I have since the war; that is, some part of the time.
- Q. You were appointed to office as a republican, weren't you?—A. No, sir; I don't think so.
- Q. Did not Miller procure your appointment?—A. Myers procured my appointment, sir.
- Q. Did not Miller aid him in procuring it?—A. I think he did, sir. They didn't ask me what I was.
- Q. Whose place did you take?—A. I was appointed in the place of S. F. Ellis, who tendered his resignation.
- Q. He was the son of old Mr. Ellis?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. And the attorney trying the cause before you on the opposite side of Miller that day?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. You knew the fact, then, that there was not a good feeling between the Ellises and Miller. Didn't you see this fuss there that day?—A. Well, sir, I did not; no.
- Q. You did not know that the cause that led young Ellis to resign created feeling against Miller?—A. He told me a good while before the election—
- Q. Were you not aware of the fact that there was not a good feeling between Ellis and Miller?—A. I always seen them meet friendly.
- Q. I did not ask for that.—A. I do not, sir.
- Q. You were not aware of the fact?—A. No, sir.
- Q. Do you know what caused Ellis to resign?—A. I do not, sir.
- Q. Do you not know that Miller made charges against him, and was about to ask for his removal?—A. No, sir; I do not know it.

Q. Miller or Myers; one or the other of them?—A. It might have been Myers.

Q. Don't you know what led to Ellis's resignation and your appointment?—A. No, sir; I do not know what led to his resignation. He told me a good while before that—

Q. Where did you leave Miller that night that he was struck?—A. He left my house and went home, sir.

Q. Who was with him?—A. I think he went by himself, sir.

Q. Where did the colored men who were with him go?—A. They went back home. They lived in opposite directions.

Q. Do you mean to say that he rode home alone?—A. Well, sir, he left my house—

Q. Did you see him mount his horse?—A. I saw him when he went off; yes, sir.

Q. He talked there with you, you say, half an hour after you went back?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the only person you remember having any conversation with him was Captain Johnston?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were any of the Ellises there or about there?—A. Up in the yard, do you mean?

Q. Yes; or in the road?—A. I think the young Ellises were out. I couldn't say for certain, but I think they were out at their store. They keep a store there.

Q. How far from where Miller was?—A. About a hundred yards.

Q. You do not know to this day what subject Captain Johnston was consulting Miller about, either that night or the next Thursday?—A. I do not, sir; they were talking to themselves, and I didn't ask.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did you see old man Ellis when he went home?—A. I saw him start home.

Q. Did he start home before you went into your house, after you left your office to go into your house?—A. He started home as I started off to the house.

Q. When you came back out of your house to talk to Miller, old man Ellis had gone home?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And these Ellis boys, you say, were off at their store?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many persons did you see when you went up to the trial near Miller's house, on that Thursday; you say there were a good many persons there when you got there. Did you go into Miller's house after you got there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many persons did you see in his house when you got there?—A. Well, sir, they were going in and out. I suppose there was two or three in there. The two attorneys was in there.

Q. You say there were parties passing in and out of the house when you got there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. So there were parties in the house while you were there?—A. Yes, sir; all the time I was there.

Q. If there had been any guns leaning up against a log in front of Miller's gate, don't you think you would have seen them?—A. I think so, unless they had been hid under the log.

Q. You say that these parties had pretty much all left there before you left?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You saw no parties go off from there with guns?—A. No, sir.

Q. After you had been to Miller's house for some time, you asked him if he was ready for the trial?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you then go down to the store, or wherever you held the trial-place?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Miller come there and waive the examination?—A. This was down at his house.

Q. He had the parties entered for their appearance at court?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Nothing was said there by Miller about his going off?—A. No, sir; he didn't tell me anything about it.

Q. You had no intimation of his going until you heard of it afterwards?—A. None, sir.

Q. You say after he went away that you met him passing in the neighborhood?—A. Yes, sir; I met him two or three times afterwards.

Q. Does old man Ellis swear?—A. I never heard him swear; I don't think he does.

Q. Has old man Ellis in that community the reputation of a man who lends money and oppresses the poor—does he exercise a vicious influence over the people on account of his money?

(Mr. Lapham objects on the ground that it is wholly inadmissible to inquire into his general reputation.)

Mr. EDEN. I believe Mr. Miller stated Mr. Ellis had an influence over the poor whites, and that it was this influence which would enable him to cause anybody to murder him.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Is Ellis what is commonly known as a money-lender in that community, and that through his money-lending he has acquired and holds an influence over the poor people of that community?—A. Well, sir, he loans money. To say that he holds an influence over all the people in that community—

Q. The question is: Does he wield an influence as a money-lender over the poor people in his community?—A. Over any of them, do you mean, sir?

Q. Yes; by reason of his money-lending.—A. Yes; I must say that I believe he does.

Q. To what extent?—A. Well, I don't think I could say exactly to what extent.

Q. What do you mean by holding an influence over people?—A. By parties who are indebted to him by his holding mortgages on their places for money he has loaned them. Only in that way.

Q. Does he exert his influence to excite these people to vice or outbreak in the community?—A. I don't think so.

Q. Have you ever known of him doing anything of that sort?—A. I never have, sir.

Q. Did you hear on the first day of this difficulty, or at the trial, anything said about politics between Miller and Ellis?

Mr. LAPHAM. You have asked about that in chief, and I have not asked a word about it.

Mr. LAPHAM, (to the witness.) Is not old man Ellis a man who exercises more influence in that community than any man you know of residing there?—A. I do not think it.

Q. Does he not exercise a good deal of influence in that community?—A. I believe he does, sir.

Q. He is a wealthy man, is he not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. He is a positive man, isn't he?—A. Yes, sir; a positive man.

Q. A man who likes to rule—likes to have his way?—A. Well, sir, I don't know as he does more than a great many others.

Q. That may be so, but is he not one of that kind?—A. Yes, sir; he likes to have his way about a good many things.

Q. Now you are conscious of the fact that the men with whom he deals are, to a great extent, under his control?—A. Not the generality of them, sir.

Q. No, but those to whom he loans money?—A. O, they are under obligations to him, sir. There are a great many he loans money to that he has not very much influence over.

Q. Have you any idea of the amount he has loaned out there?—A. No, sir; I have not.

Q. Don't you know that it is quite a large amount?—A. Well, sir, I wouldn't suppose that he loaned out over eight or ten thousand dollars.

Q. What is he estimated to be worth?—A. I do not really know, sir.

Q. Have you never heard it estimated?—A. I have heard it, about twenty thousand dollars, sir.

Q. Is there any other person there of equal wealth—in that immediate neighborhood, I mean?—A. There is within six or eight miles of that.

Q. He is the millionaire of that locality?—A. Yes, sir, he ranks as being.

Q. The wealthiest man in that immediate neighborhood?—A. Yes, sir; in that immediate neighborhood.

Q. And has been so ever since you have known him?—A. Yes, sir; ever since I knew him.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. This influence of Ellis's that you speak of, is it a bad influence over the people?—A. No, sir; I can state further, sir—

(Mr. Lapham objects to the witness making any voluntary statements.)

Q. I ask for an answer. State what you were about to say.—A. Well, sir, I have not employed a physician; he knows a great deal about medicine, and he is a very kind old man to visit the sick, and do all he can in that way.

By Mr. LAPHAM:

Q. Does he administer medicines?—A. Yes, sir; he has given my family medicine.

Q. Has he ever given you any?—A. Yes, sir; he has.

Q. Do you know what it was?—A. I do not, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. He has never killed anybody that you know of, has he?—A. No, sir; I don't think he ever killed anybody, but he has relieved a good many.

J. D. JOHNSON recalled and further examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Question. Were you present at the trial-justice's, Mr. Mulligan, on the day of the difficulty between Miller and young Ellis; and, if so, state what you saw and heard there?—Answer. I think Miller was defending a case, and he said that the case was not gotten up by a respectable party, or something to that effect. And after he got through speaking I think the Ellises and him had some words, and some blows too.

Q. State what you saw after they went out of the house. Did you see what occurred out-doors there; and, if so, state what you saw?—A. I didn't see it when it happened, but I was there a few minutes afterward. I went up and spoke to Miller, asked him if he was badly hurt and he said no, that he had a lick on the side of his head.

Q. Do you know anything about any settlement there that day between Miller and the Ellises about a claim; and, if so, state what you know about it?—A. There was a man by the name of William C. Johnston. He told Miller, "Now, Miller, you acted wrong, and so did the Ellises, and it is better to drop it right here;" and he agreed to do it, and he went back to the Ellises and said Miller had agreed to drop the whole matter, and for them to do the same. They said they wouldn't interfere with him any more.

Q. Did you see Miller when he came back toward the house to the gate of the yard where the trial was?—A. I saw him when he got in the yard, sir.

Q. Did the Ellises, or any part of that crowd, follow him to the yard and try to get in after him?—A. They went up to the little gate, and stopped right there, and went no further.

Q. Did any person keep them out of the yard; and, if so, state what was said and done?—A. William Johnston told them not to go in there and interfere with Miller, and they said they wouldn't.

Q. Did you hear anything said there about a Hamburg affair?—A. Not a word, sir. I never heard it mentioned.

Q. Did you hear old man Ellis say anything to Miller there?—A. No, sir; not a word. He is an old man badly afflicted with palsy; talks very little, and can scarcely walk at all. He is 70 years old. I never heard him say anything in the world.

Q. Does old man Ellis swear?—A. No, sir; he is a strict member of the church, sir.

Q. Did you see him when he went home?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did he go home?—A. He went directly after the fuss. He went down to his steam-mill. William Johnston rode up and says, "Boys, Miller has agreed to drop this matter," and he says, "I don't want you to interfere with him any more." And they said, "All right, we will not interfere with him any more at all."

Q. Was that about all that occurred there that day that you saw?—A. All that I saw, sir.

Q. State what you know about any arrangement for trying a cause up where Miller lived the Thursday week following that affair.—A. Miller, sir, had some cases to defend before Trial-Justice Mulligan, and Miller says, "Now, gentlemen, it is the last time I am going to Stafford's Cross-Roads to attend any trial."

Q. Stafford's Cross-Roads was where this trial occurred?—A. Yes, sir. Miller was the representative there, and Mulligan was the trial-justice. I think Miller had him appointed, if I am not mistaken, and he tried to accommodate him every way he could. And he says, "Mr. Johnston, we will have the next trial at Isler's Cross-Roads," and we all met there.

Q. Who met there?—A. A good many of the neighbors—all of them.

Q. Did you summons parties to attend that trial?—A. I did, sir, summons them myself.

Q. You were acting as constable?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you attended that place on the Thursday following?—A. On that day; yes, sir.

Q. How many persons were there?—A. I suppose there was about—do you mean altogether?

Q. Yes; white and black.—A. I suppose there was about forty-five or fifty, sir.

Q. How many whites were there?—A. I suppose about twenty-five.

Q. How many colored?—A. About the same, sir.

Q. Were you at Miller's house that day?—A. I was, sir.

Q. How many parties did you see at his house?—A. I saw William C. Johnston talking with him, and I saw Colonel Laraicy talking with him.

Q. Who else did you see there?—A. I saw Mr. Frank Warren talking with him.

Q. At his house?—A. Yes, sir; at his house.

Q. Were you in the house yourself?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see parties passing in and out of his house?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time did you get there that day?—A. I got there about nine o'clock in the morning, sir.

Q. How long after you got there before the parties came to this trial?—A. I suppose they came there about half after nine or ten.

Q. Did they come in a body, or one by one?—A. One by one, sir.

Q. Did the parties come there armed with guns?—A. Well, sir, the half of them had their guns.

Q. How many guns did you see there?—A. About three or four guns; that's all I saw.

Q. Were these white or colored men that had the guns?—A. These were the white men; and I saw two or three colored men with muskets in their hands, as if they had been sporting.

Q. These guns that the white men had, what kind of guns were they?—A. Shot-guns.

Q. Did you see any guns piled up against a log in front of Miller's yard?—A. No, sir; they left them in their buggies. I never saw a man with a gun in his hand.

Q. You didn't see any more than three or four guns there?—A. That is all.

Q. And those were fowling-pieces?—A. Yes, sir. Those were men I summoned there myself, as witnesses in the case.

Q. What became of the case that was set for trial there that day?—A. I came out and told some of them that they were going to postpone the case; that they were afraid a row might be got up; and they said if there was anything like that, they would leave.

Q. What was the row that was anticipated about?—A. I don't know, sir. Some of the Miller crowd said they might get up a row, and Mulligan said he would postpone the trial, and I went back and told the white men. Says I, "The trial will be postponed; some have spoken that a row might be got up." And they said if there was anything like that, they would all go home.

Q. What was that trial about?—A. There was two cases; something about a man cutting a woman's arm, and a case of trespass on land; something like that.

Q. Were they colored people?—A. Yes, sir; colored people and a white man.

Q. Was this a colored man or a white man that cut the woman's arm?—A. It was a colored man that cut the black woman's arm.

Q. How many people were there there at that time?—A. I suppose there was twenty-five or thirty. There was a good many knocking around, but not immediately right at the place.

Q. Where was this trial to be held?—A. At Isler's Cross-Roads, sir.

Q. Was there a house there?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far was that from Miller's house?—A. I don't think more than fifty yards, sir. Mulligan said that Miller didn't care to come to the cross-roads, and he said he would try and accommodate him right at his house.

Q. And these parties there went to that trial?—A. Yes, sir; they went to that trial.

Q. Did you hear anything that day about Miller's leaving, or his intention to leave?—A. Not a word.

Q. When did you hear of Miller's leaving; how soon after?—A. I heard of it the next day.

Q. You heard of his leaving the next day?—A. Yes, sir; I heard of his leaving.

Q. Was there anything said there that day about his leaving?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see Miller back in that neighborhood after that, passing about?—A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see him at any political meeting?—A. He was up at a meeting at Bronson, sir.

Q. Did you see him at a political meeting at Lawtonville?—A. No, sir; I don't recollect seeing him there.

Q. Were you at the political meeting at Lawtonville?—A. Yes, sir; yes, sir; he was there at Lawtonville, and at Bronson also. He was at an election at Bronson.

Q. At an election?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that where you attended the election?—A. No, sir; I attended the election at Lawtonville.

Q. How do you know he was at Bronson?—A. He told me himself he was there that day.

Q. You did see him at this political meeting at Lawtonville?—A. Yes.

Q. You were at that political meeting at Lawtonville?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember who spoke there that day?—A. I think Whipper and Wheeler and several others.

Q. Did Miller speak there?—A. I declare I don't know, sir; I just simply seen them there.

Q. About how many people were at that poll?—A. I suppose about one hundred and fifty or two hundred.

Q. Did you see any parties there armed that day?—A. No, sir; I never saw a man armed there that I know of.

Q. You didn't see any parties armed there that day at all?—A. No, sir; none in the world.

Q. Any disturbance or excitement at that meeting?—A. No, sir; none whatever. I didn't stay there the whole day.

Q. How long were you there?—A. I was there until about twelve o'clock or half past twelve.

Q. What time did you go there in the morning?—A. About ten o'clock.

By Mr. LAPHAM :

- Q. What time did that meeting at Lawtonville begin?—A. What time of day, sir?
- Q. Yes.—A. Well, sir, I suppose it commenced about half after eleven, or something like that. I hadn't any time-piece at all.
- Q. Don't you know that it was called for twelve, and that it did not begin until long after that?—A. I do not know; I had no time-piece with me.
- Q. You have stated that you left there about twelve o'clock, have you not?—A. Yes, sir; as near as I can guess at it.
- Q. And were not there again that day?—A. No, sir; no more that day.
- Q. Now, can you give the language that Miller used in his summing up before Mr. Mulligan, the words he used?—A. Well, I couldn't give the exact words, sir.
- Q. Can you give the words which Ellis used in answer to it? Didn't Ellis interrupt him when he had made an assertion there?—A. Ellis said nothing, only commenced getting out of his seat, and the trial-justice ordered him to keep his seat.
- Q. Did not young Ellis say anything?—A. I did not hear him say anything.
- Q. You did not hear any request or demand that Miller should withdraw his charge?—A. No, sir; I did not.
- Q. Where have you been since you were examined here the other night?—A. I have been right here in this city.
- Q. What have you been waiting here for?
- The CHAIRMAN, I told him to remain.
- Mr. LAPHAM, (to the chairman.) Your answer defeats the object I had in view.
- Q. The men were discharged at that trial, were they not?—A. Yes, sir; they were discharged.
- Q. Did you go out with the people when they left the court-room?—A. No, sir; I remained in the house with the trial-justice.
- Q. Most of them went out, did they not?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Miller went out?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Where did you next see Miller?—A. I saw him, as I stated, in Mulligan's yard.
- Q. You did not say that before.—A. I think I did.
- Q. The next you saw of him he was in Mulligan's yard?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Who was with him?—A. William C. Johnston was in there with him.
- Q. Talking with him?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Privately?—A. Well, not very privately, sir.
- Q. You didn't hear all that was said, did you?—A. At that time I did, sir, because Mr. Mulligan, the trial-justice, said there looked like a row in the yard, and for me to go and stop it.
- Q. Did you hear what was said between Captain Johnston and Miller?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. The whole of it?—A. Well, I heard them till they got through with the talk.
- Q. Did you not hear him request Miller not to prosecute Ellis for striking him?—A. No, sir; I did not.
- Q. You didn't hear anything said about the next Thursday, did you?—A. No, sir.
- Q. You didn't hear Miller say to Johnston that he would let him know the next Thursday?—A. No, sir; I didn't hear that.
- Q. You did not hear Miller say that he would prosecute him?—A. That he would?
- Q. Yes.—A. No, sir.
- Q. What the occurrence was out there in the street you don't know?—A. No, sir; I do not know.
- Q. How many came up there to Mulligan's gate?—A. Well, sir, there was a good many that was not at the first—
- Q. How many came up there to Mulligan's gate?—A. I suppose there was some ten or fifteen of them.
- Q. Can you name them?—A. I can name a few of them.
- Q. Name those you can remember.—A. There was myself, Mr. Mulligan—
- Q. You did not go there with these men. Mulligan had sent you. I wanted to know who sent you there before you went?—A. There was William C. Johnston, and I think a couple of the Ellis boys was there. And a good many colored folks was there.
- Q. Which of the Ellis boys?—A. There is one small boy—
- Q. Give their names.—A. I think, sir, there is one Heber Ellis who was there.
- Q. Do you know whether the one that Miller claims struck him was there?—A. Yes, sir; he was there.
- Q. Where do you say the old man went?—A. The old man went home in his buggy.
- Q. What time did he go?—A. Well, after I went in the yard and the fuss was stopped, I came back to the gate of the house, and he had his horse in his buggy, and he rode down to his mill and told his sons to come home.
- Q. You say Mulligan told you to go over there; that he was afraid there was a fuss, and you went for that purpose?—A. Yes, sir.
- Q. Who was in the yard when you got there?—A. Well, there was colored people and Miller, and William C. Johnston was talking to him.

Q. Where was Mulligan when he said it looked like a fuss and requested you to go over there?—A. I and him was in the court-house.

Q. He had not been to his house yet?—A. No, sir.

Q. You say he made that request of you before he went to his house?—A. Yes, sir; but he followed me right on.

Q. Who was in the yard when you got there?—A. William C. Johnston, sir, was in the yard.

Q. Who else?—A. And three or four colored people.

Q. Was that all?—A. That was all that was in the yard. Mr. Johnston told them to stay out of the yard.

Q. Did you go in the yard?—A. I did, sir.

Q. Where did Mulligan go?—A. He went right in to Miller and got a towel or something to wipe his head off, and washed it.

Q. Where did he get the towel?—A. Out of his house.

Q. Did he get some water also?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And washed his head?—A. Yes, sir; and washed his head.

Q. Where was Mr. Johnston during this time?—A. Mr. Johnston, he was talking there with Miller, sir.

Q. What were you doing?—A. I was standing by looking at them.

Q. Were you not keeping these people from coming in at the gate?—A. They didn't try to come in.

Q. Weren't you standing there to keep them from coming in?—A. They didn't try to come in.

Q. Weren't you at the gate to guard it?—A. No, sir; for when I got there the fuss was over.

Q. What did you do after you went in the yard?—A. I went up to Miller and asked him if he was badly hurt.

Q. What did he say?—A. He told me he had one pretty severe lick.

Q. Did he say where?—A. It was on his head; he showed it to me.

Q. Which side of the head?—A. I declare, sir, I don't know that, but I think it was rather on the left side.

Q. When was it that Miller said he would not come back there and try this other case?—A. He said it right there.

Q. After this fracas?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you sure that it was that night he said it?—A. I am sure it was that evening that he said it.

Q. Before he went home?—A. Before he went home.

Q. Don't you know it was the next day that he made that arrangement with Mulligan?—A. No, sir. He said it was the last time he would come to Stafford's Cross-Roads.

Q. But he didn't make any arrangement about that other case that night, did he?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know when that arrangement was made?—A. No, sir; I do not; only the orders I got from Mr. Mulligan.

Q. The Thursday following you got to Miller's before the bulk of the people came there, did you not?—A. Before the bulk of them.

Q. Where were you there?—A. I was right there at the cross-roads.

Q. Did you not go in the house?—A. I was sometimes in the house and sometimes at the cross-roads.

Q. Where were you most of the time?—A. Most of the time I was at the cross-roads.

Q. You say some of these people who came there had arms?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was there arranged that there should be no examination for fear there might be a fuss, and the men waived an examination and gave bail, didn't they?—A. Mr. Mulligan came to me and told me, says he, Johnson—

Q. Answer the question. Was it not there arranged that there should be no examination, and that the parties waived an examination and gave bail?—A. All I heard, sir, was that Mr. Mulligan said he had postponed the whole affair.

Q. You have already said that, but don't you know that the parties waived an examination and gave bail?—A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Why did Mulligan postpone the case; because he was afraid of trouble, was he not?—A. No, sir; he was not afraid of trouble. I didn't hear any fuss going on.

Q. You have said that it was stated there that they were apprehensive there would be trouble?—A. Some parties said there would be a fuss, and Mulligan said he would postpone the trial.

Q. And that was the reason of his postponing it, as you understood it. Miller, you say, left there the next day?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And has never been back there since to live?—A. No, sir.

Q. Left his house empty?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long did it stand unoccupied?—A. Well, I think, about a week ago it was occupied for the first time.

Q. It stood vacant from the time he left it until about a week ago?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did Miller leave there?—A. Well, sir, I can't recollect.

Q. About when; what month was it?—A. I couldn't tell you, sir. It seems like it has been three months ago since it happened. The man that owns it built another house alongside of it that he lives in.

By the CHAIRMAN :

Q. Did Miller own this house that he lived in?—A. No, sir.

Q. You do not know whether Miller had any arrangement for keeping that house any longer than the time he occupied it or not, do you?—A. No, sir.

Q. You do not know whether he paid any rent for it after the time he left?—A. I do not, sir.
